JOHN ADAMS TO ABIGAIL ADAMS[1]

[Extract] Philadelphia Saturday Septr. 14. 1776

Yesterday Morning I returned with Dr. F. [Benjamin Franklin] and Mr. R. [Edward Rutledge] from Staten Island where We met L[ord] H[owe] and had about three Hours Conversation with him. The Result of this Interview, will do no disservice to Us. It is now plain that his L[ordshi]p has no Power, but what is given him in the Act of P[arliament]. His Commission authorises him to grant Pardons upon Submission, and to converse, confer, consult and advise with such Persons as he may think proper, upon American Grievances, upon the Instructions to Governors and the Acts of Parliament, and if any Errors should be found to have crept in, his Majesty and the Ministry were willing they should be rectified.

WILLING, MORRIS & CO. TO WILLIAM BINGHAM, MARTINIQUE[1]

Sir, Philada Septr 14th 1776

Your several favours of the 2nd, 15th & 26th August have come duely to hand, the last by the Reprisal Capt. Wickes who arrived here Yesterday without having taken any more Prizes or met with any Remarkable occurrence. We shall reply to the Contents of your letters in the order they stand or at least to such parts as require an answer —

The observations you make on the different modes of Conducting a Commerce between Europe & this Continent through the Islands of Martinico & St Lucia are very proper, they are what have frequently occurred to us, but do not remove the only difficulty we have to encounter, which is the establishing proper Funds in Europe as a foundation to Trade on. Our Produce is bulky & little Value in it requires large Ships for the Transportation, large Ships are much exposed to Capture and indeed we have not many of them left, so that, you see us encircled with difficultys in this respect, for this reason & for this reason chiefly we like the Idea of Your agreeing with some Good French House in the Island to Import certain quantitys of Goods as for his own Account to be delivered over to you on arrival at a Certain advance. You do not mention what advance wou'd be expected, which we are sorry for as that is a material point, however We advise that you immediately make such a bargain on the best terms in your power, with some House of Established good Reputation for honorable & punctual dealing, you may agree with them to import in this way the Value of Two Thousand pounds Sterling to be wrote for immediately and sent out with all possible expedition. If they can be shipped from France so as to be out with you in all the Month of Decr & January we wou'd wish nearly the whole Amount to Consist of Woolen Goods fit for Winter Wear, Blankets, Cloths chiefly Coarse, Coatings, Flannells, Worsted & Yarn Stockings some Good Silk Stockings, Threads, Pins, Needles, Sewing Silk, Mohair Twist & Buttons, but if they are to arrive later you must order an assortment of Sail Cloth, Coarse & fine linens, sheetings &ca We will keep shipping to you the Produce of this Country to enable Punctual payment, but we think you had best make it a part of your bargain that You shall have liberty to Ship from Martinico to old France any Tobacco or Indigo we send you on your own Account & they to Receive the Nt pceeds there in payment for the Goods & then if you dont like the prices offered you in Martinico you can ship your Goods to a second Market – Monsr Begorrats Sloop is not yet arrived, when she comes in you may depend on a faithfull attention to his orders & interest[2] and that the same will be extended to every Concern put under our care and as you think it might facilitate or promote these Consignments to take a Concern with them occasionally We agree that you shou'd interest us jointly with yourself any part you may think proper & Prudent in such Vessells & Cargoes as come to our Address you holding one half we the other half of whatever share you thus adopt.

We observe you mention several Vessels at St Lucia that might be Chartered or bought upon Good Terms & we have no objection to your buying or Chartering some of them provided You can get Salt or Mollasses to load them with; Cargoes of those Articles Cost but little Money & will sell for a great deal therefore You may execute of this plan as much as You think proper for our joint Accounts or take in some more partners so as to reduce the risque to thirds or fourths just as you like best & use such precautions as you think most likely to bring them safe here, and as you will know from France whether Insurances can be made there or not, you can give orders for Insurance if you find it can be obtained on reasonable terms, but let it be made for the whole Voyage & not for so many Leagues clear of the Island & so many clear of this Coast as mentioned in your letter, which woud Subject us to many perplexing disputes, you woud pay the premm & never know whether you were Insured or not – We (say R M the writer hereof) does not see any impropriety in your attending to Commercial matters as that will not prevent your attending carefully & assiduously to the more Important matters committed to your charge, but at the same time we dont think it will be much to your advantage to seek extensive Connections as most of the Trade from this Continent must be Carried on in Small Vessells and the Masters chiefly insist on the Consignments or they will not go the Voyages, and we shall make a point now that you are safe arrived & well established to keep you well supplyed with Goods both on Publick & Private Account, however do herein as you think proper We advise you to write to Mr John Dorsius at Charles Town, So Carolina, & to the Honble Archibald Bullock Esqr President of Georgia, informing them of your establishment at Martinico & offering them your assistance in the Sale of Rice, Indigo &c and in procuring for them Powder, Arms & such other Articles as they may want in Return. Mr Bullock is President of Georgia & not a Merchant but he may recommend You to their Merchts & I will get the Delegates to write him on the Subject. Mr Dorsius is well established at Charles Town & doing much business there. You may also write Messrs

Smith & Hughes Merchts at Edenton No Carolina & to Colo. Benjn Harrison of Berkely, Charles City County Virginia. We like your plan of a Voyage to Dantzig but its too soon for the execution of it

We shall send the Maccaliao Snuff forward to Colo Harrison who will think himself much obliged to you for it We have letters from Mr Bealle who arrived at Bourdeaux the 6th June but finding it impracticable to transact his business there, he had gone for Holland where he expected to Succeed, but we dont yet know whether he will come out to St. Eustatia or your Island, it is most likely to the latter as we immagine he must land his Dutch Goods in France & Reship them from thence he will bring his whole value in the one single article therefore you must only Contrive to get it here in the best manner you can at present this place, Virginia & Occracock Inlet No Carolina are the safest places but theres no saying how long they may remain so, the best way will be to divide it amongst some good fast sailing small or armed Vessells but if he arrives whilst this Sloop Independence Capt [John] Young is with you, We think it so good a Conveyance that we shoud be for risquing the whole or greatest part by her You & Mr Bealle must lay your heads together and Contrive to send it safe one way or other & Remember that you shall have other Armed Vessells sent to your address besides this Sloop.

Capt Wickes has not yet landed the Goods but we doubt not they will answer very well we shall make the most of them & hope very soon to transmit You a pleasing account Sales – It now Remains that we enable you to pay for them as speedily as possible and we shall also attend most Carefully to this Circumstance by shipping you Goods for that purpose We wou'd gladly have sent some by this Conveyance but the Sloop is full & the Goods belong to the Publick therefore we must wait another Opportunity, indeed we mean to seek out for a Sloop that will answer to the papers you have sent and if we can meet one will load her immediately but shou'd that not happen we shall get others and shall ship you some Tobacco as well as flour. we will also Contrive if we can to send You some Rice & Indigo from Carolina or Georgia

You will doubtless have learned that West India property is now liable to Confiscation as well as British Consequently your plan in that respect will not do, so long as the French remain in Peace it is probable that French Papers may prove the best Cover, especially in your Seas. You ask what Articles are most in demand here or what are likely to be most so, to which we may safely reply that every thing is wanted, it is hardly possible to go amiss. However Woolens will undoubtedly yield the greatest Proffit if they can possibly be got here before the Winter is over Linens also Continue in full demand notwithstanding a most glorious Crop of Flax was gathered the last Season, but we have not Weavers & Manufacturers to Work it up fast enough, We think Hosiery of every kind will be exceedingly wanted, Cotton & Wool Cards, Pins, Needles, Ravens Duck or other Cloth fit for Tents, Muskets & Powder must Continue in demand whilst the Warr lasts & so indeed must every kind of European Manufactures, Medicines are much called for, West India Produce is dear, Mallasses upwards of 4/ pGalln Sugars 60/ to 90/ p Ct Rum 6/ to 10/ pGalln In short you may keep Shipping us Goods as you meet with good Conveyances but not too much Value at a time especially in unarmed Vessells.

The Sloop Independence by which this goes We deem an exceeding good Conveyance & shou'd have no objection to your Shipping to the Value of fifteen hundred or Two Thousand pounds by her especially as you expect Goods to be plenty & Cheap by the time she will be with you, But as we have proposed a good deal of bussiness to you & pointed out Several purchases to be made you will naturally say where are the Funds & these we must try to establish for you and will do it with all possible expedition. We wish you wou'd immediately either Charter or buy a good fast sailing Sloop or Schooner and dispatch her for Edenton in North Carolina Consigned to Messrs Hewes & Smith Merchts there with some Salt, Mollasses, a few Sugars, alittle Rum, Dry Goods an assortment of any or all these Articles to the Value of five or Six hundred Pounds & they will immediately send her back to you with a Cargo of Fine Tobacco for we have bought a Considerable quantity which now lies there waiting for Vessells to carry it away Edenton is up Occracock Inlet. As We understand Monsr Begorrats Sloop is afine Vessel ready Armed and that he intends she shall be sold, we may probably buy her unless she goes too high which it is very likely may be the case as such Vessells are much wanted and we shall give her afair Chance at Public Vendue, but if we buy her our present View is to send her from hence to Carolina & thence to You with Rice & Indigo by which means we can make up a very valuable Cargo and, of Course lodge Funds for the several purposes we have pointed out to you —

We like your Idea of Importing Medicines from the Mediterranian and wish you wou'd immediately write to Mr Estevan Cathalan Mercht at Marseilles probably you know him he is a most Respectable Mercht inform him of your establishment at Martinique and tell him your Connection with us indeed we will if possible inclose you a letter for him p this Convey and request him to ship you soon as possible the Value five hundred pounds Sterling in an assortment of Medicines of which we will enclose a list if we can get it in time, Peruvian Bark is exceedingly wanted but Cadiz is the best place to get that Article from however you must Contrive in the best manner you can to procure it & always write for Medicines of the very best quality You will inform Mr Cathalan that you will be constantly receiving remittances from hence & that you will very speedily remit him the Cost of whatever you order from him – Messrs Saml & J. H. Delap of Bourdeaux have offered us Credit to the Extent of £ 4 or £ 5000 Stg or more if we engage they shall not be disapointed of remittances therefore We have requested them to Credit you to the Extent of Two Thousand Pounds Sterling. And you may immediately write to them for that Value in an assortment of such articles as you think from the Course of these & other advices will answer best to tranship from Martinico hither, press them to dispatch the Goods quick as possible and engage for the remittances being made within twelve Months probably they may go to hand in much less time, enclosed you have an open letter to them on this Subject We mean these Goods on your & our joint Account, but they will probably Send you others for us beside which you'l take proper Care off. We have lately recd a Cargo of Sail Cloth &c from Mr Andw Limozin of Havre deGrace who used us extreamly Well & is justly entitled to a preference of bussiness in that place write to him to Ship you the value of £ 1000 Stg in Woolens immediately he can readily get them and you will also find an open letter to him, with a Sealed one, these Goods also to be on your & our joint Account, but he may probably have others to send for us which you'l take care off.

Mr John Ross of this City is now in Europe and will ship out Goods by various ways for us, and our Thos Morris is with Mr Deane at Paris they may probably do the same. We depend on Your care in forwarding & Receiving any Goods that may come for us, and as this letter is now Spun out to a pretty good length we will close it altho we shall probably write You another by this Conveyance being Sir [&c.]

Declaration of John Douglass[1]

September 14th 1776 – 8 o'Clock in the Morning Comeing in the Mole of St Nicholas, I, John Douglass, Commander of the Schooner Lady Caroline, come from Philadelphia Loaded with Flour, Kegs of Biscuit, Fish, Pork, Cheese, Gammons &c &c

I declare I was at Five o'Clock in the Morning within Five Miles of the Land & North of the Point of St Nichola Mole in the Island of St Domingo. I have been chased by one English Frigate & a Sloop, and them two pursued me fireing a great many Shot at me both Nine Pounders & Swivels, til the Sloop came to the distance of one Mile from the Entry of the Port of St Nicholas Mole; where I saw a French Frigate with her Colours flying and she firing several Shot but it being Calm she could not get out of the Harbour, but I saw her send a Sloop out of Sixteen Guns, with two of her Barges, towing ahead the French Frigate, having part of her Sails unbent and was Setting up her Main Rigging, Main Top Mast and Main Top Gallant Mast was also down. And she was getting ready as fast as possible to come out, the Sloop not minding the Shot stil kept her Pursuit not careing for the little distance I was from the Land, then I was oblig'd to abandon my Vessel with my People and I came into the Mole for protection And all the Inhabitants both ashore and the Shipping came running down to the Shore, they haveing seen the Event, I was sure I was near enough to the Land not to be Molest'd in the least, but to go in the Harbour Peaceably

in the Mole of St Nicholas

WILLIAM WHIPPLE TO JOSIAH BARTLETT[1]

[Extract] Portsmouth 15th Sepr 1776

. . . it seems to be Settled that our Troops have quitted Long Island, the consequence I fear will be, that they must also Evacuate [New] York I have had a hint that Congress have directed Genl Washington not to destroy that City if he shod be obliged to leave it. is this right why shod we be so careful to furnish the Enemy with convenient Winter Quarters? it appears to me that the consequence will be that the States will be put to the Expence of five if not ten times, the value of that Cursed City which ought to have been destroyed long ago

It seems that are many Complaints about the Maritime Courts the Court here has acquited a vessel that ought to be condemn'd,[2] & other Courts condemn vessels that ought to be acquited, Mr [Jacob] Sheaf has had a ship condemn'd at Providence as British Property, she was bound from the west Indies for London, his property was transfer'd to prevent her being seiz'd by British ships, I really think his case hard he intends to petition Congress. another ship belonging to Capt [Tobias] Lear of this town under the same Circumstances is to be try'd at Salem to morrow[3] if this ship shod be condemn'd the Owners of her will also apply to Congress so it's probable you'll have business enough of this sort on your hands

And whereas you have Received a Commission, authorising you to make Captures as aforesaid, and a sett of Instructions have been Deliverd You for Regulating your Conduct in that matter, these Instructions you are hereby Directed Diligently to Attend to, and if you are fortunate as to make any Captures, you are to Order them to make the first Safe Harbour within the united States of America. JOSEPH GREENLEAF TO ROBERT TREAT PAINE[1]

[Extract]

Dr Sr Boston sepr 15th 1776

Mr Austin is kind eno' to let me know that he is just going to set out for Philadelphia I thought I would imbrace the opportunity to let you know That we & our Ta[u]nton friends are all well — Capt Manley's appeal from a Judgment of a maritime court to The Congress is The occasion of Mr Austin's Journey — Altho' The capture of the Vessell[2] with Stolen good[s] belonging to several Merchants here is a lucky affair upon the whole, yet The trouble & expence attending the tryals at Portsmouth & Phila will settle a great loss upon the owners of the goods even Tho' They should be restored to them — It was generous in them to offer Manly £1000 Sterling after they were cleared by the Jury — I cannot see upon what principle the Jury could have condemned them. They were not the property of the enemy, nor treasure trove, but stolen goods: & it is every mans duty to detest Thieves. —

Our coast is infested with several Frigates & Cutters who frequently take our vessells & retake our prizes, Is it impossible to equip our Ships of War lately built ? If they are not soon at sea this town will be [i]n a distressed Condition, we shall not be supplyed with fuel for the approaching winter. —

Dear General, Isle La Motte September 15th 1776. –

Your Favour of the 12th Instant was delivered me last Night by Ensign [Clemens] Botsford, who narrowly escaped being lost in his Passage down and was obliged to throw overboard three Barrels of Provision to lighten the Batteau. I am Happy to find, you approve of my returning from the Isle aux Tétes, our Present Situation is five Miles to the Southward of Point aux Fire and two Miles to the Southward of the North End of Isle La Motte, at a Part of the Island where the Lake is one and a half to two Miles Over, to the Southward of us there is no Part of the Lake less than two Miles over and entirely out of the Reach of any Batteries that can Possibly be erected by the Enemy of whose Naval Force I have been able to procure no other Intelligence, than from a Deserter one Thomas Day whom I have sentyou by Ensign Botsford with his examination; which is inclosed.[2] I have heard nothing from Lieutenant [Benjamin] Whitcomb, or Ensign [Thomas] MCoy since they left the Isle aux Noix, from which a Man returned from each Party, who agree that there is about one thousand Men encamped There, they saw no WaterCraft except Batteaux.

I have dispatched a Frenchman to St Johns, for Intelligence, whom I found in the Bay of Missisque, he has promised to return in four Days with Intelligence If I hear nothing from St Johns, soon, I design makeing a Remove to the Island Valcouer untill joined by the Three Gallies. There is a Good Harbour and if the Enemy venture up the Lake it will be impossible for them to take advantage of our Situation, if we should succeed on our Attack onthem it will be impossible for any of them to Escape, if we are worsted our Retreat is open and Free, in Case of Wind which generally blows Fresh at this Season ourCraft will make good Weather, when their Batteaux cannot keep the Lake.

I am glad to hear General Waterbury has taken Charge of the Gallies I make no Doubt they will soon be compleated my best Pilot I sent up by Major [David] Greer.

I requested General Schuyler tosendfor Four Captains for the Gallies, since which I have appointed only two, at that Time Three Gallies were nearly finished and four others ordered to be put on the Stocks, which still left a Vacancy for one Captain, Captain [Seth] Warner is one of the Four which was requested: one of the others I wish sent for the Royal-Savage, the third for the Gally on the Stocks and the Fourth for one of the Others ordered to be built, which ought to be put on the Stocks long ere this, The greatest part of the Timber was cut for the four la[s]t Gallies before I left Skeensborough, and as the Carpenters and Materials are procured, will it not be Prudence, and Oeconomy to have them compleated. –

In my Last I wrote you we were Victualed to the 20th Instant. For that Calculation I computed ten Barrels of Pork and twenty of Flour left at Crown Point, which I ordered to be sent down in the last Gondola, the Order was neglected and the Provision left behind so that the Supply sent-now will Victual us no longer than the 26th [sic] Instant, unless supplied by th[e] Inhabitants on the Lake of which there is little Prospect. Cannot a Frenchman or two, who is acquainted in Canada and can be depended upon be sent me, with the Tobacco I keep the two small Schooners continually cruizing above and below us. The Countersign is never given until four O'Clock, two Guard Boats are posted every Night two Miles below us, at a proper Distance to discover the Approach of the Enemy, another Boat goes the Rounds every two Hours all Night every Ship keeps half their Men constantly on Deck under Arms, and Matches lighted, it will be impossible for the Enemy to surprise us.

I am greatly obliged to you for the Friendly Notice you have taken of me in your Public Letter, which I make no Doubt will have the desired Effect.

I am surprized you have received no particular Accounts of the Battle on long Island, the severe Check the Enemy have met with will doubtless Dispirit them greatly and will I hope prove a happy prelude to our future Success, I hope you will soonhave the Particulars of the Affair. The Act of Independence, I willsend, agreeable to your Direction I am with Sentiments of Respect and Esteem [&c.]

JOURNAL OF BARTHOLOMEW JAMES[1]

[September 15, 1776][2]

The 23rd [sic], at six in the morning, we weighed in company with the former ships, and anchored a little below Blackwell's Island on the York side, about fifty yards from the enemy's intrenchments, to which place the whole body as above immediately moved, frequently making signs and calling to us to come on shore. We continued without firing at each other till eleven o'clock, when the first division of flat boats appeared, coming down Bushwick Creek, having on board four thousand five hundred men under the command of General Howe. As soon as the boats arrived within fifty yards of the ships, the signal was made from the Phoenix to begin the attack on the enemy's lines.

It is hardly possible to conceive what a tremendous fire was kept up by those five ships for fifty-nine minutes, in which time we fired away, in the Orpheus alone, five thousand three hundred and seventy-six pounds of powder. The first broadside made a considerable breach in their works, and the enemy fled on all sides, confused and calling for quarter, while the army landed, but, as usual, did not pursue the victory, though the rebels in general had left their arms in the intrenchment. The havock was by no means so great as it would have been had we not been obliged to cease firing on the landing of the troops; however, the ground in some places was filled with the slain, and numbers got off with the loss of arms, &c.

As soon as the firing ceased from the ships I was sent in the barge to tow on shore the flat boats, when curiosity led me to follow the army through the works, where I saw a Hessian sever a rebel's head from his body and clap it on a pole in the intrenchments. While I was amusing myself with these sights, and picking up some curious trifles, several volleys of musketry was fired from a boat belonging to the Orpheus at us, who had, in rowing along shore, taken us for rebels, as I had on a white linen jacket which I wore at my quarters, and which was all colours at this time with powder and dirt. As I knew the boat, I made signs of friendship, but all in vain; and I was obliged to throw away my little affairs and take to my heels, as the enemy had done before, amidst a constant fire from the boat, who fortunately only wounded one man slightly in the leg. On my arrival on board I found the second lieutenant amusing the captain with an account of his attack on a body of rebels, which I gave him to understand was myself and the barge's crew, by which I had lost some valuable swords and little trifles, which in the precipitate retreat before his arms I had left behind me. Captain [Charles] Hudson permitted me to go again on shore with the above lieutenant, but all our little matters were taken, and we procured only nine drums and some fusees, one of which, being very handsome, I took from the hands of a rebel officer who lay dead in the field . . .

Mr. Barton leaving me by accident on shore, I rambled into the woods with one of the midshipmen of the Phoenix, who had with him the gunner and seven men. On our entrance into an orchard we took a rebel prisoner who had lain concealed there for some time. From this man we learned there had been a skirmish in the woods with the rebels and a body of the Hessians, and that the former was dispersed all round the woods. Having consulted each other on the consequences of advancing further from the ships, and pleased in some measure with the success of taking the above man, we determined to go in quest of some more, and shortly after heard several voices in an orchard at the end of the wood, on which we assembled with our muskets presented to the gate, and levelling at some men we saw in the grass, were about to fire, when up start two or three hundred Hessians, with flaming large brass caps on, and with charged bayonets advanced rapidly towards us. The sudden unexpected surprise of such a visit alarmed us prodigiously, and we made signs of being friends, which had little or no effect in our favour, as on their coming close to us they knocked us down with their muskets, frequently using the word "rebel," for which they really took us. In vain I assured them with signs that we were part of the British navy, and pointed to my white cuff, having changed my clothes on going on board, that I might not a second time be taken for an American. But I was much surprised, and in fact at a loss how to act, when they pointed at a rebel officer who lay there with a leg shot off, who had on the very exact uniform of a midshipman, which having explained to each other, they again beat us unmercifully, and would undoubtedly have put their bayonets through us had not General [Robert] Pigot, who commanded that party, and who knew me when in the Chatham, have come to our relief, when they made a thousand ridiculous apologies for their treatment, and we returned to our ships, in need of both cook and doctor, and totally weary of our expedition.

Journal of Ambrose Serle[1]

[On board H.M.S. Eagle] Sunday, 15th. Septr.

This Morning about 7 o'Clock, the Renown of 50 Guns, Capt. [Francis] Banks, the Repulse of 32 Guns, Capt. [Henry] Davis, & the Pearl of 32 Guns, Capt. [Thomas] Wilkinson, with the Schooner [Tryal], Lieut. [Lancelot] Brown [Jr.], sailed up the North River. The Morning was fine, the Tide flowed, and there was a fresh Breeze. The Rebels began their Canonade as furiously as they could, but apparently with very little Effect, as their Guns were but poorly served. The Ships, as these were the grand Batteries of the Enemy, returned a heavy Fire, and struck the Walls of the Batteries and the Sods of Earth, which the Rebels had raised, very frequently. What other Damage our People did them, we as yet know not; but, 'tis observed, that, except for beating down particular Structures, or clearing the Way for other operations, Cannon have but a very small or precarious Effect. The great Business is always accomplished by the minor Implements of War.

About a Quarter before 9, the Ships came to an Anchor in the North River, in view of the Fleet, at about 4 or 5 Miles Distance above it, and beyond the principal Works of the Enemy.

A Transport, during the Affair upon the North River, went up the East River & joined the other Ships, almost without Molestation.

The whole Scene was awful & grand; I might say, beautiful, but for the melancholy Seriousness which must attend every Circumstance, where the Lives of Men, even the basest Malefactors, are at Stake. The Hills, the Woods, the River, the Town, the Ships, and Pillars of Smoke, all heightened by a most clear & delightful morning, furnished the finest Landschape that either art and nature combined could draw, or the Imagination conceive.

After this affair had subsided for a little while, a most tremendous Discharge of Cannon from the Ships began (as was concerted) in the East River, in order to cover the Landing of the Troops upon New York Island. So terrible and so incessant a Roar of Guns few even in the Army & Navy had ever heard before. Above 70 large Pieces of Cannon were in Play, together with Swivels & small arms from the Ships, while the Batteries added to the uproar upon the Land. The Rebels were apparently frightened away by the horrid Din, and deserted the Town & all their Works in the utmost Precipitation. The King's Forces took Possession of the Place, incredible as it may seem, without the Loss of a Man. Nothing could equal the Expressions of Joy shewn by the Inhabitants, upon the arrival of the King's officers among them. They even carried some of them upon their Shoulders about the Streets, and behaved in all respects, Women as well as Men, like overjoyed Bedlamites. One thing is worth remarking; a Woman pulled down the Rebel Standard upon the Fort, and a Woman hoisted up in its Stead His Majesty's Flat, after trampling the other under Foot with the most contemptuous Indignation. I first espied both Circumstances from the Ship, and could not help paying the first Congratulations to Lord H[owe]. upon the Occasion. The Spirit and Activity of the Troops & Seamen were unequalled: Every man pressed to be foremost, consistent with Order, and to court Distinction. The dastardly Behaviour of the Rebels, on the other Hand; sinks below Remark. The Ground, where our People landed, was far from being advantageous; the Tide rapid; the Current unequal; the Shore shallow; and themselves obliged to march up on Ground, where these Poltroons had been at Work to entrench themselves for several months. Providentially, the Wind coming in with a fine Breeze from the S.W., wch it had not done before since we have been here, and wch was the most favorable Circumstance our People could have desired, enabled the Boats to carry over the Forces almost in a Direct Line, and return in like manner for the second Division, notwithstanding the Rapidity of the Current. Thus this Town and its Environs, wch these blustering Gentlemen had taken such wonderful Pains to fortify, were given up in two or three Hours without any Defence, or the least appearance of a manly Resistance.

In the Evening the Admiral [Howe] ordered up the Mercury of 24, and the Fowey of 20 Guns, to lie close to the Town, to prevent the Transport Boats from going on Shore & plundering, wch many of them appeared very ready to do.

Diary of Samuel Richards[1]

[New York, September 14 and 15]

On the evening of the 14th the greatest part of the troops marched out and took post on the bank of the East river just below Kip's Bay — about three miles from the city. Myself being one of the body — we were posted behind a slight entrenchment recently thrown up, opposite and near which lay five ships. on the 15th as the morning advanced we saw the road opposite to us — the sound not being two miles wide at that place — filled with a dense column of the enemy moving down to the waters edge and embarking on board flat boats. knowing their object we prepared to receive them.

As soon as they began their approach — the ships opened a tremendous fire upon us. the column of boats on leaving the shore proceeded directly towards us; when arriving about half way across the sound they turned their course and proceeded to Kip's bay — about three quarters of a mile above us — where they landed: their landing there being unexpected they met with no opposition: the firing from the ships being continued — our slight embankment being hastily thrown up — was fast tumbling away by the enemy's shott. Our troops left their post in disorder, and before being rallied the enemy had completely formed in the road on the adjoining hill. our regiment with some others being ordered on the Bloomingdale road and to march towards Kingsbridge

Memoirs of Major General William Heath[1]

[New York, September] 15th – About noon, the British landed at Kepp's Bay. They met with but small resistance, and pushed towards the city, of which they took possession in the afternoon. They availed themselves of some cannon and stores; but their booty was not very great. Here the Americans, we are sorry to say, did not behave well; and here it was, as fame hath said, that Gen. Washington threw his hat on the ground, and exclaimed, "Are these the men with which I am to defend America?" But several things may have weight here; — the wounds received on Long-Island were yet bleeding; and the officers, if not the men, knew that the city was not to be defended. Maj. [John] Chapman was killed, and Brig. Maj. [John P.] Wyllys was taken prisoner. A few others were killed, wounded, and taken prisoners. The Americans retreated up the island; and some few, who could not get out of the city that way, escaped in boats over to Paulus Hook, across the river. The house in the fort at Horn's Hook, was set on fire by a shell, and burnt down. The fort was afterwards abandoned.

Journal of Captain Henry Duncan, R.N.[1]

[On board H. M. S. Eagle, off New York City]

15th September, Sunday. – Between six and seven this morning, made the signal for the Renown, Repulse, and Pearl to get under way, which signal they immediately obeyed. About seven o'clock, or a little after, the batteries in the town and all along that shore began to fire, as well as that at Paulus Hook; the ships returned the fire very smartly, and proceeded up the North River six or eight miles and anchored in our sight under the high land of Holbeck. At the time they got under way the transport that ran on shore last night got under way, and run up the East River, scarcely noticed, as the rebels' attention was so much taken up with the men-of-war. When the ships of war anchored, and for some time before, there were no guns fired at them. A little after eleven a most furious cannonade was heard up the East River. It appeared from our mastheads to be from the men-of-war. It continued about an hour. The admiral went on shore, and returned about two o'clock, and informed us of our army being on York Island. They landed in Kipp's Bay, about three miles above the town up the East River, under the cannon of the ships. Soon after dinner I went in a boat and pulled towards York. A flag of truce was hoisted in the town when I put off from the ship, but was hauled down soon after I put off. On approaching the town there appeared to be a rabble on the walls. Ordered the boat to push on shore. At the landing-place I was met by the mob, who gave me three cheers, took me on their shoulders, carried me to the Governor's Fort, put me under the English colours now hoisted, and again gave me three cheers, which they frequently repeated, men, women, and children shaking me by the hand, and giving me their blessing, and crying out "God save the King!" They carried me to my boat, and we parted with cheering and my promising to send them some troops. The Fowey and Mercury went close to the town.

British Troops Landing at Kips Bay, New York, September 15, 1776.

[New York] 15th Septr Early this morning the five ships of War, vizt, The Renown[2] 44 Guns, Phoenix 44, Arpheus 28, [Carysfort] 28, and Rose of 20, took their Stations along the shore of New York Island, from Kipps's bay near Turtle bay on the right, to the point behind Mr John Watts's house on the left, and about 200 yards from it. They anchored with their broadsides to the shore.

About 10 o'Clock the flatboats began to row from the mouth of Newtown Creek, and assembled aStern of the 6 transports at Bushwick point, in four Divisions. During this time The Guards embarked in flatboats which were prepared for their reception. The whole when assembled, amounted to about 30 flatboats with troops, besides several Launches and other Craft, with some Light Artillery, Mantelets, Intrenching tools, Ammunition, &c. &c.

A little before 11, upon a signal given, the five Ships of War opened their fire upon the Entrenchments, on the shore, and the adjoining woods. This fire was continued until the Boats began to move, and the troops to land. Very few of the Rebels showed themselves, and those only in the most secure places.

The Rebels, who judged from what they saw of the movement of the Boats and Ships, that the troops would land at Turtle bay, observing the boats row from Newtown Creek, and assemble at Bushwick point, immediately conceived they were going to land on the flat grounds near the town, and therefore marched several Battalions with their Colours flying into their line and works on that side, and made every appearance of an obstinate defence; but they were deceived, for as the wind and tide set strongly up the River, the boats were under the necessity of assembling at Bushwick point, in order to be able to fetch the intended place of landing, which was Kipps bay.

At 12 o'Clock, everything being ready, the boats put off from Bushwick point, . . . They rowed over in 4 Divisions. This was a grand, and most interesting sight. The boats started off in four Columns, and passing under Cover of the Ships, which continued their fire, reached Kipp's bay, to the right of the Ships, in about half an hour, and immediately landed there, without firing or receiving a Shot. Parties were instantly sent forward, who took possession of the ground in front and flanks. As soon as the troops were formed, they advanced to Murray's hill, (or Ingleberg) an advantageous piece of ground about 3½ miles on the great Road from New York to Kingsbridge.

A considerable body of the Rebels finding they were likely to be cutoff from Kingsbridge as soon as the Army landed, made the best of their way to New York, and crossed the River to Paulus hook, in great confusion. Some were drowned in attempting to pass on rafts. Had our ships been able to anchor in that part of the River they would have been prevented. Another body of them, as soon as they found the troops had landed, made directly across the Island to the North River shore, and marching along, made their escape before General Howe could intercept them.

[Extract] Boston 16th Sepr 1776

I am under the disagreeable necessity of representing the Base conduct of Capt Daniel Waters in the Armed schooner Lee, who has lost two months meerly from an Obstinate perverse temper, he Arrived here from a Cruise Abot the last of June. I paid the vessell off, the portledge bill Amounted to £ 445..6.. he was the best Officer'd and mann'd of any vessel in the Service; his first Leiutenant's time being up for wch he had engag'd he left him. his second chose to remain in the Service, and his Abilities are allow'd (even by Waters) to be equal to any man in the like Station in the Service and greatly esteem'd by all the men, yet Waters discharged him from the Service Contrary to my Advice, under the pretext that he refus'd to go under a first who had never been in the Service and a man who is the greatest part of his time lay'd up with the Gout; his people all told him if the 2nd Remain'd they wou'd go, But he has been from that time the first July till about ten days ago no farther from Boston than Squam, its now a week since his 2nd Lieut wch he discharged sent into plimouth a West India man, for he was immediately put in Command of a privateer on his discharge,[2] Finally when Waters had got mann'd, he wou'd not Consort with the Warren who waited for him tho I endeavour'd to point out the utility of two going together; he told me he shou'd not look on himself under any Obligation to consult with me. he shou'd go where and when he pleas'd, unless Gen Washington Or an Officer of his Appointing shou'd give him orders. then he shou'd hold himself bound. I have Just given you a Scetch of his Conduct Sir as I thought it my indispensable duty to do for I humbly presume if Conduct like his passes with impunity the little Navy will rather be a Clog than a Service to the public. you will see by the papers from time to time that we are Successfull in the privateer way. I wish our little navy was more so, the Hancock and Franklin arrived some time since with all their Sp[a]rs defective and we've meet some little detention in getting others but they are now ready and sail today the Lynch & Lee are on a Cruise. poor [William] Burke in the Warren taken by the Liverpool. . . .

CLARKE & NIGHTINGALE TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE NEW YORK PROVINCIAL CONGRESS [1]

Sir — Providence, Sept. 16th, 1776.

Last week we received a letter from Capt. William Rogers, commander of the sloop Montgomery in the service of your State, requesting us to undertake the agency and act in behalf of the State and himself, in libeling one brig which was returning from a whaling voyage, with about three hundred barrels of oil, and had been taken by the English, carried into New-York, and acquitted by them, and afterwards taken by Captain Rogers in company with the privateers Schuyler and Mifflin, and sent in here. The Commodore and Continental agent, in behalf of the other two privateers (which are fitted out by the Continent) gave the brig up, as there were no papers appeared by which they could condemn her, and they produced a certificate, a copy of which you have enclosed, of their permission to sail at the time they did. As matters were thus circumstanced, we imagined it would be in vain to libel her when the others who were two-thirds concerned saw no prospect of condemning her, and after consulting with the prize master, we declined prosecuting. The other is a Bermudian sloop which was taken with entrenching tools on board; the tools are taken out and were sent to General Washington, and they put a quantity of flour on board from some other of their prizes. She is libelled and will be tried the first of October next, and as there is no claimer she will of course be condemned. We shall now wait your orders in what manner to proceed, as she was taken in company with the abovementioned privateers, and shall be glad to hear from you as soon as possible. We are in the meantime with due respect, sir [&c.]

Clark & Nig[h]tingale

P.S. Enclosed with the certificate you have the affair of the brig stated by the lawyer.

[Enclosure]

[The case of the Brigantine Temple.]

It appears by her papers that she was owned by Wm. Rotch of Nantucket, and cleared out there on a whaling voyage, the 26th May, 1775, in common form, but did not sail till the last of October following.

After her clearing and before her sailing, to wit: in the month of August, the following resolve was passed in the House of Representatives of the Massachusetts Bay, and concurred with by the Council:

> That from and after the fifteenth day of this instant, August, no ship or vessel shall sail out of any port of this Colony on any whaling voyage whatever, without leave first had from the great and general court of this Colony, or from some committee or committees, or persons they shall appoint to grant such leave.

The brig sailed from Nantucket under the command of Joshua Morris some time the last of October, for the coast of Brazil, on a whaling voyage. And upon her passage home, having about three hundred barrels of oil on board, she was taken by a British man of war and carried into Sandy Hook, and after being detained a few days was dismissed with a pass from Admiral Howe to proceed to Nantucket. Soon after she left the Hook, to wit, on the 20th of August, 1776, she was taken by the Continental sloops of war called the Mifflin and the Schuyler, and by the sloop Montgomery fitted out by the State of New-York, and carried into a harbour on the south side of Long island, where she lay till the British troops got possession of Long island, when the captors sent her into this port to be libelled.

At the time of capture she had on board no certificate that she had obtained leave to go on a whaling voyage. Since her arrival here her owner from Nantucket has sent the following certificate, to wit:

Treasurey office, Sept. 28th, 1775.

I hereby certify that Wm. Rotch hath given bond according to the direction of the General Assembly of this Colony, in order to send on a whaling voyage the brig Temple, Joshua Morris, master.

Henry Gardner, Treas.

Quere. Whether it is advisable to libel the brig or not?

Newport, Sept. 16.

The Continental Cruiser, Andrew Doria, Capt. Nicholas Biddle, has taken 4 Prizes since he last sailed, viz. 1 large ship with near 15,000 bushels of wheat, which the Negro-catcher, Dunmore, loaded at Virginia and ordered for Halifax; a brig from Dunmore's fleet bound to the West-Indies, with a number of tories, and their household furniture, out of which he took some of the most valuable articles, and 7 Negroes, and let go; 2 brigs from the West Indies, loaded with rum and sugar; the 2 latter are safe arrived in a neighbouring port, and the ship is hourly expected.[1]

The fore part of last week, the Cerberus frigate retook a prize brig between Block Island and Norman's Land; this prize was one of Dunmore's motley squadron, bound to Bermudas, with a number of passengers, some household furniture, and dry goods from Virginia, and was taken by the Andrew Doria, Capt. Biddle, close in with the Island; the people put on board to bring her in, made their escape in the boat and landed at Block Island, from whence they came to this place.[2]

Captain Samson [Simeon Sampson], in a brig belonging to Plymouth, has sent a sloop into an eastern port, loaded with rum and cotton, bound for Halifax.[3]

Three brigs loaded with rum, sugar and molasses, arrived in some neighbouring port since our last; and it is said the ship loaded with 1[7],000 bushels of wheat taken by the Andrew Doria, is arrived a little way to the eastward.

Last Tuesday a fine large brig, loaded with about 240 hogsheads of rum, &c. went up the east passage; she was taken by the sloop Revenge, from Swansey, Capt. Samuel Dunn, who was reported to have been taken.[4]

Dear General, Isle La Motte September 16th 1776

The hard Gale of Wind yesterday prevented, my sending back Ensign [Clemens] Botsford. This Morning at one OClock Antoine Geroure [Girard] whom I mentioned to have sent to St Johns returned, and gave the following Account vizt. That at Isle aux Noix there are three thousand Troops encamped, and forty Pieces of Cannon Mounted on their Lines. at St Johns are three Thousand Men, one hundred & fifty Batteaux, and he was told by a Frenchman two hundred Batteaux were at Chamblee and a Party of Men sent down tofetch them up that two Schooners were compleated and Maned, one mounting Twelve and the other fourteen Brass twelve Pounders the small Vessels on the Stocks to carry three Guns each One Gondola taken from us and three new ones Built there to mount three Guns each, a Number of flatbottomed Boats and Batteaus to carry one Gun each and a Floating Battery, with two Masts nearly done to carry twenty four eighteen Pounders, and two Mortars, he imagines the whole will be compleated in a Fortnight. he has brought a Pass from the Isle aux Noix, from which and the Distance he had to go the bad Weather and Time he has been gone, I believe he has been no farther than the Isle aux Noix, and that he has been enjoined by the Officer there to give the foregoing Account. had not they been convinced he was in their Interest, I dont imagine they would have suffered him to return. he formerly lived with Metcalf whom he says is gone to St Johns, now remains at a French House opposite the Isle aux Motte where Serjeant [Thomas] Day, says a Number of Deserters were lately taken, betrayed to the Indians, by the Frenchman, I have every Reason to think him placed as a Spy on us I have therefore sent him to you tobe disposed of as you may think Proper.[2] I had promised him Fifty Dollars provided he procured an exact Account of the Strength of the Enemy, agreeable to the Accounts I received from others, from the Accot of the two Men who have viewed the Isle aux Noix, one of whom I nowsend,[3] the Accounts of this Frenchman must be False and a Story formed for him by some of the English Officers.

I have heard nothing of Lieutenant [Benjamin] Whitcomb or Ensign [Thomas] MCoy[4] and am very apprehensive for their Safety as the Woods is full of Indians. — I am Respectfully Dear General [&c.]

The Examination of Serjt Stiles sent from the Fleet with Ensign McCoy to reconnoitre Sept 6th: 1776

[On board the Royal Savage]

Sept. 16th Says that on the 9th Inst: he saw all the Tents on Isle aux Noix and counted them about one hundred and believes there is about one thousand Men there — the 12th arrived opposite St John's where were a large Number Tents which could not well be counted, he imagines about three hundred when there he counted 34 large Birch Canoes paddle by him towards Isle au Noix supposed they contained about six hundred Indians & one regular officer — Saw a Schooner at St John's mounting 12 Iron Guns, suppose six pounders another Schooner lay at the Wharf with a F. Sail bent which he supposes was not compleated and believes she mounted not more than 12 Guns one other vessel on the Stocks was planked to her Wales She appeared built in the common Form and something larger than the other two Two small Gondalos were at the Wharf, but saw Nothing of any Rideau or Floating Batteries and believes there was none Their Bat-

[On board H.M.S. Eagle, off Bedloe's Island]

16th [September]. – This morning about three o'clock I was called by the officer of watch, and informed that a fire-vessel was close on board of us. I immediately run on the forecastle, and perceived that the light was at some distance from us, and that it approached us but slowly. By daybreak we perceived them plainly to be four fire-vessels, that had been sent against the Renown, Repulse and Pearl. These fire-vessels came near the ships, but by slipping or veering they escaped them. The Renown slipped one cable and cut another; she made sail with the wind down the river and an ebb tide, and joined us here off Bedloe's Island. The two frigates kept their stations up the river. . . . A little after nine at night, three guns were fired as a signal. It proved to be the Chatham, in coming up here, had got on Robin's Reef. Sent the master to her.

[On board H.M.S. Eagle] Monday, 16th. Septr.

This Morning between 3 & 4 o'Clock, we were alarmed with three Fire-ships, which the Rebels sent down, at a Venture, against the three Ships of War which sailed up the North River yesterday morning. One of them came very near to the Renown, but, with the other two, was towed off, and left to consume upon the Shore. The Renown came down this Morning; and, by her, we understand, that Capt. [Henry] Davis had one man killed & two wounded yesterday, and that the Renown had two Men wounded. The Renown fired among the Rebels yesterday, as they evacuated the Town, & 'tis supposed, as the Ground was open & plain cut many of them off in their Retreat.

A Party of Marines was sent by the Admiral [Howe] to take Possession of the Fort, and to hoist the Union Flag upon the Staff. A great Concourse of People assembled round the Soldiers, and raised His Majesty's Colors with loud acclamations, and every possible Demonstration of Joy. Indeed the Happiness of the Inhabitants upon the Occasion drives them about like madmen. They carried our officers, at their first Landing, in Chairs or upon their Shoulders, up and down the Streets. They have felt so much of real Tyranny, since the New England & other Rebels came among them, that they are at a Loss how to enjoy their Release. The Rebels carried off their Bells, and many things of Value some Days before their Departure.

RICHARD HENRY LEE TO SAMUEL PURVIANCE, JR.[1]

Dear Sir, Philadelphia 16th Septr 1776

Since your brother left this City, Mr [John] Nicholson has been confirmed first Lieutenant of the Washington, and his worthy brother may be assured that in settling the rank of the Captains his merit will not be forgotten. It is not probable that the Frigates will sail in fleets for some time; and therefore tis likely that no higher appointment than that of Captain will soon take place.

It will be highly proper for Captain [James] Nicholson to hasten on the Virginia (for that is most certainly the name of the Baltimore Frigate) as much as possible. Her great obstruction, I fear, will be Anchors — However, we hope that will be removed eer long, as measures have been taken to pro[cure] them

You will shortly see published the conference of our Members with Lord Howe on Staten Island, in which you will find that his Lordships much talked of powers, are no more than to confer & converse with Gentlemen of influence, and to prosecute the war! We anxiously expect here, the issue of a long Cannonade at [New] York, and another lately on Lake Champlain – I am Sir [&c.]

Captain Francis de Monteil to Vice Admiral Clark Gayton [1]

Port Royal Jamaica 16th Septr. 1776

Sir/

I send to your Excellency Monsr. Desfarge de la Voltiere my Second Lieutenant who will desire you to permit me to have the Honor of seeing you he will first tell you the urgent reason why I left the Mole St Nicholas in such a hurry where I was engag'd to repair my Ship.

Monsr. de la Voltierre with respect will tell you concerning the matter that happen'd on the 14th. His Britanick Majestys Ship the Squirrel with a Sloop Cruizing a head of her, chased a Schooner with great eagerness and by means of her Oars took her at a Miles distance from the Shore in my Sight, and in short so close that three Men belonging to the Schooner had scarce time to reach the Town with their Papers & other Effects.

In vain I endeavored to tow my Frigate [La Renommée] out but it being Calm in the Bay and then the Wind coming contrary prevented me from getting out before the Night had depriv'd me of the sight of His Britanick Majestys Ships, three different Schooners told me that they were gone for Jamaica.

I look'd for the Captain of the Squirrel to observe to him (on account of the good understanding subsisting between the two Courts) that an officer who commanded a Frigate in the Mole a Month before had given protection to a Vessel belonging to Jamaica and therefore I have more reason to complain of Captain [Stair] Douglas's Lieutenant for so gross a breach of the Treaties His going away appear'd to me a matter of so much consequence for the Honor of my King that I was determined to come myself to demand the Schooner, I flatter myself your Excellency will think that 'tis very natural for the Schooner to avail himself of the Protection afforded them by our Court, which would be equally the same to any of His Britanick Majestys Vessels that might require it, and more particularly in a case of this kind where our Colours were Hoist'd and under our Cannon where all your Vessels are receiv'd.

To conclude I have the Honor to remit to you the Memoir of my Demand of which I have transmitted an exact Copy to the Marine Minister.[2]

I will express in Person every thing else necessary to Justify the Demand that my Situation obliges me to make and I desire you that if the matter requires any delay to give an answer, at the receipt of this, to Justify my Conduct to my Master I would return immediately with the Confidence of your Justice in a matter which so essentially Interests both our Courts and without presuming you would be displeas'd at its being Communicat'd to our respective Ministers. I have the honor to be with every Sentiment of respect Your Excellencys [&c.]

CAPTAIN WILLIAM CORNWALLIS TO PHILIP STEPHENS[1]

Sir Latitude 32° N. Longde 73° W.

I beg you will be pleased to acquaint their Lordships that his Majesty's Ship Pallas under my Command has been Six Weeks from Portroyal, Jamaica, with a Convoy of 104 Sail a List of which I sent by the Grenville Packet who parted Company the 6th instant. We have been three Weeks since we came through the Gulf getting three degrees to the Northward owing to Calms and light Airs of Wind from the N. Et; We went to as short an Allowance of water both Officers and Men soon after we sailed, as I thought we could well be reduced to, the Weather being very hot, we have at present only Ten Butts besides the Ground Tier.

I intend keeping along the Coast of America in hopes of meeting with some Man of War upon that Station to enquire at what place we can get a supply, for unless we have a fair and fresh Wind soon I do not think it will be safe to Cross the Ocean with the small Quantity of water we have on board.

Many of the Merchant Ships parted Company as soon as we got through the Gulf, a great many of the others keep constantly so far off that we can but just see them from the Masthead, I have sent on board those that are nearest to us, and find some of them intend parting Company, others are as bad off for water as ourselves, and intend going to the Northward with us, I should hope that two or three days sail will put them pretty well out of the reach of the American Privateers, however I shall take all the care I possibly can of those that chuse to keep Company with us. Inclosed I send a weekly account of the State and Condition of the Ship. I am Sir [&c.]

Acts and Resolves of the Massachusetts General Court[1]

[Watertown] Tuesday September 17th 1776.

Petition of Shubael Cottle a member of the House of Representatives for the Town of Tisbury in Dukes County in the behalf of Nathan Smith Captain of the first Company of Sea-Coast Men station'd in said Tisbury in Dukes-County aforesaid for the defence of the said County – setting forth –

That from the Encouragement given by these States to all Persons to make Captures of Vessels belonging to the Enemy employ'd against the united States, as also by a Resolve which passed the Honorable Continental Congress on the 23d of March in 1775, respecting such matters. That the above said Captain Smith from a principle of serving his Country, and stimulated with the hopes of Reward, He with divers other persons belonging to a Sea Coast Company station'd on the Island of Martha's Vinyard, with some of the Militia of the same place, with three Pilot Boats provided by said Smith, & Company did on the 12th day of April last past at the risque of their Lives board, take, and bring into the Port of Bedford in this State a certain Schooner called the Volante of about Sixty Tons burthen laden with Provisions, and Stores for the use of the Fleet, and Army employed against the united States of America the said Schooner then being a part of said Fleet, & Tender to the Scarborough Man of War – One Edward Marsh Master – The Petitioner at the time of the Capture did humbly conceive after condemnation and deducting the Charges incident thereto, that the Vessel, Cargo, and appurtunances was to be divided amongst the Captors, but by a Resolve which pass'd the late General Assembly at their last Session on the 23d day of April 1775 [sic 1776]. the State thereby taking two thirds of all such Captures, and the other third to the use of the Captors – the Petitioner, humbly suggests that should the Honorable Court take any part of said Capture by virtue of said Resolve passed the 23d of April aforesaid to the use of this State that two thirds is by far too great a part in the opinion of the Petitioner – He therefore (in the behalf of said Captain Smith, and Company) prays that the Honorable Court would take the matter into consideration and as the State were at no Expence, nor suffer'd any Risque for Vessels, Cannon in making said Capture, that the Honorable Court would order the whole, or such a part of said Schooner, Cargo and Appurtunances to the use of the Captors, as they shall think proper.

Resolved that whereas it appears to this Court that certain persons mentioned in said Petition, [were concerned in taking and bringing into this State a certain Schooner mentioned in Said petition][2] and it further appears, that the Vessels, or Boats which attacked, and took said Schooner were procured by, and at the risk of the Captors –

Therefore Resolved, that after the Charges of Tryal, and Condemnation are deducted from the gross proceeds of said Vessel and Cargo, and the Share of the other Captors have been assigned, the Colony shall receive one third and the Sea Coast Men the other two thirds of said Schooner, Cargo, and Appurtunances.

The Committee of both Houses appointed to take under consideration the claim this State has to the Prize Ship Queen of England Arnot [James Arnout] master loaden with Pork, and other provisions for the use of the Enemy lately taken in the harbor of Boston have attended that service, and ask leave to Report as follows.

D Sewall p order.

That since the appointment of your Committee the Trial of the Justice of the said Capture, has been determin'd in the Superior Court, upon an Appeal made from the Maritime Court in the Middle district, by a Pilot on Board of the said Ship at the Time, of the Capture, who claimed the whole prize.

Upon which Trial your Committee are Informed, for they have not been able to obtain the Record thereof, That one fifth part of the said Prize, and her Appurtunances have been adjudged to the said Pilot as an original Captor, and the remaining 4/5 to the said Crafts, & Whitney, & their Regiments, who at the Time of the Capture where in the service, and pay of the State –

That by a Resolve of both Houses on the 23d of April last "The Sea Cost men station'd in any Port of this Colony, shall be intitled to one third part of the neat proceeds, after charges of condemnation, and other expences are paid of all Vessels & Cargoes that have been, or shall hereafter be taken by them, and legally Condemned by the Court Establish'd to try the Justice of all such Captures, which shall be divided, amongst them in proportion to the pay of the Officers, & Soldiers employed in such port, or place, and the Remainder shall be to the use of the Colony"

That your Committee are of opinion there can be no just pretence for the said Colonels, and their Regiments retaining the whole of the 4/5 of the said Capture to their own use.

Beverly, September 17th. 1776.

And unless they are to be consider'd in this matter as Sea Coast Men, they have no legal demand to any part of the said Capture, and that an Adjudication of the 4/5 to them is in effect an adjudication of so much to the use of this State –

But your Committee are of Opinion that the said Colonels, and their Men, are equitably intitled to 1/3 of the 4/5, and no more, and this they conceive one of the said Colonels by his memorial laid in, before the Board is fully convinced of, and is contented with. –

Your Committee are likewise of Opinion, that the Superior Court may now legally, in Consequence of the Resolution of April last beforementioned, Order in the Precept for Sale of said 4/5 of the said Prize, a distribution thereof in manner following – viz: 1/3 to the said Colonels, and their Regiments in proportion to the pay they respectively receive from this State, and the Residue to this State, and that the agent for the middle District of this State ought to be by this Court directed to apply to the said Superior Court for a distribution accordingly. –

SAMUEL COOPER TO BENJAMIN FRANKLIN[1]

[Extract] Boston N. E 17 Septr 1776

We have Nothing new here except Captures from the British Trade, which are likely to increase – Our own Navigation is almost Wholly turn'd into Privateering, so that their Cruizers can take little or Nothing from us but empty Hulls, while their Ships come fast to us richly laden'd –

It is regretted among us that the American Fleet is not in greater Forwardness. We have two fine Frigates built at Newbury & Portsmouth, but after so long a Time, not yet ready to put to Sea: Many are the more uneasy at this, as two Frigates of the Enemy have had the undisturb'd Range of our Bay for five or six Weeks past, retaken some valuable Prizes, and greatly prevented the Coasters from coming in with Supplies to this Town. Whether there be any Fault in this or where it lies, I am unable to determine – I expect Mr [Samuel] Austin, a worthy Gentleman, & Select Man of this Town will call for this Letter and deliver it to you. . . .

[Fishkill] Septr. 17th, 1776.

The Convention on information that the soundings of Hudson's river, at and about Fort Washington, is not accurately sounded, and thereupon came to the following resolutions.

Whereas, there is reason to apprehend that the channel of Hudson's river opposite to Fort Washington is not yet sufficiently obstructed; And Whereas it is of the utmost importance to the safety of this State, and the general cause of America, that the navigation of that river should not be occupied by the enemy's ships: Therefore,

Resolved, That Captain Thos. Greenhill be, and he is, hereby requested and authorized to proceed with all possible dispatch to Mount Washington, in order to take an accurate survey of the landings of that part of Hudson's river, and that he report his proceedings to the Convention of this State with all possible despatch.

Resolved, That the commanding officer of Fort Washington be applied to by Captain Greenhill for his permission to sound the river, and for his assistance in carrying the above resolution into execution.

Resolved, That General James Clinton be requested to furnish Captain Greenhill with a whale boat, and a sufficient number of hands whose attachment to the American cause may be relied on, in order to assist in carrying this measure into execution, that General Clinton and Captain Greenhill be earnestly requested to conduct this matter with all the secrecy possible.

A letter from Gilbert Livingston, Esquire, at Poughkeepsie, was read. He therein informs that the chain intended to obstruct the navigation of Hudson's river, has been delayed for want of iron. He requests that one of the other members of the committee may come to him to assist him, and bring with him two thousand pounds, as their treasury is nearly exhausted; and informs that he expects to go to the fort to see that the apparatus is ready to fasten and stretch the chain.

Ordered, That the secret committee for obstructing the navigation of Hudson's river, have permission to go to the fortifications in the Highlands to-morrow morning.

MAJOR GENERAL NATHANAEL GREENE TO GOVERNOR NICHOLAS COOKE [1]

Sir Camp at Harlam Heights 17. Sept 1776

I suppose you have heard of the Retreat from Long Island and the Evacuation of New york. The Retreats were both Judicious and necessary our numbers being very insufficient to hold such an extent of ground. His Excellency had proposd to Evacuate the City & Subburbs of New York sometime before the Enemy made their last landing, and had the Quarter Master General been able to furnish the necessary Waggons to remove the Stores and Baggage, the Retreat would have been effected in good Order, had the Enimy delay'd their landing twenty four hours longer. Almost all the Old standing Regiment was drawn out of the City in order to oppose the Enimy at Hell Gate where they made an appearance of a very large body of Troops, and movements as if they intended a landing. We made a miserable disorderly Retreat from New york, owing to the disorderly conduct of the Militia who run at the Appearance of the Enemies Advance Guard, this was General [John] Fellows Brigade, they struck a pannick into the Troops in the Rear and Fellows, and [Samuel Holden] Parsons whole Brigade run away from about fifty men and left his Excellency on the Ground within Eighty Yards of the Enemy, So vext at the infamous conduct of the Troops that he sought Death rather than life The Retreat was on the fourteenth of this instant from New york, most of the Troops got off but we lost a prodigious deal of Baggage & Stores On the 15th [sic 16th] we had a skirmish at Harlam Heiths a party of about a thousand came and Attackt our Advance post they met with a very different kind of a Reception from what they did the day before the fire continued about an hour and the Enemy Retreated our people pursued them and by the spirited conduct of General Putnam and Col [Joseph] Read the Adjutant General our people advanced upon the plain ground without cover and Attackt them and drove them back. His Excellency sent and order'd a timely retreat to our Advancd Post for he discovered or concluded the Enemy would send a large reenforcement, as their main body lay near bye. I was sick when the Army retreated from Long Island, which by the bye was the best Effected Retreat I ever read or heard off, consedering the difficulty of the Retreat. The Army now remain quiet but expect an Attack every Day Col [James Mitchell] Varnum[s] & Col [Daniel] Hitchcocks Regiments were in the last Action and behaved Nobly, but neither of the Cols was with them both being Absent one Sick the other taking care of the Sick. Time wont Permit me to say much more as I am wanted to go into the Jerseys –

I had the honnor of seeing & conversing with your Committee. I think and so does his Excellency, That the Opperations of the Campaign will have no Effect upon you as it will be impossible for the Enemy to detach any part of the Army while our Army is able to make any stand. I would not Evacuate one foot of ground, as it will tend to encourage the Enemy and disperit our People I am sure the Government is safe and will remain so unless the Enemy can ruin this Army, this is their grand Object and every nerve will be exerted to effect it, that they will not have opportunity and strength sufficient to molest you. I have not time to add one word more. I am with all due respect [&c.]

JOURNAL OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS[1]

[Philadelphia] Tuesday, September 17, 1776

A letter of the 23 August last, from V. De Coetiry Prejent, was laid before Congress, and read.

Resolved, That the same, with paper inclosed, be referred to the Marine Committee.

The committee appointed to confer with Lord Howe, agreeable to order, brought in a report in writing, which was read as follows:

In Obedience to the order of Congress, we have had a meeting with Lord Howe. It was on Wednesday last, upon Staten island, opposite to Amboy, where his lordship received and entertained us with the utmost politeness.

His lordship opened the conversation, by acquainting us, that, though he could not treat with us as a committee of Congress, yet, as his powers enabled him to confer and consult with any private gentlemen of influence in the colonies, on the means of restoring peace between the two countries, he was glad of this opportunity of conferring with us on that subject, if we thought ourselves at liberty to enter into a conference with him in that character. We observed to his Lordship, that, as our business was to hear, he might consider us in what light he pleased, and communicate to us any propositions he might be authorized to make for the purpose mentioned; but that we could consider ourselves in no other character than that in which we were placed, by order of Congress. His Lordship then entered into a discourse of considerable length, which contained no explicit proposition of peace, except one, namely, That the colonies should return to their allegiance and obedience to the government of Great Britain. The rest consisted principally of assurances, that there was an exceeding good disposition in the king and his ministers to make that government easy to us, with intimations, that, in case of our submission, they would cause the offensive acts of parliament to be revised, and the instructions to governors to be reconsidered; that so, if any just causes of complaint were found in the acts, or any errors in government were perceived to have crept into the instructions, they might be amended or withdrawn.

We gave it as our Opinion to his lordship, that a return to the domination of Great Britain was not now to be expected. We mentioned the repeated humble petitions of the colonies to the king and parliament, which had been treated with contempt, and answered only by additional injuries; the unexampled patience we had shown under their tyrannical government, and that it was not till the last act of parliament which denounced war against us, and put us out of the king's protection, that we declared our independence; that this declaration had been called for by the people of the colonies in general; that every colony had approved of it, when made, and all now considered themselves as independent states, and were settling, or had settled, their governments accordingly; so that it was not in the power of the Congress to agree for them, that they should return to their former dependent state; that there was no doubt of their inclination to peace, and their willingness to enter into a treaty with Great Britain, that it might be advantageous to both countries; that though his lordship had, at present, no power to treat with them as independent states, he might, if there was the same good disposition in Britain, much sooner obtain fresh powers from thence, for that purpose, than powers could be obtained by Congress, from the several colonies, to consent to a submission.

His lordship then saying, that he was sorry to find, that no accommodation was like to take place, put an end to the conference.

Upon the whole, it did not appear to your committee, that his Lordship's commission contained any other authority of importance than what is expressed in the act of parliament, namely, that of granting pardons, with such exceptions as the commissioners shall think proper to make, and of declaring America, or any part of it, to be in the king's peace, upon submission; For, as to the power of enquiring into the state of America, which his Lordship mentioned to us, and of conferring and consulting with any persons the commissioners might think proper, and representing the result of such conversations to the ministry, who, (provided the colonies would subject themselves,) might, after all, or might not, at their pleasure, make any alterations in the former instructions to governors, or propose in Parliament, any amendment of the Acts complained of, we apprehended any expectation from the effect of such a power would have been too uncertain and precarious to be relyed on by America, had she still continued in her state of Dependence.

Ordered, That the foregoing report, and also the message from Lord Howe, as delivered by General [John] Sullivan, and the resolution of Congress in consequence thereof, be published by the committee who brought in the foregoing report.

MEMOIR OF THE CHEVALIER FRANCIS DE MONTEIL[1]

Francis Aimar de Monteil, Knight of the Royal and Military order of St Louis, Brigadier in the Navy, First Captain in Command of the Ships of War Station'd at the French Islands has the Honor of claiming from His Excellency Admiral Gayton, the Schooner Lady Caroline, taken three days ago at the entrance of St Nicholas Mole, as will appear in the annex'd declaration,[2] within a Mile of the Shore and in Sight of the Renommée which was then getting ready for Sea,

He hoist'd the French Colours several times and Slip'd his Cable useing his best endeavours to get out of the Bay, in order to Demand the above-mention'd Schooner and Cargo

The Chevr de Monteil not being able to speak the English Frigate, she being a little afterwards at some distance from the Coast, judging that he had a right to claim a Capture made within Gun Shot at the Point under the Colours at the Mole has not lost a Moment, & the necessity of the case was such, that he would not dispatch to His Excellency the Officer of the Sloop of War who went out with him, but thought it most proper to execute such an important Commission himself.

He hath already set forth his motives in his Letter[3] (which are found'd from the good understanding subsisting between the two Courts) that the Sloop that went before the Squirrel pass'd the bounds of the Treaty, and violat'd the Laws of Nations & ought to have relinquish'd his pursuit the People of the Schooner were so near the Shore, that they came with great ease to make Depositions of the Act, to a Town; where all British Subjects trade unmolest'd.

The Chevr de Monteil being persuaded that the Captain of the Squirrel, or the Admiral would deliver up said Schooner, has brought down some French Sailors, who were delivered to him at the Mole, to bring her back, and altho' he knew the little Vessel, with which he came in, he prefer'd to follow her at an easy Sail to ask the Restitution with that Defference which is due between the Officers of both Monarchs

Whether His Excellency Admiral Gayton immediately consents to this Restitution (provid'd that the Oaths of the People belonging to the Squirrel who have brought said Schooner down here, agree with the Tenor of the above) whether she is not sent back, but to the end of being Deposit'd in the care of Monsr L'Comte Dennery.

The Chevr de Monteil begs that Admiral Gayton replies in writeing to this Memorial as it is his indispensable Duty to send a Voucher to the Court of France, of his having done himself the Honor of addressing Admiral Gayton, and of sending him a Duplicate of the Declaration of the Master of said Schooner, and by his desire, and has set forth his reasons for having made the demand — He must once more repeat the necessity of an answer (which he hopes to receive) to the end that if the affair is not determin'd here in its Origin, the French Ambassador at the Court of Great Britain; shall be able to treat upon the Subject there.

And it is in this expectation that the Chevr de Monteil was satisfied to do nothing else but to follow the Schooner here confiding in the mutual proceedings of his Excellency the Admiral Gayton

(Sign'd) The Chevr de Monteil

From onboard the Renommée, at Jamaica 17th September 1776.

P S In handing the above Memorial to Admiral Gayton, I beg that he will take Notice, that the word Protection, is only meant to imply Assylum, the Sense I use it.

I am Satisfied that his Excellency leave the matter in dispute concerning the said Schooner which I have claim'd in the name of Monsr L'Comte Dennery Commander in Chief of St Domingo, to be Decided by the two Courts, and to please to acquaint the same to the said Comte Dennery

I Beg therefore your consideration of my Case, and that this my request and prayer may be granted. — And your Petitioner as in duty bound shall ever pray. —

[Extract] Isle La Motte September 18th 1776.

Dear General, My last was the 16th Inst. by Ensign [Clemens] Botsford; the next Morning, Lieut: Whitcomb and his Party returned from St John's with Two Prisoners, Ensign Saunders, and a Corporal of the 29th Regiment, who were taken between St John's, and La Prairie. The Ensign says there is a Ship on the Stocks at St John's, designed to mount Twenty Guns, Nine, and Twelve Pounders, several Schooners, and small Craft; but seems ignorant, as to their Size and Numbers. He says there was talk of crossing the Lake soon; but in general it was thought they would not cross this Fall. Both him and the Corporal seem cautious of giving any Information . . .

I am inclined to think, on comparing all Accounts, that the Enemy will soon have a considerable naval Force. The Ship, the Ensign says, will be completed in a fortnight, and is to be manned from the Navy in the River.

I make no Doubt of their soon paying us a Visit, and intend first fair Wind to come up as high as Ile Valcour, where tis a good Harbour, and where we shall have the Advantage over the Enemy; and if they are too many for us, we can retire. I believe their Army crossing the Lake, depends entirely on the Advice they may receive from New York.

I beg that at least One Hundred good Seamen maybe sent me as soon as possible. We have a wretched motley Crew, in the Fleet; the Marines, the Refuse of every Regiment, and the Seamen, few of them, ever wet with salt Water. We are upwards of One Hundred Men short of our Complement.

Ensign [John] Bush arrived here last Night, and brought four Beeves, which is all the fresh Provision we have received. By him I send up Lieutenant Whitcomb and his Prisoners. I could wish to have a Six or Eight Inch Howitz mounted in Two or three of the Gallies. If they are arrived, they will be of infinitely more Service than Guns especially to attack a large Vessel. If the Grape and Chain Shot is arrived, I beg it may be sent with some good slow Match, and three Cables and Anchors. We have not a spare one in the Fleet, and the blowing Season is now coming on.

There is a small brass Royal at Ty, which with a hundred Shells and a Gunner, may be very useful to us . . .

JOURNAL OF THE NEW YORK PROVINCIAL CONVENTION [1]

Die Mercurii, 9 HO. A.M.
[Fishkill] Septr. 18th, 1776.

Mr. Hobart, from the committee to report the most proper disposition of the sloop Montgomerie, delivered in their report, which was read. That part of the report which respects the condemnation and sale of prizes was agreed to, Thereupon,

Resolved, That a letter be immediately written to Mr. Joseph Hallett, the agent for prizes, requesting him forthwith to repair to New-England, and take the most speedy and effectual measures for the condemnation and sale of such vessels and goods as Capt. [William] Rogers the commander of the said sloop may have brought into that country.

The said committee also reported a draft of such letter to Joseph Hallett as above mentioned, which was read and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

> Sir — The Convention having received information that Capt. Rogers of the sloop Montgomerie, has left the south side of Long island, and is arrived at Norwalk, in Connecticut, with some of his prize goods, and that some vessels which he brought off with him are arrived in other parts of New-England, it is their desire that you repair forthwith to that country, and take the most speedy and effectual measures for the condemnation and sale of such vessels and goods; which I am directed to signify to you, and am, sir [&c.]
> To Joseph Hallett, Esqr.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be engrossed, and signed by the President, and transmitted.

That part of the said report which relates to the sale of the sloop Montgomerie, was recommitted to Mr. Wm. Smith, General Ten Broeck, Mr. [William] Duer and Mr. Bancker, Mr. Hobart being excused on his earnest request and reasons assigned.

VICE ADMIRAL RICHARD LORD HOWE TO PHILIP STEPHENS [1]

Duplicate
Number 8.

Eagle, New York River,
September the 18th. 1776

Sir, By the Halifax Packet, sent to make known the Progress of the Army since the Date of the General's last Dispatches, I have Opportunity to acknowledge the Receipt of your Letter of the 25th of June by the Galatea, giving Advice of the Reinforcement ordered for the Fleet and Army, and enclosed with the Duplicates of Letters forwarded by the Captain of the Diamond, who is charged with the Conduct of that Reinforcement.

I have the Satisfaction of being able to inform their Lordships that a Disposition having been made for landing the Army on York Island on the Morning of the 15th, the Captains [Hyde] Parker [Jr.] and [James] Wallace, whose Abilities and distinguished Resolution point them out for the most important Services; with the Captains [Charles] Hudson, [Robert] Fanshawe and [Andrew Snape] Hamond, Officers of great Merit, passed the Fire of the Town of New York with their Ships on the Evening of the 13th, to wait off Bushwyck Creek, opposite to Kepp's Bay where the Landing was proposed to be forced, in the East River. The Flat Boats, Batteaux and Gallies under the Direction of Commodore Hotham, but arranged in Divisions commanded by the Captains [George] Vandeput, [Benjamin] Caldwell, [Archibald] Dickson, [Toby] Caulfield, [Charles] Phipps and [Anthony] Molloy, and the Lieutenant [John] Howorth of the Eagle; assisted by the Lieutenants [John] Henry, [Anthony] Parrey, [Henry] Chads and Bristow, Agents of Transports; were manned from the two-decked Ships and Transports as on the former Debarkation, and sent up at different times under the Shore of Long Island, undiscovered by the Enemy on the opposite Side.

Six Transports, which Messrs Robt Roughhead, Richd Fowler, John Randall, Tho: Brown, —— Chambers and —— Stuart, the different Masters, making a voluntary Offer of their Services engaged to conduct, were sent up the East River on the 14th, under the Direction of the Agent Lieutenant [John] Knowles, and Lieutenant Laird whose active Assistance in the most fatiguing Parts of the Debarkation-Duty, the Conveyance of the Artillery, has marked his Zeal for the King's Service in a particular Manner. They were appointed to take in a number of Troops from Bushwyck Creek for facilitating the more timely Support of the first Division embarked in the Flat Boats at New Town Creek.

The Pilots declining on Account of the Strength of the Tide, to take Charge of the particular covering Ships that were intended to be placed toward Hell Gate, for countenancing the Appearance of a Descent on that Part of the Coast, all the five were placed in Kepp's Bay on the Morning of the 15th and having by the Effect of their well-directed Fire compelled the Rebels to quit their Intrenchments upon the Shore, the Debarkation was made without further Opposition.

The General's public Acknowledgments addressed to the Commodore and the several Officers and Seamen employed, will be the best Testimony I can render of their meritorious Services on this Occasion.

In order to facilitate the Operations of the Army in the East River, another Detachment of the Ships of War was appointed, by the General's desire, to proceed up the North River; to give Jealousy to the Enemy on this Side. The Renown, Captain [Francis] Banks, with the Captains [Henry] Davis and [Thomas] Wilkinson in the Repulse and Pearl, were ordered for that Purpose. They passed the Enemy's Batteries without material Injury early on the 15th to a Station about six Miles to the Northward of the Town. On the ensuing Night the Enemy directed four Fire-Vessels in Succession against them; But with no other Effect than that of obliging the Ships to move their Stations, the Repulse excepted. The Renown returned to this Side the Town: But the two Frigates remain still in the North River, with the Tryal Armed Schooner, to strengthen the left Flank of the Army extending to the Western Shore of York Island, as Circumstances will admit.

Since my last No 6, of which a Duplicate is herewith enclosed, the Carysfort, Pearl and Tartar from the St Lawrence are arrived, and yet remain here, to be employed as the Service may require.

The Galatea being the first Frigate which the State of Things, with respect to the Operations of the Army, has allowed me to detach for a Continuance to the Southward, Captain [Thomas] Jordan is under Orders to proceed off the Island of Bermudas; In quest of several small Privateers of the Enemy ranging the Stream of that Island to intercept the West India Trade. Concluding the Nautilus will be in great Want of Naval Stores as well as provisions and probably Repairs, I have sent Orders by the Galatea for Captain [John] Collins (if still at Bermuda) to join me at this Port.

In the Duplicate of your letter of the 23d of June by the Galatea, on the Subject of the large Supplies [of] Naval Stores provided, You mention, Sir, their Lordships Reliance that the Ships will be kept in constant Employment. I conceive from thence, that they will expect to receive some Report from me touching suitable Disposition of the Ships for effecting the intended Restraint upon the Trade of the Rebellious Colonies, and for suppressing the Armed Force fitted out from the different Ports along the Coasts of this extensive Continent.

It is with great Concern that I am still unable to make a satisfactory Return to their Lordships probable Expectations therein. But I flatter myself that my Deficiency will be deemed less singular, when they are pleased to consider the full Employment which a much inferior Land Force afforded for the Fleets that attended their Operations in the last War, Tho' I conceive, it is not from the Numbers in either Profession that a true Judgment of the Proportion they should bear to each other is to be deduced, But from the Nature of the Service to be carried on; the Country, and Communication. Seeing that from the Ships must be provided practised Men to be employed in Boats, for landing with the requisite Expedition, and transporting, the Troops, Baggage and Artillery; And, where Water Carriage is so much in Question, the Means also of intercepting the Enemy's Supplies: Besides the Protection of the Transports, on which the Existence of the Army has depended, so far as the Operations of this Campaign have hitherto advanced.

I shall dispose of the Supernumerary Men their Lordships have ordered out in the Hulks and Frigates, according to their Qualifications. And as Reference is had in your said Duplicate to the Provisions in the prohibitory Act amongst the Expedients their Lordships have in Contemplation for keeping the Complements of the Ships complete; I beg leave to observe of the Men to be so procured, that the Europeans are unquestionably the most preferable; And, from all I have yet experienced, the only Men on whom any Dependence is to be placed. The Prejudices the native Americans have imbibed, disqualify them for every Trust. And the extravagant Advantages with which they tempt the European Seamen to desert, render their Continuance dangerous in the Ships. Wherefore, I presume to think no Aid can be derived from the Capture of American Ships at the present Crisis; Except in the Exchange of their Crews with the British Seamen now Prisoners in the different Colonies, upon the Plan submitted in my last Letter.

The Want of a sufficient Naval Force for the various Occasions consequent of the Movement of the Army, obliges me still to detain the Frigates on that Account. The State of many of them, and of the two-decked Ships is such, as will require their being sent to Europe or different Ports in the West Indies, when the Operations of the Army become more confined during the Winter Season: That they may be made ready with most Dispatch, for cruizing Service in the Spring. I may then be able to keep them fitted and employed in more regular Succession. But as no Port on the Continent is yet open for supplying the Cruising Ships with Water to the Southward, I must plead for their Lordships favorable Construction of my Endeavors to use the Means with which I have the Honor of being entrusted, to the best Advantage, according to the Exigencies of this complicated Service.

Due Attention will be given to the Contents of the Abstract of Lord George Germain's Letter to the Generals Carleton and Howe, respecting the Dismission of the Transports, as they can be spared. I flatter myself his Lordship will be satisfied from his subsequent Knowledge of the actual State of the Operations here, that no Want of Regard has yet been shewn to that highly interesting Consideration.

I have only to trouble you further as of immediate Consequence, with Relation to that Paragraph in your Duplicate aforesaid, concerning the Supply of Ordnance-Stores.

The Store-Ships referred to in Mr. [John] Boddington's Letter of the 9th of June, contained Articles suited principally to the small Armed Vessels and Frigates of the lower Class; But had neither Powder, Ball, or Cartridge, in any adequate Quantity for the Ships of superior Rates. Wherefore, but for the Ball the Enemy have left in and near the Town of New York, whereof the Numbers of 12 and 18 lb have not yet been ascertained, the Service of the thirty two and forty Gun-Ships would have been greatly confined. I have added a State of the Expence of Ordnance Stores in the Ships here, as a Rule for proportioning the future Supplies, which I am to request, thro' their Lordships Interposition, to have sent out by such safe and expeditious Conveyance, as the Importance of the Concern may induce. Proper Supplies of Medicines for the Fleet will be equally necessary; the Surgeons having no Means of providing Medicines in this Country.

I learnt on my Arrival here, from the Accounts Captain [Charles] Douglas transmitted to Vice Admiral Shuldham, the Progress of the Naval Operations under his Direction; And the Success of His Majesty's Arms in the Province of Canada. By the Carysfort and Pearl he let me know his subsequent proceedings to the 4th and 12th of last Month, as contained in the Copies of his Letters herewith enclosed. My Letter of the 13th of June, of which I likewise trouble You with a Copy, will have informed Captain Douglas of my general Ideas in respect to the Appointment of the Ships under his Order at that Time. I have not yet had an Opportunity to forward any more particular Instructions to him in consequence of his later Informations. The necessary Preparatives for the Service on the Lakes will have detained him in the St Lawrence whilst the Season ad[mits] of his Stay there. Pennsylvania Gazette, Wednesday, September 18, 1776

Philadelphia, Sept. 18.

On Friday last arrived here from Martinico, the Continental ship of war the Reprisal, Lambert Weeks, Esq; Commander. On board of said ship came passengers several French Officers, who we hear are strongly recommended to the Honourable the Congress by the Governor of Martinico. One of them it is said is an accomplished Engineer.[1]

Since our last a vessel arrived in this port with 2000 bushels of salt. The whole of it was immediately bought up by a respectable merchant of this city, who is now selling it out in small quantities, at a very moderate advance, for the benefit of the public.

Yesterday the Continental brig of war Andrew Doria, Captain Biddle, returned here from a cruize. We hear she has taken four prizes, viz. a ship and a brig, from Virginia, a [brig] from North Carolina; and a brig from Barbados for Newfoundland, which were ordered for any port they could get in to the Eastward.[2]

1. The engineer was Jean Louis Imbert, and the other French officers were: Marquis de Malmedy, Christian de Colerus and Jean Louis de Vernejous. Ford, ed., JCC, V, 783–84.
2. For names of Biddle's prizes see Pennsylvania Journal, Wednesday, September 18, 1776.

SAMUEL PURVIANCE, JR. TO JOHN ADAMS[1]

Sir Baltimore 18 Septr 1776

I hope youle excuse the Liberty of this Adress from a Stanger, which I presume to take on the Strength of my Brothers acquaintance with you, And he at present is from home. —

The Bearer John Sterrit Esqr my good Freind & Neighbr is Jointly with myself & some other Freinds Interested in the Privateer Enterprize of this Port, Capt [James] Campbel[l], who has sent in a Valuable Prize to Dartmouth in N.E, but as appears from the Prize Masters Letter to One of the Owners which Mr Sterrit will shew you, Capt Campl neglected to put a Copy of his Comn on board, & besides had taken all the Prizes Papers on board his own Vesl — The Reason of this may easily be collected from the Prize Masrs Letter, as Capt Campbel intendd to follow the Prize immediately to the Eastern Shore of this State. — From the Aforementiond Circumstances theres a possibility of some difficulties arising abt the Prize, wh The Owners woud wish to take every rational Means of obviating — For this purpose we have dispatchd an Express after my Bror who yesterday set out for Chincotegue where we have heard of Captn Campbels Arrivl with several other Prizes; to procure the Prizes Papers to be sent after Mr Sterrit who is directed to take a Copy of Captn Campbels Commission from Congs where it was taken out. — Shoud there be any Necessity for your Assistance in getting this done, I hope youle be so obliging as to render it. — But what I woud principally request of you is, the favr of a Line to some of your

Freinds at Boston who can serve Mr Sterrit shoud our Claim be litigated – Of several Correspondents wh My Bror & I had there, I have no Certainty where any of them are save Mr Black who is at Philada –

I have taken the Liberty of writing by Mr Sterrit to yr Freind Mr Saml Adams with whom I had the pleasure of Corresponding some times, but suppose his being there is uncertain.

I cannot introduce to yo a more firm Freind to his Country than Mr Sterrit, who woud gladly have Marchd as a Volunteer to New York, coud he have engaged the whole or the Majority of the Indepent Company of this Place whereof he is Captn to have gone with. His Brother a Youth of 19 Years who is now a Prisoner at Long Isld Commanded the Company whereof he is First Lieutt with remarkable Bravery – He is One of the most hopeful Young men I know. –

Mr Sterrit is accompanied by Capt Nathl Smith [captain of the] First Artillery Company of this State, And Comdr of Fort Whetstone on this River, an excellent Officer, and worthy Man. He told me he was formerly of yr Acquaintance. He is certainly no Dishonor to your Country from whence he came. Pardon this freedom & believe me to be with great Respect for your Person & Character [&c.]

VICE ADMIRAL CLARK GAYTON TO THE CHEVALIER FRANCIS DE MONTEIL[1]

[Copy] On board His Britanick Majestys Ship the Antelope in Port Royal Harbor Jamaica

Sir/ September 18th 1776

I have the honor of your Letter by Monsr Desfarge de la Valtiere, your Second Lieutenant concerning a Vessel belonging to His Britanick Majestys Rebellious Colonies in North America which has been Seiz'd by his Ship the Squirrel

I beg leave to acquaint you that after the repeatd assurances which have been given from all the Foreign Powers to His Britanick Majesty of not Interfereing or affording protection to His Rebellious Subjects, I am greatly surpriz'd at the part of your Letter wherein you say "You flatter yourself, that I shall think it very natural for the Schooner to avail herself of the protection afford'd her by your Court" which is very contrary to the assurances subsisting between the two Crowns

In respect to this Vessel when His Britanick Majestys Ship saw her, she was a considerable distance from the Island of Hispaniola and was chased so near it before she was taken

I have always given particular directions to the Captains of the Kings Ships under my Command never to approach near any French or Spanish Possessions, but in cases of the greatest urgency (and in those Cases it has been Customary for his Most Christian Majestys Ships to come into our Ports, where they have always met with every Assistance required it being my most sanguin wish for the good understanding at present Subsisting between the two Nations to be maintain'd[])]

As this Rebel Schooner has been Seiz'd in concequence of His Britanick Majestys directions and sent into an English Port, 'tis not in my Power to deliver her up, and as 'tis a National matter must be settl'd by our respective Ministers, which I shall take the earliest oppertunity of laying before mine for my Kings information. I have the Honor to be with the greatest respect and esteem [&c.]

[Fishkill] Septr. 19th, 1776.

Capt. Samuel Tudor, one of the superintendents for building the Continental ships at Poughkeepsie, attending, delivered in a letter from General Schuyler, dated Albany Sept. 17th, 1776, and directed to Messrs. Van Zandt, Tudor and the other gentlemen to whose care the building of the frigates at Poughkeepsie is committed, wherein the General informs those gentlemen that he received a line by express from General Gates informing him that he is in the greatest distress for the cordage mentioned in a list inclosed in the said letter for the use of the row gallies, which are the greatest strength of our naval force on the lake.

Capt. Tudor requested the opinion and advice of the Convention on this subject.

Resolved, That as a naval strength on Lake Champlain is an object of the utmost importance, and will greatly contribute to the security of America, that the agents for building the ships at Poughkeepsie be directed to supply such and so much cordage as General Schuyler requires, and that this Convention will justify them to the Honourable the Continental Congress.

[New York] 19th Sept A great number of flat boats were brought up to Greenwich on the North River last night.

The Rowbuck[2] of 44 Guns came down the North River this Evening, and in passing Paulus hook, was fired at from thence — only 3 shot struck her, but she received no material damage. The other ships remain up the River in a line with our advanced post.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM ANTHONY HALSTED, R.N., TO PHILIP STEPHENS[1]

Jersey, Hospital Ship, off Red Hook near New York.
Sir, 19th September 1776.

You will be pleased to acquaint my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, That I arrived with his Majesty's Ship under my command at Hallifax the 7th July, in a distressed situation after a tedious and fatigueing passage of nine Weeks.

We parted Company with the Commodore the 28th of May in a heavy Gale of Wind westerly, and we by our account about 330 Leagues to the Westward of the Start. the Ship complaining much in all her Upper works fore and aft, but more particularly forward; was under the necessity of fraping her in four or five different places, two across the Forecastle the others in the Waist. The weakness of the Ship forward encreased and became very alarming so that it was absolutely necessary something should be done to relieve her. On the 29th in the Morning I consulted with my Officers and it was unanimously agreed to cut away the Bower Anchors, and to stave and throw overboard the flat botom'd Boat. after which we experienc'd a most sensible alteration in the Ship for the better, for before, every lee Lurch that she took we had the disagreable prospect, of seeing the upper Works of the Forecastle carried away with the Anchors, And had the Gale continued twenty four hours longer, I will venture to assert that we should not have had a Mast standing, for both main and fore Channel Bolts work'd out in such a manner, that I myself hauled one of the main ones out by hand. — The 31st we join'd the Commodore, at which time I was much indisposed, but communicated to him by Letter the state and Condition of the Ship, and at the same time enclosed a Copy of the visible defects taken by the Carpenter the Day before agreable to my Order. — He ordered his Carpenter on board, with his Mate, and with the Carpenter of the Jersey to survey the Ship, A Copy of which Survey, with a Copy of that taken by the Carpenter of said Ship 30th May, I have delivered in to Lord Howe. — We parted Company again the 3d of July in a very thick Fogg and a strong Gale, and from the Guns that were fired supposed the Commodore had brought too with his Head to the Eastward, we being at Noon of that Day by our reckoning 30 Leagues to the westward of Cape Sambro, at half past 7 that evening it cleared up and only one Sail in sight. The next Morning I opened my Rendezvous and found it to be for Halifax. I accordingly made the best of my way, and arrived there as before mentioned where I stayed twenty Days to refit If I may be allowed to give it that appelation. — We sailed from thence the 27th and Anchored without the Barr off Sandy Hook the 14th of August in the Evening, and on Saturday forenoon joined Lord Howe off Staten Island. — This is the first opportunity I have had of transmitting to their Lordships any account of the Ship since my leaving England, but do suppose his Lordship may have made some mention of her to the Board of Admiralty by a Pacquet which sailed from Sandy Hook a-fortnight since and that so suddenly that she was under way in two Hours after I received the intelligence and the Jersey at that time laying four Leagues distance from her, So that I flatter myself their Lordships will not think me guilty of any omission. – I am with all due respect. Sir [&c.]

Wm Anthy Halsted.

COMMISSIONERS FOR RESTORING PEACE TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN [1]

My Lord New York 20th Septr 1776

We are sorry to inform your Lordship that the Infatuation and Perseverance of the People and their Leaders, have hitherto afforded no opportunity for the effectual Operation of the Civil Commission with which His Majesty hath been pleased to charge us:

The Determination of the Congress to discourage amongst the Colonists every Idea of Reconciliation with Great Britain, except upon their lately assumed Ground of Independency and their Assertions, insidiously circulated that the Objects of Our Commission were confined to the declaring of Peace and the granting of Pardons, as specified in the Prohibitory Act, have induced us to publish a Declaration of which the inclosed is a Copy

It is calculated Your Lordship will observe, to apprise the Colonies, that the Effect of the King's most gracious Intentions towards them, is obstructed by those in whose hands they have entrusted their Government, and that therefore it now becomes them to turn Arbitrators of their own Interests and Happiness

As this Declaration is published while the Rebel Army as well as the Province is labouring under Disappointment and many Sufferings, occasioned by the rapid and successful Progress of His Majesty's Forces, we are not without hopes of its producing some Good, although we do not yet perceive any Symptom of that Disposition to Allegiance and Submission to legal Government which would justify us in expecting to see the publick Tranquillity soon restored. We have the honor to be My Lord &c

CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE TO CAPTAIN JOHN YOUNG[1]

Sir [Philadelphia] September 20th 1776

The Sloop Independence of which you are appointed Commander being now laden, compleatly fitted, armed, victualled and manned, You are to proceed with said Sloop and Cargo for the Island of Martinico putting into Fort Royal or St Piers just as the winds and other circumstances point out for the best. On your arrival at either place you must enquire for Mr William Bingham our resident in that Island, should he be at the place where you put in, deliver to him the sundry dispatches now committed to your care, should he be at any other part of the Island you will send an express to inform him of your arrival, & that you have such dispatches which you are directed to deliver into his own hands. He will then repair to you immediately, and you must comply with his Orders by landing the Cargo wherever he may direct, You must also consult with him and be advised by Mr Bingham in all things that respects the Interest or honor of the united states in the concerns of their sloop under your command. If you put into Fort Royal and Mr Bingham is not there, you must wait on the general and inform him you belong to the United States of America, ask the liberty of the Port and protection during your stay there. If you put into St Piers and dont find Mr Bingham wait on the Governor and Intendant observing the same conduct. If Mr Bingham is present he will direct what you are to do on these points. You are to consider the French and all nations but Great Britain as the Friends of these United States and conduct yourself towards them accordingly and during your stay in any French Ports be particularly attentive to the behavour and prudent conduct of your people. You are to receive on board the Sloop any arms, ammunition or other goods Mr Bingham may order receive from him also his dispatches and then proceed back for this Port. You are to consider that we are anxious for you to make an expeditious voyage, notwithstanding which as you are well armed and manned and the Sloop sails fast, we do not forbid you chasing such Vessels either going or coming as you think may become your Prizes for this purpose you have a Commission, a book containing the Resolves of Congress respecting Prizes which you must strictly conform to, and a list of the Continental agents to some of whom you must Address any Prize you take. Should Mr Bingham find it necessary to detain you any time, and he and you should think it adviseable to make a short cruize during that Time, we do not forbid it, but take care not to fall into the enemys hands. It is an Object with us that you should pick up and bring home with you as many Seamen as possible, the more the better, and you may enter all you get on the same pay and terms as those you carry out. —

You must sling our dispatches to Mr Bingham, and on your return, his to us, with a weight sufficient to sink them and always keep them ready to be thrown over board should you unfortunately be taken for you must not let these Packets fall into the enemies hands on any Account. You are to afford reliefe or assistance to any of the subjects of the united States that want it if in your power, unless proof should Appear that they are inimical to their Country and its cause. You are authorized to take, burn, Sink or destroy the Vessels and property of all British Subjects except those residing in Bermuda and New Providence, but we recommend humanity and politeness to be inseperable companions of the officers in the Continental Service. It is necessary you should be careful of the Sloop her materials and Stores, diligent in the discharge of your own duty and careful to make your officers and men perform theirs — Strict in discipline but attentive to render the service agreeable to all concerned in it.

We expect you will be frugal in expences and on your return furnish us with duplicates of your Logbook and Journal giving also a Satisfactory Account of your voyage, and when you approach this Coast, keep a good look out as you may expect many of the enemies Ships will be Cruizing for plunder. If you cannot get in here you may push for any of the Inlets or other place of safety the nearer to this the better. We are Sir [&c.]

Cumberland Dugan to the Maryland Council of Safety[1]

Gentlemen. Baltimore 20th September 1776.

Having a large quantity of bread belonging to the publick on hand already bak'd, and a vessel to dispose of, that we think must answer your purpose, thought it most proper to advise you thereof. She is a large schooner that will carry about eleven hundred barrells flour, completely found ready for sea, a good sailer & as tight as a bottle, the price we ask for her is £850 – that if she will any way suite you beg you'll advise me immediately for my government, as if she does not answer you, hope very shortly to dispose of her to some people of this place; dare say the quantity of bread we have baked belonging to you, together with what Mr Spear has baked for you will intirely load this vessel, and if immediately sent out must certainly come to a good market almost any where. I myself am just now returned from Boston where I have been on a visitt to my friends there, where I found both bread & flour very scarce and high, indeed scarcely any to be got, not one barrle of sweet flour was to be had in the whole town of Boston and bad as it was sold quick at 4 Dollars p cwt: I think this Vessel of ours loaded with a cargo of bread in bulk to go to Boston must answer well with a little flour, and for return could purchase West India goods of any Kind very low, as they are falling still lo[w]er every day from the great quantitys of prizes that are constantly comeing in to them. I was myself for several days at there public sales of prize cargoe, where I saw great quantitys of sugars, spiritt rum, Coffee, cotton, &c. sell very low indeed or if them articles would not answer it appears to me there might a great deal of money be made on a cargo of salt. I see it sell in Boston at 4/ p bushl by the quantity, and it was thought by most people there it would be lower, as a great many of their vessels were gone after salt, thinking it will be scarce and dear which is thought there will not be the case, that I realy believe salt may be bought as low in Boston as any where we can safely send for it, as there is many circumstances in favour of a vessels getting there safe. from there good forts on Nantaskett and other heigths near which no Kings ships will dare to come, and their coast is so much of an iron bound one (so caled) that no ship will dare to lay off there this time of the year. This vessel of ours will carry about four or five thousand bushells of salt, which would be a very handsome back freight, and she is extreamly well adapted for the purpose of carrying salt being a very boyent vessel that will not load too deep. I hope Gent you wo'nt imagine I intend to dictate to you what should be done in these matters, as you undoubtedly do know much better than I Can think or imagine; but several of my friends here advised me to write to this purpose, what I knew of these matters, which I hope you wo'nt take amiss, as so great a quantity of bread being ready and much in our way, want to make more room & a get it out while they bay is clear. Your favouring me with a line on this subject immediately will very much obledge me, and if I can in any wise serve you in loading this vessel shall be extreamly glad of the favour, in which hope I act to your approbation in every respect. Gent your [&c.]

[Extract] Westerly 21st Septr 1776

Sir We arriv'd at N York 13th current, in Concert with John Collins Esqr waited on General Washington with the other Genl Officers, just after Dinner 3 Frigates & a 40 Gun Ship (as if they meant to attack the City) sail'd up the East River under a gentle Breeze towards Hell-Gate & kept up an incessant Fire, assisted wth the Cannon at Governrs Island: The Batteries from the City return'd the Ships the like Salutation: 3 Men agape, idle Spectators had the Misfortune of being killed by one Cannon Ball, the other Mischief sufferd on our Side was inconsiderable saving the making a few Holes in some of the Buildings; one Shot struck within 6 Foot of Genl Washington, as He was on Horseback riding into the Fort.

At Parting with his Excellency [Washington] Saturday Afternoon 15th Instant [sic 14th] He promised us a Letter to yr Excellency. . . But the Trobles gathering fast from the Landing of the Enemy under the Thunder of their Cannon which was on Sunday Morning 16th [sic 15th] his Excellency from his closest Attention to his Command then found it impracticable. . . .

. . . on Sunday-Morning 5 more Frigates saild up the East River, anchor'd near the 4 former (which with Wallace, who was there before, augmented their Number to 10) at the same Time 3 Capital Ships went up the North River, causing a most tremendous Firing, assisted with the Cannon on Governor's Island, discharging to no Purpose against our Batteries, tho' they made a few Holes in some of the Buildings, which Firing was return'd on our Side as well as could be from the Scantiness, in & about the City, of heavy Cannon – The Bulk having been carried to a Hill about 4½ Miles South of Kings Bridge, whereat an impregnable Fortress was begun & well nigh perfected, & which could not be annoyed by the Enemies Ships.

Dear General Bay St Amont Sepr 21st 1776

My last was the 18th Inst by Lieut [Benjamin] Whitcomb, the next day at Noon weighed Anchor with the whole Fleet. which Arived here the same Evening, this is a fine bay. & good Anchorage, two Leagues to the No wd of Cumberland Head, on the West shore, the Liberty was ordered to Cruise of[f] the Isle a La Motte untill 2 oClock, & then Join the Fleet On her return, opposite to the Isle a La Motte, a Frenchman came down, & desired to be taken on board, the Capt Suspected him, & went near the shore with his Boat Stern in, Swivels pointed & match lited, the Frenchman waded near a rod from the Shore, but when he found he could decoy the Boat No further he made a Signal, to the Enemy when three, or four, hundred, Indians, Canadians & Regulars rose up & fired, on the Boat, they wounded three Men, the Boat returned the Fire with their Swivels, & Small Arms, & the Schooner fired several Broad sides of Grape, before they dispersed tho several were seen to fall — On their way down They Discovered a large Party of Savages on the Western Shore, they imagined Two, or three hundred — they have a large Number of light Burch Canoes, with which they can pass us in the night, & in the day Time Secure them in the Bushes, it will be Dangerous sending down, single Boats, I have Sent up the Liberty to Guard the Return Boats & bring down the Medicine, &c the Surgeons can be of no use to us without, Capt [David] Hawl[e]y is appointed to the Royal Savage, I must renew my request For more Seamen, & Gunners, there is a plenty of the former in the Army, provided they have liberty of Inlisting, tho it is a bad prescident, this emergency will Justify the measure—

I am greatly at a loss what could have retarded the Gallies so long, I verily believe If we are Attack'd this fall by the Enemy. it will be in the Course of a week — or Ten days — the want of those Gallies may decide the Contest against Us —

I am surprised our Intelligence from New York is so imperfect, I hope we shall soon hear the particulars — The Tobacco Papers were delivered me I will endeavour to send them soon The Articles I wrote for in my last. I hope will be Sent if possible. — I have sent up Mr Dunn to Collect. the Shot. & other Articles I want, & bring them Down — We had an exceeding hard Gale here the 20th & a prodigious sea. the Gallies Rode it out beyond my expectation, I have sent Two Boats, to sound round the Island Valcouer, who report, that, it is an exceeding fine, Secure harbour I am determined to go there the first fair Wind, as the fleet will be secure. & we can discover the Enemy If. they Attempt to pass us up the East Bay On the Back of Grand Isle — I make no doubt you will approve of this measure, If. not I will return to any of my former Stations, We are as well prepared for the Enemy, as our Circumstances will Alow, they will never have it in their power to Surprise us — the Men are Daily trained to the Exercise of their Guns, & if Powder was plenty I would, wish to have them fire at a Mark with their Great Guns Often — at present we cannot Aford it — I wish the Workmen could all be employed, on One Gally & finish her first, that Something might be Added to the fleet I cannot help thinking that they are hindering each other, their was all the Materials sufficie[nt]for One when I came away, I hope they will Not mount Twelve pounders. if Eighteens, or Twenty fours, can be procured — I am with great respect & esteem [&c.]

Die Sabbati, 9 HO. A.M.
[Fishkill] Septr. 21st, 1776.

A letter from Genl. Washington was read and follows, vizt:

Head-Quarters,
Heights of Harlem, Septr. 20th, 1776.

Gentn. — Having reason to believe the enemy will attempt to gall us with their ships of war from the North river as soon as they are ready to open their batteries against the front of our lines, which we expect them to erect with great industry, I beg leave to mention that I think it may be of immense consequence if your Honourable Body will order down some of your fire ships, which may lay just above the obstructions in the river under cover of the guns of Fort Washington, where they will be ready to act in case the ships should attempt to come up.

Hurried and surrounded with a thousand things, I have only time to add, that

I have the honor to be, with great esteem, Gentn. [&c.]

Go. Washington.

On reading the letter of His Excellency General Washington of the 20th instant, requesting this Convention to order down some of their fire ships to lay just above the obstructions in the Hudson's river.

Resolved, That the two fire ships charged by Captain [John] Hazelwood, be immediately despatched to Fort Washington, or near it, And,

Ordered, That Gilbert Livingston, Esqr. or any other member of the committee for obstructing the navigation of Hudson's river who may now be at Poughkeepsie, do immediately despatch the two fire ships prepared and charged by Captain Hazelwood, with proper persons to navigate them under cover of the guns of said fort, and there deliver them to the care of such person as His Excellency Genl. Washington has or shall appoint to take charge of them.

Ordered, That a copy of the above resolution and order be despatched to his Excellency General Washington, and another copy to Gilbert Livingston, Esqr.

A draft of a letter to His Excellency, was read and approved, and is in the words following, to wit:

Sir — The Convention have received your Excellency's letter of Septr. 20th, and have, in consequence, entered into the enclosed resolution, which I am directed to transmit. We are sorry that it is not in our power to send down more than two fire ships, as they have no more charged in such a manner as to be dependend on.

A committee of correspondence has been established by the Convention, for the purpose of communicating to and receiving intelligence from the army. The express will receive orders to call upon your Excellency daily, and any commands or intelligence which your Excellency may think proper to transmit, will be thankfully received and punctually attended to, by

Your Excellency's [&c.]

By order.

To His Excellency Genl. Washington.

Die Sabbati, 4 ho. P.M. Septr. 21st, 1776.

A letter from Thos. Randall, Esqr. one of the marine committee, dated at Elizabeth Town, the 7th Septr. was read and filed.

A letter from Thos. Quigley, mate of the privateer Putnam, dated at Cranberry inlet, the fourth instant, was also read and filed.

The petition of the officers and mariners of the said vessel of war, was also read and filed.

It thereby appears that there is a mutiny on board of the said vessel, and the mariners and crew demand their wages and refuse to continue in the said vessels under the command of Capt. Thos. Creiger.

Ordered, That those papers be deferred for consideration.

Resolved, That the secret committee for obstructing the navigation of Hudson's river, be empowered and directed to purchase and impress for the service of this State, any number of vessels not exceeding six, which they shall think best calculated for the purpose of completing the obstructions in Hudson's river opposite Mount Washington; that they cause an appraisement of said vessels to be made by persons under oath, in the most equitable and expeditious manner possible, in order that satisfaction may hereafter be made by this Convention to the owners of such vessels; and it is recommended to the said committee to request the services of Capt. Thomas Greenell in ballasting and navigating, and delivering those vessels to Capt. Cook at Fort Washington.

Resolved, That the said committee be directed to send all the oak plank (which they have in their possession) to Mount Washington, with the utmost despatch.

Diary of Frederick Mackenzie [1]

[New York] 20th Sept – [sic 21st] A little after 12 o'Clock last night a most dreadful fire broke out in New York, in three different places in the South, and windward part of the town. The Alarm was soon given, but unfortunately there was a brisk wind at South, which spread the flames with such irresistible rapidity, that notwithstanding every assistance was given which the present circumstances admitted, it was impossible to check its Progress 'till about 11 this day, when by preventing it from crossing the Broad-way at the North part of the town, it was stopped from spreading any further that way, and about 12 it was so far got under that there was no danger of it extending beyond those houses which were then on fire. It broke out first near the Exchange, and burnt all the houses on the West side of Broad Street, almost as far as The City Hall, & from thence all those in Beaver Street, and almost every house on the West side of the town between the Broad way and the North River, as far as The College, amounting in the whole to about 600 houses, besides several Churches, particularly Trinity Church, the principal one in town.

New York Fire.

On its first appearance two Regiments of the 5th brigade went into town, and some time after, a great number of Seamen from the Fleet were sent on shore under proper officers by order of Lord Howe, to give assistance. About daybreak the Brigade of Guards came in from Camp, but from the absence of the regular Firemen, the bad state of the Engines, a want of buckets, and a Scarcity of Water, the efforts of the Troops and Seamen, tho' very great, could not prevent the fire from spreading in the manner it did. The first notice I had of it was from the Sentry at Genl [Francis] Smith's quarters at Mr. [Andrew] Elliot's house, who called me up about 10 Clock and said New York was on fire; on going to the window I observed an immense Column of fire & smoke, and went and called Genl Smith, who said he would follow me into town as soon as possible. I dressed myself immediately and ran into town, a distance of two miles, but when I got there the fire had got to such ahead there seemed to be no hopes of stopping it, and those who were present did little more than look on and lament the misfortune. As soon as buckets & Water could be got, the Seamen and the troops, assisted by some of the Inhabitants did what they could to arrest its progress, but the fresh wind, and the combustible nature of the materials of which almost all the houses were built, rendered all their efforts vain.

From a variety of circumstances which occurred it is beyond a doubt that the town was designedly set on fire, either by some of those fellows who concealed themselves in it since the 15th Instant, or by some Villains left behind for the purpose. Some of them were caught by the Soldiers in the very act of setting fire to the inside of empty houses at a distance from the fire; many were detected with matches and combustibles under their Clothes, and combustibles were found in several houses. One Villain who abused and cut a woman who was employed in bringing water to the Engines, and who was found cutting the handles of the fire buckets, was hung up by the heels on the spot by the Seamen. One or two others who were found in houses with fire brands in their hands were put to death by the enraged Soldiery and thrown into the flames. There is no doubt however that the flames were communicated to several houses by means of the burning flakes of the Shingles, which being light, were carried by the wind to some distance and falling on the roofs of houses covered with Shingles, (which is most generally the case at New York,) and whose Inhabitants were either absent or inattentive, kindled the fire anew. The Trinity Church, a very handsome, ancient building, was perceived to be on fire long before the fire reached the adjacent houses, and as it stood at some distance from any house, little doubt remained that it was set on fire wilfully.

During the time the Rebels were in possession of the town, many of them were heard to say they would burn it, sooner than it should become a nest for Tories – and several Inhabitants who were most violently attached to the Rebel cause have been heard to declare they would set fire to their own houses sooner than they should be occupied by The King's Troops.

No assistance could be sent from the Army 'till after daybreak, as the General was apprehensive the Rebels had some design of attacking the Army.

It is almost impossible to conceive a Scene of more horror and distress than the above. The Sick, The Aged, Women, and Children, half naked were seen going they knew not where, and taking refuge in houses which were at a distance from the fire, but from whence they were in several instances driven a second and even a third time by the devouring element, and at last in a state of despair laying themselves down on the Common. The terror was encreased by the horrid noise of the burning and falling houses, the pulling down of such wooden buildings as served to conduct the fire, (in which the Soldiers & Seamen were particularly active and useful) the rattling of above 100 waggons, sent in from the Army, and which were constantly employed in conveying to the Common such goods and effects as could be saved; — The confused voices of so many men, the Shrieks and cries of the Women and children, the seeing the fire break out unexpectedly in places at a distance, which manifested a design of totally destroying the City,[2] with numberless other circumstances of private misery and distress, made this one of the most tremendous and affecting Scenes I ever beheld.

The appearance of the Trinity Church, when completely in flames was a very grand sight, for the Spire being entirely framed of wood and covered with Shingles, a lofty Pyramid of fire appeared, and as soon as the Shingles were burnt away the frame appeared with every separate piece of timber burning, until the principal timbers were burnt through, when the whole fell with a great noise.

[On board H.M.S. Eagle, off Bedloe's Island]

21st [September]. – This morning about one o'clock the officer of the watch called me, and gave information of a house in New York being on fire. I immediately went on deck, observed the fire to spread and catch several houses, and saw the fire break out at different parts of the city. Sent several boats on shore to the assistance of the place. Made the signal for all lieutenants, and ordered boats from each ship for the same purpose. It was evident from many circumstances that the city was maliciously set on fire, by the fires breaking out at different places at the same time; from lath wood, split in small slips, tarred and brimstoned, with tow and all manner of combustibles being placed in different parts of the city. Several people were taken up, against whom the proof seemed very plain. These the sailors, soldiers, and mob immediately put to death; many others, perhaps thirty or forty, were put in jail on strong suspicion. This evening the fire is entirely out; but had the wind come to the westward and blown fresh, as it did when it first broke out, the whole city would have been consumed. The loss is not yet accurately ascertained, but I suppose there may be about one-third or one-sixth of the city burned.

JOURNAL OF BENJAMIN BOARDMAN[1]

[Paulus Hook, September] 21st.

At 2 this morning, we were waked by the guards, who informed us that New York was on fire. As the fire began at the South East end of the city, a little East of the grand battery, it was spread by a strong South wind, first on the East River, and then Northward, across the Broad Way, opposite to the Old English Church (If I mistake not the name) from thence it consumed all before it, between Broad Way and the North River, near to the college, laying about one third part of the city in ashes [(] is the opinion of those best acquainted with it) ; and had not the wind as it veered to the West, died away, the remainder of that nest of vipers would have been destroyed.

This evening a seaman who said he belonged to Providence, that he was taken and obliged to fight against his countrymen on board the Roebuck, made his escape by swimming from New York to this place — he informed that the men on board the Roebuck were very sickly, that they had lost 100 since they left the Capes of Virginia. He also gave notice, that preparations had been made to attack this post — that a number of large ships were to come up and endeavour to silence our batteries, while a large body of troops in boats (which we discovered on the opposite shore above us [)], and endeavour to cut off our retreat — that it was to have been executed this morning, but the fire prevented.[2]

Sir Philada. Septr. 21st. 1776

Your several letters of the 4th. 15th & 26th August to this Committee have been duly received with the several enclosures and the whole have been laid before the Congress. We can therefore communicate that satisfaction which we dare say it must afford you to know that you have so far obtained the approbation of that august Body

It is not necessary that we shou'd enter into minute reply to the Contents of your letters, therefore we shall only Notice such parts as seem to require it

Capt Wickes's behaviour meets the approbation of his Country & Fortune seems to have had an Eye to his Merit when She Conducted his three Prizes safely in, You made a very proper use of his engagement, by your Question to the General and it is extreamly satisfactory that our Prizes may be carried into & Protected in the French Ports, but hitherto the Congress have not thought proper to entrust Blank Commissions beyond Seas, Neither can their Resolve for bringing Prizes into some of these States for Condemnation be dispensed with. These matters are now under Consideration of a Committee & shou'd any alteration take place you shall be informed of it. We are bound to return thanks to His Excellency the General for the information he authorized you to give us, as mentioned in your letter of the 4th. & particularly for his disposition to favour our Commerce in Port & Protect it at Sea and likewise for that Concern he expressed at not having it in his power to assist us with the Arms & Powder we requested You will therefore, signify to His Excellency that this Committee entertain the warmest sentiments of Esteem & respect for his person & Character, and of Gratitude for His Favourable attention to the Concerns of our much Injured Country, that we request the Continuance of His Friendship and hope during your residence at martinico there will be many opportunities of benifiting by His favourable disposition — particularly in Countenancing you in the purchase & Exportation of Arms, Ammunition & Cloathing —

We are not Surprized that admiral Youngs letter should have altered the Generals Sentiments respecting Convoys, but we esteem much his spirited Answer to the admiral which may probably be productive of some altercation. We like well your proposal for a Constant intercourse by Packets and the Sloop Independence Capt Jno Young is now Sent on that Service in which we hope she will be successful and Continue. more of the like kind shall follow and probably this may be found the best Method of supporting our intercourse with Europe and as these Vessells are properly Commissioned we cannot see any Impropriety in fitting out Tenders with Copys of their Commissions provided the Commanding officers of those Tenders are really officers belonging to the Vessell whose Commission they bear, but the Prizes must be sent to America for Condemnation (unless the Cargoes are perishable & in such Case if properly Certifyed we suppose it might be best to make Sale of them —

We thank you for Mr. [Richard] Prices Pamphlet[2] and wish you woud write to Mr Deane & Mr [Thomas] Morris to Contrive you a constant & ample supply of the English, Irish & French News Papers Political Publications &c. We send you by this opportunity The Journals of Congress as farr as Published & the News papers to this time.

We received the Arms & Powder by the Reprisal They came Seasonably & we wish there had been more of them. The Secret Committee will supply you with Funds for the payment for these & more Since the arrival of

Ld Howe & General Howe in the neighbour hood of New York with their Forces, they have been rather too strong for our People to Cope with and Consequently have succeeded in their Enterprizes which however have not been of that Importance that they will probably represent to the World, they have been ten tor twelve Weeks with a powerfull fleet & a Numerous Army well provided & appointed with every thing necessary and what have they done,

They have got possession of three small Islands on the Coast of America, these were hardly disputed with them & yet if every Acre of American Territory is to Cost them in the same proportion, the Conquest would ruin all Europe. Our Army are now Collected to a point, and are strongly entrenched on New York Island & at Kingsbridge so that in Fact Mr Howe is Hemmed in as he was at Boston, except that he has more Elbow Room & a powerful Fleet commanding an extensive Inland Navigation. Our Northern Army are strongly Posted at Tyconderoga & expect they will be able to keep Mr Burgoyne from Crossing the Lakes this Campaigne. We are worse off for Woolen Cloathing for our Army than any other matter and you must exert your utmost Industry to buy & send us every thing of that kind you can meet with in Martinico or any of the Neighbouring Islands. We have gone into this detail of our present situation, that you may have a just Idea of it & be able to make proper Representations to the General & Inhabitants of Martinico

We Recommended the French officers that came with Capt Wickes to Congress & the Board of War have provided for them to their satisfaction, on this Subject your remarks have been very proper. officers unacquainted with our Language cannot be useful therefore we do not wish to encourage such to come amongst us, at the same time Men of Merit & abilities will always meet with suitable encouragement. You must therefore pursue the line you set out in, give general discouragement to those that apply & recommend none but such as the General will pledge his word for and you may even intimate to him that if too many come over the Congress will not know what to do with them.

JOURNAL OF THE SOUTH CAROLINA GENERAL ASSEMBLY [1]

[Charleston] Saturday the 21st Day of September. 1776

Message from the President by the Clerk of the Legislative Council.
Mr Speaker and Gentlemen,

On considering Captain Lamprieres Letter herewith sent and other Representations respecting the Ship Prosper it was thought expedient at the Time of the late Invasion to apply her Guns to the use of some of the Batteries and put her out of the way of Danger.

In my Opinion it will be most for the Public Advantage to sell her or employ her in Trade, but I think my self not authorized to do so you will therefore Judge in what manner it will be best to dispose of her

The appointing Commissioners to superintend the naval affairs of this State would I hope place them upon a better Footing than the present—I therefore recommend it as a matter worthy of your attention

Ordered That Captain Turpins Letter of the 16th Instant addressed to this House laid before them on the 17th Instant and then ordered to lie on the Table be now read

And the same being read accordingly is as followeth

Honourable Gentlemen

Having had the Honour to serve in your navy with some Reputation—think it my Duty to acquaint you before I quit that Service with my Reasons for so doing –

The Navy of England have ever been invincible from no other Cause than the great Encouragement they give their Officers and

Three Eights to the Captain

Governor Craister Greathead to Vice Admiral James Young [1]

(Copy) St Christophers 21st September 1776.

Sir I have received your Letter of the 19th Instant and am extremely sorry to acquaint you, that the Accounts you have had of the dreadfull Disasters which have happened in this Island are too true, for on the 5th Instant about one or two in the Morning a Fire broke out in the Town of Basseterre and from the fury and continuance of its Progress consumed all the Storehouses except one or two, and most valuable Buildings therewith the Provisions and Lumber contained in them and their adjoining yards, being nearly the whole that were for Sale in this Island, and in the Night of the next Day great Mischief was done by Inundations from excessive Rain and a Storm of Wind that blew at the same Time has injured the Canes and Ground Provisions tho' no Buildings were thrown down.

These Calamities which gave great Occasion to apprehend a Famine, induced me to grant my Licence dated the 9th. Instant, for two Vessels named therein, to bring Provisions and Lumber from St Eustatius, but limitted the Continuance of such Licence to fourteen Days from the Date. I heartily wish the immediate Wants of the Inhabitants may be supplied by this Means.

Your Attention to them under their great Distresses merits their gratefull Acknowledgements, and should they point out to me any Method whereby you may be serviceable I will most readily communicate the same to you.

The Apprehensions of many that an Insurrection was intended from some Fires happening in two or three Estates at the Time the Town was in Flames, occasioned me to write to you the same Day by a hired Vessel to desire, if his Majesty's Service wou'd admit it, you woul'd be so good to Order one of His Majesty's Vessels, to repair with all convenient Dispatch to our Assistance, but as we have heard Nothing of the hired Vessel since I must suppose she was lost in the Storm on her passage to Antigua. I have the honour to be Sir [&c.]

COMMODORE ESEK HOPKINS TO THE CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE[1]

Gentlemen Providence Septr 22nd 1776.

Since my last I have been to See Governor Trumbull on the business of his Letter to me, a Copy of which you have Inclosed — from there I went to

New London which place I left the 19th instant – Captn Hacker is there with the Hampden, he has Graved her and she will be Ready for Sea in a few days but not full mann'd – have Order'd her round to Newport there to join the Alfred who I expect will be Clean'd and ready for the Sea in a Week – The two Frigates here will be ready for Sea in a week or 10 days, but it will be very difficult to mann any of them without you will make the Chance of Prize Money as good as they get in the Privateers, which is one half and large Sums advanc'd to the People before they go to Sea –

I expect Governor Hopkins every day, hope he will bring with him the Commissions for the Officers of the New Ships – The Alfred and Hampden Shall send as soon as possible on the Station you Order'd, and if Governor Hopkins brings no other Orders for the New Frigates I think it will be the best Use they can be put too to attempt to clear the Sound with them as Governor Trumbull advises — as that if effected will give great ease to Supplying our Army near New York –

Since I wrote you there has arrived here seven or eight valuable Prizes Sent in by the Privateers out of this place — and a Brig Captn Biddle's Prize was taken by the Cerberus, a few days ago the people got onshore in their Boat, and are Sett out for Philadelphia – [2] There is a Report that a Prize Brig taken by the Columbus was Spoke with a few days ago –

Inclosed you have a List of the Privateers out of this Place, them that are call'd Letters of Marque expected to get mann'd in the French Islands – You likewise have a List of the Prizes brought in here – I am with great Respect Gentlemn [&c.]

[On board the Prison Snow Mentor] Sund: the 22nd [September] This is the 4th: Sund: of our Imprisonment. In the Morning the Seamen turn'd out at 4 oCock to bend the Sails, & make the other Preparation for geting under way, they were very Industrious most of the Morning, in making those preperations.

At about 8 oClock we had a Comfortable Breakfast of warm Chocolet, which was very agreable, in our present Cituation.

About Noon all the Ships, who had Prisoners on board with the Experiment and the Resolution, Men of War, got under way, in Order to go up toward the City, the Wind being unfair, the Ships were Obliged to beat up, & at 4 oClock came too of[f] between Red hook & Gibbit Island,[2] in midst of a very great Number of Ships, among whome is the Eagle, the Admyral, or Lord Howes Ship, which lay Just ahead of us, & the Rainbow (another large Man of War)[3] is near us on the other hand, & besides those, a number of Frigates, & other Ships of War; Here at Night we again turned in, & I Rested on my narrow plank again as well as Usual.

[Paulus Hook, September] 22d.

As no reinforcement could be sent us, we received orders this morning to remove our artillery, stores and baggage, and hold ourselves in readiness to retreat, and before night most of them were removed.

About 9 A.M. we saw the enemy troops embarking in flat bottom'd boats, about two miles above us, who appeared in large numbers on the shore, after their boats, (about 30) were full. Four ships at the same time came to sail below, and stood up towards us, but they soon came to anchor again, and the boats which had pushed off, returned back. Had they come at this time, we must either have retired and left them large quantities of artillery stores, or fought their army and navy at the same time, with our small detachment, and that under every disadvantage; but they saw fit to retire to get more strength, as appeared afterwards, tho' they could not be ignorant of our weakness, as our men were paraded every day in full view of them.

I am glad you are Sending the Sloop up to Sell, and hope you'l not delay doing it least some of the men of War now at New York Should be thought no longer necessary there, and be sent to our Capes, A Circumstance of this Sort would inevitably knock up the Sale of all kinds of Veshells, for it is the Trade they are now pushing that keeps up the demand for them, and the men of War Comeing to the Cape would put an Emd [sic end] to that Trade . . . I should have no objection to Your Sending the Schooner also — But am Doubtfull Shee is too Flat and therefore would not answer the purpose of foreign trade and of Course not sell well — If the Sloop is not Come away before you Get this Letter, would advise you to get John Bell to Come in her. He has been dealing in that way and would be of Great [use] to me in Selling her here — But if Shee is Come away and You Should Conclude to Send the Schooner pray Get him to Come in her — I had some Convention [sic conversation] with Bell while in Town, and he promised to Call on You Concerning the Sale of them . . .

CAPTAIN CHARLES DOUGLAS, R.N., TO CAPTAIN PHILEMON POWNOLL, R.N.[1]

Dear Sir

Having received yours of the 19th I have the pleasure of assuring you that the Inflexible, the prowess of which will give us the dominion of Lake Champlain beyond a doubt; will be ready to sail with the Expedition: the dispatch which is making with her is really amazing! Some dozens of Carpenters work at her as Carpenters. The Gondolo cuts a very good appearance and is to carry Six Nines and (in the Bow) an Army 24 pounder — The Radeau would be more formidable did she carry her Six Battering 24 pounders below a little higher — I find by Mr [James Richard] Dacres that in the event of absolute necessity obliging you to winter in Canada you'd prefer one of the Three Rivers for the Blonde but from the Report of Captain [Joseph] Nunn's Survey there of which I send you I fear there will not be water sufficient for her — Tho' to prevent mistakes at all events I send you the St Peter Brig and Chabotes Sloop I cannot procure a state of the Provisions for the Army from Sorel to this place however it must do good to send up more be that as it may Hoping to call upon you some Eight or Ten days hence I ever remain with the most sincere esteem and perfect confidence Dear Sir [&c.]

JAMES BOWDOIN TO JOHN HANCOCK[1]

Sir Boston, Septr. 23. 1776

I have the honour to transmit to Congress the enclosed Resolve of the General Court passed the 18th. Instant, relative to the fitting for the Sea, the Continental Frigate Hancock of 32 Guns, now at Newbury Port. If this Frigate with the other at the same Port could be expeditiously fitted out, it is very probable several of the Enemy's Cruizers, which have much infested our Coast, would be soon brought in, and made a valuable addition to the naval strength of the united States..

You will please to lay the said Resolve before the hon'ble Congress, whose Speedy determination, corresponding with the Resolve, may be attended with many happy Consequences. In the mean time every aid in our power will be given to the Continental Agent, for getting the said Frigates in readiness with the utmost Expedition. — In the name of the Council of the State of Massachusetts Bay I am with great Respect [&c.]

MAJOR GENERAL HORATIO GATES TO MAJOR GENERAL PHILIP SCHUYLER[1]

Dear General Ticonderoga September 23d 1776

Inclosed, I send you General Arnold's Letter of the 18th together with the Examination of Sergeant [Eli] Stiles The General makes no Doubt the Enemy will soon pay him a Visit: I hope not before we get the Row Gallies to his Assistance: — then succeed or fail, we have done our best. It is a lamentable Case that our Gallies must wait for Cordage and for Gun Carriages to be completed. So long ago as the Middle of July I acquainted the Congress, that we were necessitated to make all the Carriages upon the Spot. Surely, a Supply might have been sent us before this Day, to provide against the worst. It will be proper to send all the Troops that are below to Lake George and Skenesborough and direct the Militia to be every where in Readiness to march to us upon the first Alarm. The powder Lead and Flints, I wrote for so long ago is not yet, even in part arrived. Pray hurry it up. The Moments are precious, and not one of them should be lost. I have said much to Major [Henry Brockholst] Livingston,[2] but my Hands are too full to write more. I am Dear General [&c.]

[Extract] Tyonderoga 23d September 1776.

. . . I also wrote to the General [Schuyler], pressing him in the most Earnest manner, to forward us every necessary Succour, both of Men & Materials. Believe me, dear Sir, no man Alive could be more Anxious for the Welfare of you & Your Fleet, than General Waterbury, & myself; we are, Early & Late, labouring to get the Gallies to your Assistance; one will Sail Thursday at farthest, & the Two Others, we hope, on Saturday. It is the Blacksmiths Work that has delay'd us somuch, notwithstanding we have got more Forges, and altho, with different Gangs of Men, they are Work'd Night & Day . . .

MEMOIRS OF MAJOR GENERAL WILLIAM HEATH[1]

[Harlem, September] 22d. – [to September] 23d. — Two seamen, belonging to La Brune, a British ship of war, which lay near Montresor's Island, deserted, and came to our General's quarters; and informed him, upon examination, that the British had then but a few men on the island, stating the number; that the piece of cannon, which had been put on the island, was taken back again, on board La Brune; that there were a number of officers at the house, in which there was a considerable quantity of baggage deposited, &c. Our General supposed that these troops might be easily taken; and, having called the General Officers of his division together, took their opinion, who all coincided with him in sentiment. He then communicated his intention to the Commander in Chief, who gave it his approbation. Two hundred and forty men were destined for this enterprise: the command was given to Lieut. Col. Michael Jackson, of the Massachusetts line, with Majors

[Samuel] Logan and ——, whose name cannot be recollected, of the New-York troops. They were to embark on board three flat-boats, covered by a fourth with a detachment of artillery, with a light three-pounder, in case it should be found necessary in retreating from the island. The mode of attack was settled, and every circumstance secured, to promise success. They were to fall down Haarlem Creek with the ebb. The time was so calculated, that the young flood was to be so much made, at the break of day, as to cover the flats at the island, sufficiently for the boats to float. Matters being thus settled, our General ordered the two sailors to be brought in: he then told them that in consequence of their information, an enterprise against the British troops on Montresor's Island was to take place that night; that he had ordered them to be kept in safe custody until the next morning, when, if their declarations respecting the state of the British on the island proved to be true, he would give them a passport to the back country, whither they wished to go; but, in case their information was false, he would order them hanged immediately, as spies; that he gave them the opportunity, if they had made a wrong statement to him, then to correct it. They both answered, with perfect composure, that they would cheerfully submit to the condition. Major Thomas Henly was now one of our General's Aids-de-camp. He importuned that he might go with the detachment. He was refused, and told that he had no business there; that he could exercise no command. He grew quite impatient, returned again to the General's room, and addressed him: "Pray, Sir, consent to my going with the party — let me have the pleasure of introducing the prisoners to you tomorrow." All his friends present advised him not to go. The General finally consented. The troops, at the hour assigned, embarked. Our General informed them, that he, with others, would be spectators of the scene, from a certain point near Haarlem Creek. [23d] Notice had been given to the guards and pickets on the York Island side, not to hail the party as they went down. Unfortunately, the lower centinel had not been so instructed. He was nearly opposite to the point where our General was to be; and just at the instant when he arrived, had challenged the boats, and ordered them to come to the shore. From the boats they answered, "Low! we are friends." The challenge was repeated. The answer was, "We tell you we are friends — hold your tongue." A bounce into the water was heard; and instantly Maj. [Thomas] Henly came wading to the shore, stepped up to our General, catched him by the hand, and said, "Sir, will it do?" Our General, holding him by the hand, replied, "I see nothing to the contrary;" to which Henly concluded by saying, "Then it shall do." He waded back to his boat, and got in. The centinel called again: "If you don't come to the shore, I tell you I'll fire." A voice from some one in the boats, was, "Pull away!" The boats went on and the centinel fired his piece. The boats reached the island almost at the moment intended, just as the glimmer of dawn was discoverable. The three field-officers were in the first boat. Their intention, on the moment of landing, was, for the two seconds in command to spring, the one to the right, and the other to the left, and lead on the troops from the other two boats, which were to land on each side of the first boat. The field-officers landed, and the men from their boat. The enemy's guard charged them, but were instantly driven back. The men in the other two boats, instead of landing, lay upon their oars. The British, seeing this, returned warmly to the charge. The Americans, finding themselves thus deserted, returned to their boat; but not until Lieut. Col. [Michael] Jackson received a musket-ball in his leg, and Maj. Henly, as he was getting into the boat, one through his heart, which put an instant end to his life. The boat joined the others, and they all returned, having, in the whole, about 14 killed, wounded and missing; Maj. Henly deeply regretted. Had only one of the other boats landed her men, the success would have been very probable; but the two would have insured an execution of the whole plan, in the opinion of all concerned. The delinquents in the other boats were arrested, and tried by court-martial, and one of the Captains cashiered.

On the night of the 23d, the British got possession of the works of Paulus Hook. The Americans had previously taken off all the cannon and stores.

[New York] 23d Sept – At 1 o'Clock this day, the 3rd Battalion of Light Infantry, and 2nd and 6th Brigades, marched to Greenwich in order to embark for the attack of Paulus hook. Three Ships of War came up at the same time, and anchored off the principal Battery, at which they fired a few shot, but none of the Rebels appearing, the 57th Regiment only received orders to embark; which they did and soon after landed without any opposition. They immediately took possession of the Peninsula, and all the Rebel works thereon, in which they found 2 32 prs, and forty Casks of biscuit. The possession of this post secures the principal anchorage in the North River, and renders the communication with the North part of the town, by water, safe.

[On board H.M.S. Eagle] Monday, 23d. Septr. The Roebuck, the Tartar, the Emerald, & the Carcass Bomb, went up to Powley's Hook, and took it without Molestation. The Rebels have raised considerable Works there also, and have as meanly deserted them. They fired 3 Random Shot only, and retired long before our headmost Ship could come near them. I was at New York at the time; and it was a pleasant Scene to view the Ships and the Debarkation; and the more pleasing to me, as no Blood was shed on the Occasion.

[Paulus Hook, September] 23d.

At 1 o'clock P.M. having removed every thing of value, we were ordered to retreat from the Hook. As soon as we began our march, four ships came up and anchored near the shore around the Hook; at the same time a number of boats, and floating batteries, came down from just above New York; the latter run up into the cove, opposite the causeway, that leads to Bergen. After taking a considerable time to see that there was no body to hurt them, they began a most furious cannonade on our empty works, which continued till they had wearied themselves. In a word, they dared to come much nearer, and displayed the boasted British valor in much brighter colours; than ever they had while there remained a single man to oppose them. Mean while our little battalion retreated with drums beating, and colours flying, to Bergen; and before night the brave Britons ventured on shore, and took possession of our evacuated works, where they have taken every precaution to prevent our formidable detachment from returning and driving them from a post which with so great a display of heroism, they have got possession of.

I received your letter, am sorry to find you cou'd not comply with my request. You say the Congress never tenderd a Parole to any Officer that was inconsistant with his Duty and Circumstances to sign. The Parole tendered to Mr [George] Ball and my self came from the Committee of Safety, a Copy of which I wou'd have sent you, but the officer took it back with him, but belive me Sir no officer cou'd sign it with propriety. Mr Ball and my self will esteam it a Singular favour if Mr Morris will interced and send us a Parole that we can sign as officers in His Majestys Navy. We offer'd to sign the Parole given by the officers now Prisoners at York but was refus'd it. I thought it very hard as we was to reside with them, A Copy of which I beg leave to inclose to you; likewise a letter for Lord Howe I hope you will send it to him. I apply'd to this Committee for leave to walk on the Common now and then to repair my health having had a touch of the Gout — but was refus'd that small favour. I am Sir [&c.]

CAPTAIN ANDREW SNAPE HAMOND, R.N., TO HANS STANLEY[1]

[Extract] RoeBuck, at New York, 24th Sepr 1776

As soon as I heard from Sir Peter Parker & General Clinton of their being unsuccessful in South Carolina, and that instead of joining us at Virginia as I had all along been taught to expect They had sailed for New York, and being myself most heartily tired of carrying on a sort of Piratical War, that tended in no degree to benefit his Majestys service, I consulted with Lord Dunmore, and found his Lordship equally desireous of quitting a situation that was every day growing more & more distressing; we therefore disposed of our Floating Town in the best manner we could, by sending them to places of security, and with the few Troops we had left, set sail for New York, & arrived just as the opperations against the place were beginning.

I need not tell you My Dear Sir, the pleasure I recieved in finding My Friend Lord Howe entrusted with the conduct of the American business (the most important perhaps that Great Britain ever was concerned in) because I know his abilitys for carrying on a war are not to be excelled; and am perfectly convinced, that nothing but success in the war, and reducing the Americans to the utmost extremity, will ever bring about a Peace or reconciliation, in terms the least honorable for Great Britain. It has long been too late for Negociation . . .

. . . after the Enemy abandoned Long Island they imediately saw the Town of New York was not tenable. They therefore lost no time in clearing it of all the stores valuable effects & most of the Artillery; but still kept possession of it, as well as a very considerable work, called Bunkers Hill, immediately at the back of it, and had a very large Body of Men in the Neighbourhood. Our Army took their Post opposite to Hell Gate, and Batterys were erected and feints were made to shew the Enemy that we intended landing there. However nothing was done untill the 15 Instant, when General Howe landed with about twelve thousand five hundred men at Keps's bay, a place about 3 Miles above the Town in the East River, under cover of the Fire of several of the Ships of war; without the least opposition. Notwithstanding a deep entrenchment had been made by the Enemy on every accessible part of the coast of the Island of New York, which they manned at the place, opposite to where our Troops were in Motion, The Ships no sooner began to fire than they immediately deserted their lines and took to their heels. This seemed to be a signal for those quartered in the Town & the Neighbourhood; as they all did the same, and never stoped untill they got into their works at Kingsbridge: where they at present remain. we have also taken possession of Paulus Hook, which is the point on the West Side of Hudsons River which the Enemy had very strongly fortified, where they kept a large Garrison, and where they behaved exactly as they had done at every other place where the ships had been carryed to.

From what I have said, you will concieve that we shall have no difficulty in driving the Enemy from the Sea Coast, which indeed they dont scruple to say that they will give up to you, knowing that the more possessions you have the weaker you will be in the feild: and they seem to place their entire dependance on their being able to hold out longer than we can: their Emissarys in England having assured them that the present armament is the utmost efforts of Great Britain for one year, and cannot possibly be continued a second which gives them great confidence.

It is most certain that a war was never carryed on upon more unequal terms; whilst we are treating them with openness & generosity, they are daily practising every kind of Art treachery & cruelty to destroy us. They gave us up the Town quietly, and as soon as they imagined, the People that had been driven out of it by them had again got settled in their Houses, and that a number of our Stores were got on Shore, They took the opportunity of a windy dark night, and set the Town on fire in many different places, by people that they had concealed in certain Houses for that purpose, with all kinds of combustibles prepared. . . .

We are at present perfectly quiet, and as we are making a Line of works from River to River a cross the Island about 6 or 7 miles beyond the Town, which can not be finished in less than 10 days or a fortnight, it is natural to conclude no attack will be made on the Rebel Army untill the Arrival of the last division of the Hessians, which we hourly expect to see. The Enemy has taught us how to deal with them; which is to get behind them, and shew them that their retreat is in danger; and they never will make any stand: I hope we shall never attack them any other way, unless we should, by accident get them into the open feild.

The Fleet & Army are in great spirits and tolerable good health, and for the present live exceedingly well: but the Ships are ill mann'd & very short. You can have no Idea of the Number of Men it takes to attend upon such an Army as this is; with the Ships we have here (which is two thirds of those employed in America) when all the Flat Boats, Galleys, Gondalas, [illegible] stages &c &c &c are mann'd, there is scarce Men enough left on board many of the Ships to move them. So that we really want Six or Eight Line of Battle Ships; not so much perhaps for the use of the Ships, as for their large Complements of Men for the purposes before mention'd. I have allways been of opinion that the principal means of putting an end to the war was to put an entire stop to the trade of America, which was only to be done by having a great Number of cruizers, and a constant succession of clean ships. Unfortunately this expedition against New York has necessarily required the attention of so many ships, that all the Southern Ports are now left open, and there is no doubt but they will embrace this opportunity to send away their Tobacco and Grain. The Merchants in the French & dutch west India Islands tell the Merchts at Philadelphia (many of which letters I have intercepted) that if they will send them very small fast sailing Pilot boats, they can supply them amply with Powder Arms & Cloathing at very little risk, but as they have no money to send in return, and these Vessels will not convey the bulky commodities of America, they can not devise any mode for remittances to be made, and unless that can be done the trade must drop of course. Therefore the necessity of shutting up the Ports is obvious, and the small inlets is not of so much consequence as one at first would imagine.

Dont be too sanguine my Dr Friend about the extent of the present campaign. If we can drive the Enemy from Kings bridge, Secure this Port as an establishment, and take possession of Rhode Island, for a winter Harbour for our Ships, it will perhaps be as much as will be done: and by taking the Field early next Spring, and joining the army in Canada we shall be strong enough to pursue vigorously any plan that may be adopted. I have taken the liberty to mention my Friends in the lower Counties of the Delaware and eastern shore of Maryland, as people worth cultivating, but have been told all that must be a future Consideration. However I am still of opinion that Philadelphia is an object of the first consequence to us. . . .

Philada Septemb 24th 1776

In January 1775 the Subscribers by Orders from London exported a Cargo of Flour, Wax, Staves &c. to Terceira one of the Western Islands. The Vessel in which they were shipp'd belonging to us, was purchas'd at the Island aforesaid & Payment made in Bills of Excha on London, One of which to the Value of about £800 Currency was return'd Protested for non payment in March last Since which have had no Oppertunity to send it for Recovery therefore are under the Necessity, as the only probable Means of Saving it, to purchase a small Vessell, but lest any thing should prevent our Recovering it, the Expences of the Voyage would be Considerable And as Pipe Staves are an Article in demand there & small value here & less detrimental to the State of the Colonies than Flour Should She be unhappily taken by our Enemy, induces us to request the Hble Continental Congress to Grant us Liberty to Export Pipe Staves any Quty not Exceeding Twenty Thousand which Indulgance will be Esteem'd as a Favour Confer'd on Your Frds

We hope the Brigt Cornelia & Molly Capt Lockhart arrived safe & delivered her Cargo in good order if so you will no doubt have paid for the Muskets & Powder you remitted by Capt Wickes, out of that Cargo, but if it did not arrive you will have to pay for them out of the present one, or from that of the Sloop Independence also sent to your address.

You must dispatch this Ship back as expeditiously as possible and if the Sloop Independence does not arrive whilst she is there you may remit us back in her the value of £1500 to £2000, in Good blankets and other Woolen Goods suitable for Soldiers, with some more Muskets, Powder, Gun Flints, Salt Petre, Sulphur &c just as you can obtain them to the best advantage observing that we now want Cloathing for our Troops beyond any other Articles. Geo: Meade & Co and have assured them of your best Services to their Interest not doubting but you will chearfully make good our promises and we shall embrace the earliest Opperty of sending forward more Consignments.

[Ship Defence] Off Point Look Out September 24th 1776

Gentlemen, I Honoured myself by writing you by the Amelia Tender. At that time was in hopes of having a fine Night and good run down the Bay. – At 10 P M the wind came round to the Eastward, the night had all the appearance of a gale insueing. I thought it Prudent to have the ship brought at anchor under point look out and this morning early when hove Short the small bower cable parted near the Anchor, We got the Pilot boat to the B[uo]y rope when a strain hove on it parted the bouy rope at the Crown of the Anchor, the wind blowing a fresh Gale at N W puts it out of our power to get the Anchor at this time We have left a watch bouy at the Place and sett Several places for finding it some other time. Mr [Gilbert] Middleton will have the Marks and knows the Place where the Anchor lies –

At 10 A m I purpose going down to Gwyns Island, as I'm informed by some Gentlemen on board of Sundry Anchors being there & purpose getting one I have the honor to be Gentlemen [&c.]

Captain George Cook to Commodore John Thomas Boucher [1]

Sir/ Ship Defence Septemr 24th 1776 –

Unluckily this morning our small Bower Cable parted near the Anchor. I Endeavoured to weigh it by the Bouy Rope, that also parted at the Crown of the Anchor. I have left a watch Buoy near the Place – I'm afraid it will intrude on you too far to ask your kindness, should it be calm whilst you're hear, to suffer some of your Boats to endeavour to get the Anchor for the good of the service – It will so far suffice that on seeing the Buoy, that is to shew where our Anchor lies I am Sir with Esteem [&c.]

DEPOSITION OF ELISHA COLE[1]

I Elisha Cole, master of the schooner Triton, bound from Kennebec to Cape Francois, testify and declare, that on the twentieth day of July last, I was taken by the Milford man of war, John Burr commander, who took from me my bed, bedding, sea cloaths, and every thing else, except what I had in my chest; when I got on board Capt. Burr he asked me, after taking my papers, where my money was, I answered that I had not any, then he ordered his Clerk to search me, and I was searched accordingly: He then took away my watch but returned it. Next morning the Captain called for me and demanded the key of my chest, and when opened, took every thing out of it to search for money, finding none, they gave me the chest, and ordered me to carry it to my birth. — On the twenty fifth of July we discovered a ship, which he took near Newbury-Barr. — Capt. Burr then ordered me to the fourth gun, and the opposite forward, and compelled me to go, which I was obliged to do after a long dispute, and my mate and all my men were put on the ship's books and compelled to do duty, and obliged to fight against their American brethren, as are all the prisoners they take, which I often heard the officers of the Milford declare. I left Halifax the eleventh day of August, leaving my mate and men all on board the Milford. — I told Capt. Burr our people gave the masters, mates, &c. their adventures, and it was very hard to have my all taken from me. He replied he could not do it, his people would not allow it, and swore by God he would not give me any thing. — The Yankey Hero's men, by the information of the steward and others belonging to the Milford, had but three quarters of the common allowance of provisions to seamen for their support, and no allowance of cloathing.

Elisha Cole

Suffolk, ss. Elisha Cole made oath to the truth of the above deposition, by him subscribed before me.

COMMITTEE FOR OBSTRUCTING THE HUDSON RIVER TO PETER B. LIVINGSTON [1]

Poughkeepsie, Wednesday, 25th September, 1776.

Sir: We've obtained two sloops, two brigs, and two large ships, for the purpose of obstructing the channel at Fort Washington. One of the sloops, the Clinton, heretofore purchased by the Committee, we found here; the other we've ordered from Fort Montgomery. The two brigs are here also, one of which belongs to Malcom, Kip & Lott; the other is a New-England vessel, about one hundred and twenty tons burthen, loaded with wheat, staves, and a considerable quantity of inch boards. The wheat and staves we've ordered to be stored; but sent down the boards for publick use. The ships are in Esopus Creek; owners, Messrs. Franklin. They are two very fine vessels, in the building of which much extraordinary pains have been taken, both as to timber and workmanship. On our going there, we ordered them to be hauled out, and expect they will proceed to Fort Washington this day. The two sloops, the Clinton and that from Fort Montgomery, we think are almost arrived by this time, as the Clinton sailed yesterday, with a fair wind, and the other must have proceeded from the fort shortly after the Clinton's arrival there; and as to the brigs, we shall be able to despatch them to-day also. The Cambden, Captain Castle, with near two thousand feet plank, and Captain Donaldson, with upwards of six thousand ditto, sailed yesterday also. The ships and brigs aforesaid we are to have appraised by the time they are ready to set off from here, and we imagine the ships will run very high.

Our stock of money is very low, and our contracts far exceeding the sum we were furnished with. The demands on this Committee are frequent and urgent. Upon these considerations, we hope the Convention will, by some means or other, furnish us with a further supply. We are, sir [&c.]

AMBROSE SERLE TO LORD DARTMOUTH[1]

My Lord,

I had the Honor in my last Letter of the 5th of Septr. to acquaint Your Lordship with the Success of His Majesty's Arms upon Long Island: I now beg leave to congratulate You on the entire Possession of New York City, and almost all the Island on which it stands; which, together with Long and Staten Islands, now reduced, form the principal and most important Parts of the Colony, and on which eventually all the others do and must depend.

On the 7th of September and the five or six following Days, the Fleet was busily employed in fitting, manning and carrying up their flat-bottomed Boats to the Place of Embarkation, which was at or near Bushwyck Creek upon the East River, or rather Branch of the Sound which divides New York Island from Long Island & the Continent towards the East.

The Engineers opened a Battery, on the 12th against a strong Post of the Rebels on the opposite Shore, near the intended Place of Debarkation, and a warm Cannonade was maintained on both Sides for two or three Hours. What Damage was done to the Rebels, beside beating their Battery into Ruins, we know not, but we suffered no Loss on our Part, except one Sailor, who was killed by a Cannon Ball as he lay sleeping on the Grass. — Capt. [Thomas] Wilkinson arrived on this Day from Quebec in the Pearl, and brought agreeable News from the North and about 500 Prisoners, with whom, as well as with those taken before; the Commanders of the Fleet and Army scarce know what to do. To keep them is expensive; to dismiss them dangerous.

The next Morning, after another Cannonade, the Troops took Possession of two Islands in the East River very near the Rebel Fortifications.

In the Afternoon, the Phoenix and Roebuck of 44 Guns each, the Orpheus of 32, and the Carysfort of 28 Guns, sailed up the East River to Bushwyck Creek. The Rebels fired a few Guns from the Fort and their Batteries along the Shore, as the Ships went up; but they passed on in silent Contempt without returning their Fire, and with the Loss of only one Man. Our Batteries, in the meantime, played upon the Enemy from Governor's Island and from the Heights of Brookland opposite the Eastern Shore of the Town. These Batteries were originally constructed by the Rebels with such immense Labor and Art, that they seem almost impregnable. Next to the Works themselves, nothing astonishes our People more than their sudden and uncontested Abandonment.

Many Deserters from the Rebels have daily come over. They all concur in representing the Jealousy, Discontent and Fears, which prevail among them, and the cruel and compulsive Methods they have taken to keep up their Army. Though their Leaders endeavour to conceal or exaggerate their Numbers, 'tis not found, that they make or have made at any time more than 30,000 Men, notwithstanding their vaunted Ability of bringing 80 or 100,000 into the Field. That this is an empty Bravado, calculated to amuse; it is sufficient to mention, that though they have draughted, at two several Times into their Army, every fourth Man in this Colony, capable of bearing Arms; they were obliged to impress them by Force, and to keep them by the strictest Compulsion. From almost all the Provinces they have dragged them (as it were) to the Camp; nor have they many real Volunteers but from the New England Colonies. They have fed their Troops tolerably well, but their Pay has been very irregular and is much in Arrear, and their Cloathing wretched.

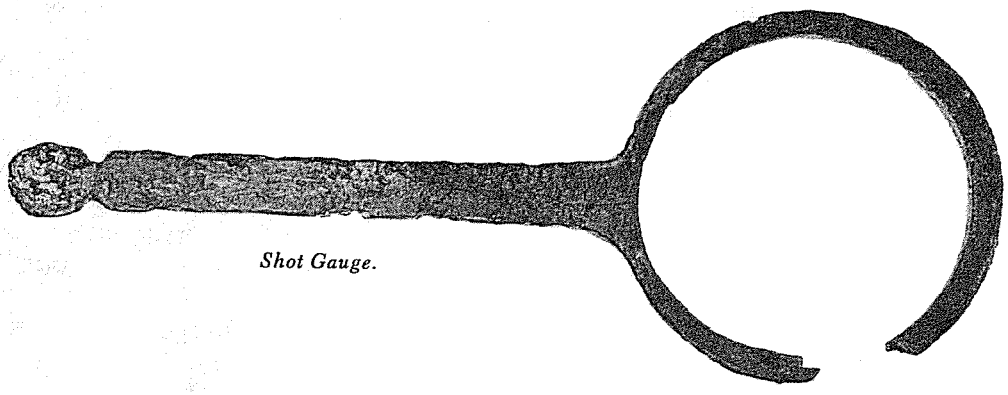
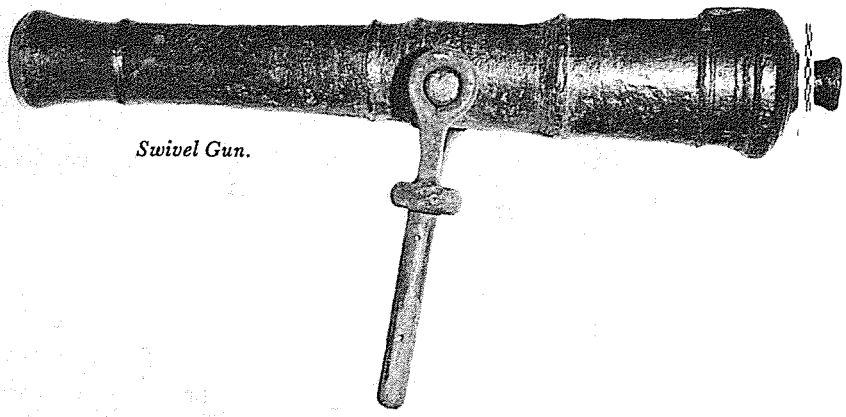
In the Morning of the 15th the Renown of 50 Guns, and the Repulse and Pearl of 32 each, with a Schooner, sailed up the North River to invest the Town, and to draw off the Attention of the Rebels on that Side, while the Debarkation under five other Ships of War was effecting on the other. The Morning was clear, the Tide served, and there was a fresh Breeze. The Rebels all-alarmed, began a Cannonade as furiously as they could, but with very little Effect, as their Guns were but indifferently served. As these were the grand Batteries of the Enemy, of which they had boasted that no Vessel could possibly come near them, the Ships returned a most heavy Fire of round and grape Shot, and passed to their Station with the Loss of one Man killed and three or four wounded. Removing from one's Thoughts the melancholy Seriousness of the Business, the Hills, Woods, Town, River, Ships, and Pillars of Smoke, illuminated by a brilliant Morning, formed the finest Landscape that the Imagination can conceive. Soon afterwards, a most tremendous Discharge of Cannon was made by the Men of War on the opposite Shore in the East River, under Cover of which the Troops were landed with great Ease and Dispatch, and without the least Opposition. A Feint was made, at the same Time, about 3 or 4 Miles higher up; so that the Rebels were distracted to know, which to oppose or which way to run. They retired towards the Northern Part of the Island with great Precipitation, where, as their last Resource, they had constructed the strongest of their Works upon very advantageous Ground; though, indeed, the Island itself is covered and intersected with Fortifications from one End to the other. In the Afternoon, His Majesty's Colors were hoisted upon the Fort, instead of the Rebel Standard, which some Women had previously taken down and torn in Pieces.



Nothing could exceed the extravagant Joy of the People left in New York, on their Release from the Tyranny of the Rebels. They chaired some of the King's Officers up and down the Streets, amidst Shouts and Acclamations. They could not demonstrate their Satisfaction by ringing the Bells; for these the New England Rebels, among other things, had plundered away. I believe His Majesty's Name was scarce ever so loudly or so affectionately shouted, as it was in this and the ensuing Day in the Streets of New York.

The Rebels made a Stand behind the Redoubts of their great Work towards Kingsbridge, as there was nothing behind them wch threatened to cut off their Retreat. Two or three Companies of our Light Infantry, in the Heightt of that Ardor and Impetuosity, which sometimes forgets even Discipline itself, pressed upon the Rebels to the very Cover of their Lines, suffered a little, and would have suffered more but for the Magnanimity & Heroism of the Grenadiers and Highlanders, who ran (it is said) about two Miles in 15 Minutes to their Relief. The Rebels, seeing the Smallness of their Number, came out of their Works by Thousands in order to cut them off. The little Party, with the greatest Bravery, kept their Ground till the Relief came up; They then retreated and the Rebels advanced, till two Field-Pieces, with the Grenadiers and Highlanders, which the General concealed till they were within 30 Yards Distance took them full in Flank, when they immediately ran with the utmost Confusion to their Works, leaving many dead behind them. We had 9 Men killed and about 80 wounded in this Affair. The Officers hope, that this will be an Instruction to the Soldiers in future not to go beyond or faster than their Command; an Error, which partly from Contempt of the Rebels, and partly from the Heat of Resentment, they have been too apt to fall into. The Confidence of the Fleet and Army in their two great Commanders seems equally affectionate and unbounded. I speak the Sentiments of every Body here, when I say, that the Choice of them was the wisest and the happiest for Great Britain that could have been devised.



Great Numbers of Emigrants, particularly Irish, are in the Rebel Army, some by Choice and many for mere Subsistence. They have also many transported Felons, who have exchanged Ignominy and Servitude, for a Sort of Honor and Ease, by entering among them. This is a further Argument against the Transportation of such People from England in future. Confinement to hard Labor at Home might answer some valuable Purpose there, and would be a real Punishment to the Convicts: Here, they do Great Britain much Injury, by bringing over Numbers and Trades, and so adding Strength, already too great, to the Force of America against her.

Bar Shot.

Shot Gauge.

Swivel Gun.

We hope for General Burgoyne and his powerful Army in a short Time; as, by the last Advices, he was passing, and now must have passed, the Lakes above Albany. It is understood, through the Rebels themselves, that their late Affair in Canada, has not cost them, through the Sword and Disease, much fewer than 5000 Men.

I will say nothing about the Attempts to effectuate the Civil Commission, as Your Lordship will, I presume, with more Propriety and Precision, receive due Information through the official Channel.

On the 23d of September, three Frigates and a Bomb were sent against Powley's Hook, which lies opposite the Town on the North River. They covered a Debarkation of about 450 Men, who took this Post, fortified strongly as all the others have been, without a Blow; the Rebels, in two large Bodies, running away upon the first Motion to approach them.

I am happy to inform Your Lordship, that the Fleet and Army are comfortably supplied with fresh Provisions and Vegetables from the recovered Territories, and that there is no Probability at present of exhausting our Resources of that kind: This will be a great Saving to Government, as well as Benefit to the Troops. It may be hoped, that, in another Year, we shall want but little Provisions from Home.

We wish exceedingly for the second Embarkation of the Hessians; but, as we learned by Capt. [Thomas] Jordan of the Galatea, who left Plymouth on the 10th of July, that they were not then sailed from England, there is no reason to expect them here soon enough for Service in this Campaign: The Galatea, though a very fast Sailer, was full 9 Weeks in her Passage.

Some Villains, who had concealed themselves for the purpose, set the Town on Fire in several Places in the Night of the 20th instant. The Flames spread with great Rapidity, the Wind being high, and the Houses chiefly covered with Shingles. 'Tis supposed, about a fifth Part of the Town is consumed. Every possible Precaution is taken to prevent the like in future.

The Rebels have left many Cannon, some say above 60 in all, chiefly old Pieces, behind them in their several Retreats, a Magazine of 5000 Barrels of Flour [sic powder], and great Quantities of Shot with some Ammunition. Upon the whole, the King's Forces have obtained with Ease and Advantage, and in a short Time, what, from a Review of the Works and Preparations of the Rebels, it might have been thought, would have cost them at least a whole Campaign. I have the Honor to be, with the warmest Gratitude and Respect, My Lord, [&c.]

Pennsylvania Journal, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1776

Philadelphia [September 25].

Extract of a letter from Ticonderoga.

A letter from General Gates, enclosing one from Gen: Arnold, is just received, which acquaints us, that our fleet is safe, and that a party of our sailors, who had imprudently trusted themselves on shore, were attacked by a number of savages, at Wind Mill Point, about 90 miles from Crown Point — In the skirmish three of our men were killed and five wounded. — The Indians afterwards coming near the shore of the lake, several cannon were discharged at them, which dispersed them, and must have been the firing heard by Colonel [Thomas] Hartley. – Gen. Arnold imagines the enemy will double man all their batteaus and attempt to board the gundalos, and has begged an addition to the fleet. More row-gallies and gundalous are building, and will shortly be fit for action. As a further addition several double manned batteaus are to be sent him, with a swivel on each side, to fight under cover of the larger metal; by this means our fleet on Lake Champlain will soon make a very respectable appearance, and give Carleton, with his Hessians, Westphalians, Waldeckers, and other mercenaries, more trouble in crossing the Lakes to Ticonderoga than they at first expected; indeed several hundred of the enemy were advanced as far on their journey as the Isle aux Fate, but precipitately fled at the approach of our Navy.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO THE SECRET COMMITTEE OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS[1]

Gentn Your favor of the 13th we only received the 23rd inst; the delay was occasioned by y[ou]r letters being delivered to a member of our Board, who resides on the Eastern Shore, which through hurry of business for Some time escaped his memory. –

We have ordered our Commissary of Stores at Baltimore Town to deliver one Ton of Powder to Messrs Lux, Proviance & Stewart for proving the Cannon intended for the Frigate,[2] & the further quantity that you desire for the use of her, shall be supplied, when she is ready, — should it not in the mean Time be convenient for you to send it from Philadelphia. – It is true, that we have a considerable quantity of Powder at Baltimore Town; but as we have and are equipping 16 armed vessels of one Sort or other, we shall in all probability have use for all the Powder we have by us, and indeed more. –

Upon all occasions we have furnished the Honble Congress & our neighbours with whatever has been requested of us, and we wish the same measure had been dealt out to us; if it had, we should not have been deny'd 14 p[iece]s of Canvass, which we were in the greatest want of, to compleat the Sails for Some armed vessels that we were fitting out, and for want of it, we have been obliged to substitute Ozns – had we christened our own Child first. – We could not have let Congress & our Friends of Virga have had 240 ps Sail Duck, nor yet the Canon, Musqts &c, which we Supply'd for the Hornet and Wasp.[3]

You will be pleased to excuse our reminding yr Board of these things, for we are exceedingly hurt by it's refusing us so trifling a Quantity of Canvass, at a Time, when we were informed, that not less than 2,000 Bolts were imported to Phila by Congress in one vessel. We are &c:

Last Tuesday the Washington Privateer sent into Newbury-Port a Prize Bark, one of the Enemy's Transports, bound from the British Fleet at New-York, to St. Vincents. Her Cargo consists of Provisions and some other Stores.[1]

Last Sunday was sent into Providence, by Capt. Munroe, the prize ship Blaze Castle, from Barbados, bound for London, having on board 100 Pipes Madeira Wine, 120 Hogsheads Sugar, 18000 Weight Whale-Bone, 120 Barrels Oil, &c.[2]

Last Thurday Afternoon arrived in this Harbour the prize ship Venus, from Honduras, about 200 tons burthen, taken by Elijah Freeman Paine, in the schooner Eagle, from Providence, on the 23d August at Night, in Lat. 35, Long. 57, W. Her Cargo consists of 100 Tons of chip Logwood, 400 Logs of Mahogony, and 150 Weight of Turtle-Shell. The next Day Capt. Paine discovered a Brigantine, gave Chase, and took her: she was from Virginia, bound to Hamburgh, laden with Tobacco, belonging to one Smith of that Place; but by the Papers and Letters found on board, it appeared she was destined for London.[3]

Last Monday was also sent into this Harbour by the Eagle, Capt. Paine, a Ship of 160 Tons, from Grenada, bound for London, having on board 150 Puncheons of Rum, 109 Hogsheads of Sugar, some Cotton, &c.[4]

A Letter from Providence, of 23d Instant, says, "The Columbus Vessel of War, has sent a prize Brig into Newport, loaded with Lumber, bound for Europe."[5]

Yesterday morning a Sloop, laden with dry Fish, was carried into Salem, by Capt. [Samuel] Waters, in the schooner Dolphin, mounting only six Swivels.[6]

3. The brig Fanny, Captain William Tokely, loaded on account of the Secret Committee, sailed from Virginia in July. On August 24 Payne took her and carried her into Plymouth, but did not libel against her. There was much subsequent dispute regarding this brig.
4. The ship Caledonia.
5. The brig was not a prize of the Columbus.

Continental Journal, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1776

Boston, September 26.

On the 31st of August last was taken by the Schooner Hannah and Molly, and the Dolphin privateers, and carried into Frenchman's Bay, the Brigantine Royal George, commanded by Dennis Doyle, having on board the following articles, viz. 200 tierces of Pork, 231 barrels of Beef, 270 firkins of Butter, 169 barrels of Oatmeal, 11 tierces of Beef, 1 crock of Butter, 25 sacks split Peas, 25 boxes Candles, 30 boxes of Soap, 20 barrels Pork: she was bound from Waterford in Ireland to Hallifax, out 10 weeks, brings no news, excepting that they had an account in Ireland, that the British troops had taken possession of the greatest part of Philadelphia, and had taken the Continental Congress prisoners.

Yesterday Capt. [Nathaniel] Odiorne, in the Washington privateer, carried into Newbury-Port, a bark from New York, bound to St. Vincent's, with provisions for 120 men for 6 months. – She sailed in company with 5 or 6 transports, under convoy of the Solebay frigate, in order to fetch troops from thence.

A French schooner which sailed from Newbury-Port, about a month ago, was taken by one of the ministerial pirates, re-taken by the Washington privateer, from thence, and is now safe arrived there.

Dear General [Ticonderoga] 26th September 1776

Yesterday I received Your Letter of the 21st Instant I hope your little Schooner had ample satisfaction for the Injury her people suffered in the Batteau –

This will be deliver'd you by Captain [Seth] Warner of the Trumbull Row Galley. She carries you a fine reinforcement of Seamen, & besides is herself a considerable Addition to your Squadron. The Schooner, & the Two Other Gallies will follow Sunday, or Monday at Farthest; but the Cordage is not yet Arrived; and General Waterbury assures me, that if your Estimate was as large as you Mention it to have been, not more than a Third of it can have been sent; as, more than Twenty Coils of Rigging are now Wanted for the Gallies already built. — The powder wrote for so long ago is not even in part received at Tyonderoga; Oconomy is the Word — You cannot be more Anxious to have all the Gallies with you, than we are to send them. Be satisfied; more cannot be done than is done to Dispatch them —

Col [Jonathan] Trumbull [Jr.] writes you an Account, or rather, rumour of an Action, that happen'd last Sunday, near Turtle Bay. When any thing to be depended upon, Arrives, I will send it you without Delay — Inclosed is Dr [Jonathan] Potts's Letter to me, which I received last Night. CAPTAIN THOMAS CREGIER TO THE NEW YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY [1]

Gentlemen — Fishkill, September 26, 1776

I have done myself the honour of waiting upon your Honourable House, in order to lay before you the state and condition of the schooner General Putnam, under my command, and finding there can be no Convention by reason that some of the members are absent, and it being uncertain when those gentlemen will return, I, to avoid the expenses which myself and horse are at, think it prudent to return to my house at the King's Bridge, where I shall remain at my own expense until I do receive farther instructions from your Honourable House.

Gentlemen, I must in the first place acquaint you, that my provisions being expended, having not more on board than will support the company about fifteen days; in the next place, my vessel being very small and low in the water, my largest ordnance being twelve swivel guns, the shrouds very old and not trustworthy, my best bower cable but very poor, the vessel very weak and leaky, which weakness proceeded from her lying on a bar and a heavy surf breaking over her when I was run on shore by a man of war, the people much exposed when under sail or even in hard rains, the water pouring into their cabins which prevents them from lying in their beds. Diligent search has been made in order to stop the leaks, but all to no purpose, daily complaints being made by my people in regard to the vessel's condition, and the season of the year advancing toward cold and stormy weather — this, gentlemen, is certainly the condition of the vessel. The people almost naked, having no shoes nor stockings, and the most part of them not the second shirt to their backs; no money has been advanced to them but from my own private purse; no fresh meat allowed, although I have applied for it; no rum allowed them, which has occasioned much disturbance on board; they have demanded an allowance of a half pint of rum per day, which is allowed the men in the Continental fleet, and insist upon it that the Provincial Congress gives that allowance: A riot was made just before I left the vessel in regard to their allowance of rum, in which affair I was obliged to make use of my authority amongst some of the principal ringleaders, upon which some of them have undertaken to complain of my conduct to your Honours by letters. I never heard that the conduct of a commander was to be taken notice of from a report made by a common boatswain, carpenter, or gunner, &c., men who sacrifice every thing that is dear to them for a single can of grog; men whom I have picked up and put in office on purpose to have the vessel manned, and as the vessel is but very small I was glad to pick up any trash. I am very clear you will not find any of my principal officers' names in that complaint; they are men of good families and characters, hearty in the cause of liberty; if such men were to complain of my conduct, I confess I ought to stand corrected. Perhaps the names of my chief officers you would be glad to know; my chief lieutenant is Thomas Quig[l]y, David Walker is my second lieutenant, Eliakim Little is the master, and Cornelius French is my mate; and upon the whole, I would recommend it to your Honourable House to give directions to lay the vessel up as unfit for any farther service this season, as I look upon keeping her any longer in commission will only be a great expense without the gleam of any profit or service. As for my part, I am determined not to enjoy a commission unless I can be of service to my country, for I should, on that part of the coast where the vessel is, only be picking the public's pocket, as nothing is to be met with there but frigates, sloops of war, and large tenders, which we are not able to engage. I am determined to serve in the present cause, and will spend my last moments in serving my country, and fix myself at the seat of war, and whenever I am called on will cheerfully join heart and hand with my staunch countrymen. The accounts of the vessel should be settled and the people paid off, which matters I leave to be determined by your Honours, and shall wait your command with due respect, and am [&c.]

[Extract]. Blomindel Heights Camp, Sept. 26, 1776

On the 16th of this month we marched from Newtown Camp, and the Corps de Reserve, consisting of three Battalions of Lt. Infantry, the German Jagers, my Battalion of Highland Grenadiers, and 42nd and 32nd Regts., embarked on board flat-bottomed boats in Newtown Creek, from whence we proceeded on our way to land upon New York Island. A 50 gun ship and two Frigates were drawn up to cover the landing.

Upon the enemy perceiving our boats, they sent several columns of men to line sunk breast-works that they had previously made to prevent a landing. We steered to the right and landed about three miles above the town under an incessant fire from the shipping.

A more glorious scene I never beheld; the thunder of the ships, the appearance of the enemy, the ardor of our troops, the whole army drawn up on Long Island ready to support us, surpassed everything of magnificance. So well did the army do their business that the enemy evacuated their lines, and we landed without opposition.

We immediately rush'd for wood [sic forward], and took possession of a Hill about a mile from the spot where we landed. In our way we had some skirmishes in which our Brigadier Gen. [John] Vaughan was wounded, and some few men of the Hessians; when the whole army was landed we proceeded on the Harlem road to these Heights. The enemy made a show of giving us battle several times as they retreated; we lay on our arms that night . . .

The day we landed, great numbers of the enemy escaped by the North River, which gave people room to conjecture that had our army crossed quite to the River we should have shut up near 6,000 of them in the town.

Some days after two Brigades took possession of New York, which they found almost entirely evacuated, but the houses in tolerable order.

I went a Volunteer upon an expedition against Paulus Hook on the 20th of this month with Ld. [Hugh] Percy, who with 3,000 men had orders to reduce it, as it annoyed our shipping as they entered the North River. It is a small peninsular on the west side of the River. We expected much opposition, but the rebels, after firing a few cannon shot, ran away. There are no fewer than five works there, and during the winter they might have made it very disagreeable in the town.

MINUTES OF THE PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY[1]

In Council of Safety,

[Philadelphia] Septem'r 26th, 1776.

Resolved, That Thomas Seymour, Esq'r, be appointed Commodore & Commander-in-Chief of all the Naval Armaments in the service of this State.

Resolved, That the members of this Board, or as many as Conveniently can, go down to Fort Island to-morrow morning to accompany Commodore Seymour to the Fleet; That Instructions be drawn up to deliver the Commodore with his Commission.

The following are the Instructions deliver'd to the Commodore, vizt:

In Council of Safety, Septem'r 26th, 1776.

The Council having thought proper to appoint you Commodore & Commander-in-Chief of all the Naval Armaments of this State in the River Delaware, which you are to notify to the Officers of the Fleet by publishing to them your Commission, It becomes necessary to give you some Instructions to regulate your Conduct in some points of this Important Trust.

And First: You are, by all Possible means, to establish such a proper sense of Subordination in the Fleet, that all the Orders you think necessary to Issue be punctually and implicitly obeyed, a loose and relaxed discipline utterly enfeebling every Military Establishment, however respectable it may otherwise be in the Circumstance of number & force.

Secondly. As it is the duty and Inclination of this Council to Maintain the Fleet in a Constant preperation to receive the enemy, you must Immediately take an exact survey of its present Condition, and whatever may be wanting in its equipments to make report to Capt. Wm. Richards, who is appointed and directed to supply all its deficiencies.

Thirdly. An attack from the Enemy being highly Probable, tho' the time uncertain, it is necessary that every part of the Fleet should have its proper Station assigned, in such way as to afford Mutual Support, and that the whole may act to the best effect.

Fourthly. You must particularly attend not only to the situation of the Fleet, but take great care that the Officers and Men are not absent from their respective Vessels any length of time and at any great distance, but as it is probable that some of the Officers of the Boats may be desirous of coming up to this City, you may give leave of absence to them in such number and for so long a time as the service may admit, so that not more than one-third be absent at any one time or longer than Forty eight Hours, from their respective Vessels.

Lastly. Should any accident or Circumstance happen in the Fleet that has the least tendency to effect the service, you are to give the earliest Information of it to the Council of Safety, that they, if they have the Means of Remedy, may apply such as the nature of the Case may require.

These being the Principal Matters that have occured to the Council, they earnestly recommend to you however, that you endeavour to promote the Utmost Harmony between you and the Officers of the Fleet, and between one another, on which depends so much the success of every undertaking where men are to act in concert, and Mutual assistance required.

Resolved, That the Officers of the Fleet belonging to this State be allowed the same pay that the Officers in the Continental Service have, from the first of October next.

Memoir of Richard Dale[1]

[On board the Continental brig Lexington, July 27 to September 26, 1776][2]

. . . upon his return from Bermuda – whither he had gone with William Gutteridge [sic Goodrich] – he was captured by captain John Barry, commander of the United States' brig Lexington, and on the same day entered as a midshipman on board said brig. This occurred in July, 1776. Not long afterwards, the brig, whilst cruising, was struck with lightning: Dale, with many others, were prostrated, senseless, upon the deck. They were all, however, providentially restored in a few minutes.

Soon after this the brig arrived at Philadelphia. . . .

Can your Excellency spare our Row Galleys from further Continental Service? The men and their arms may be used to great advantage on board our Ship and Brigantine. The enterprize formerly mentioned to you; in which I have the promise of Admiral Hopkins concurrence. Your advice on this head is wanted as we are not so well acquainted what alteration your present situation makes in regard. An early answer will be necessary, if they can be spared, and the intended naval expedition is yet pendent and practicable.

[Extract] Philada Septr 27th 1776

We have wrote fully to our Mr Thos Morris respecting Insurances & desired if he can effect Insurance on Ships & Goods from the West India Islands to this Continent & Vice Versa, to inform you of it immediately. We have wrote him & several of our Friends to send us letters News papers, Goods & Merchandize, Via Martinico under your care & we beg your particular care of them. You will know the Events of War are most uncertain, our American affairs have not at this time so pleasing an aspect as we cou'd wish & shou'd they grow much worse, it may not be a desirable thing to bring property hither, therefore we are determined to give you early information of such material Changes as may happen, at present we Continue in oppinion that Mr Bealle shou'd ship all his Goods back in this Sloop Independance as the Captain has orders to Receive onboard whatever you desire, or if there are other Good Conveyances you may divide them sending part to the care of Messrs Hewes & Smith at Edenton No Carolina, part to Mr J. H Norton at Wmsburg Virginia & the rest by Capt [John] Young, the whole however to be forwarded to Mr. Norton in Virginia agreable to Contract. We also Continue of opinion that you shou'd ship back by the Independance the Value of Two Thousand pounds in dry Goods taking care to buy in this parcell as many Woolens of every kind as possible, for Woolens are exceedingly wanted any Number of Blankets the more the better, Rugs, Cloths, &c &c next to these Sail Cloth, Coarse Linens, Warm Coarse Stockings and inshort any thing fit for Winter Wear. . . . We sold the Goods by Capt Wickes for 100 PCt adva[nce] on the Invoice & intended to send You Actt Sales by this Conveyance but cannot the purchaser complains that many things were laid in very dear at Martinico. If you think proper you may write to our T M [Thomas Morris] under Cover to Messrs Delap advising him the Value of the Goods you ship back by this or any other Vessell & desire him to procure Insurance if he can Effect it against British Cruizers at about 10 to 12½ pCt on such Vessells as the Independance, or for 20 to 25 PCt on unarmed Vessels, & if Mr Bealle & you judge it most prudent you can do the same with respect to his Goods, but we are really of opinion there is not much danger of this Sloop which is well Armed & Sails very fast We think you shou'd give her the utmost dispatch in your power & as its probable that another will soon follow you can prepare more Goods if any fit for Winter can be got. We mentioned above that it is possible our affairs may go so wrong that the property will be safer with you than with us, We hope this will not be the case nor is there any present danger of it, but its well to be guarded at all points & if such event is like to happen we will Contrive you the earliest Notice of it, to prevent your Shipping Goods either on your or our Account at any time when they might be likely to come into the Jaws of the Enemy. It may be well therefore that You make some strickt Friendship with a Man of known Integrity & honor into whose Trust You can safely Commit any property that may be in your hands shou'd such unhappy News come to you This Friend shoud recive & Cover it as his own untill You order otherways, for if America proves unfortunate in this Contest, We doubt much if the French Govermt. will protect her Agents, or if they do it may not be Safe to have much property in their power, but all this is meer apprehension you'l keep it closely to yourself & only take the previous measures for such a Cover without imparting Your Design to any person living. . . .

and his Mate Mr Hopley Yeaton were Americans, and high Liberty men, and the Ship Sailed from London, before the Ninth of September 1775 in the same Voyage ours did from the Continent yet the Jury, who are supposed, nearby connected, with the Owners, of the Privateer, contrary to the most upright charge given by the Judge, condemn'd her, not even allowing the adventure, or any thing else, this I and many others look upon as absolute Piracy, and hope a redress, [Tobias] Lear[2] demanded an Appeal to Congress, but the Act of Massachusetts, would not allow it, therefore was Oblig'd to appeal to their Superiour Court, but hope the Congress, will support their Resolutions and grant an appeal to Congress, as this matter is between Colony and Colony, or rather the Subjects of State, with those of another, and therefore the appeal, should lay to Congress or some body appointed by them, otherwise they will be Judges, in their own Cause. This is a matter I should be glad to know whether, an appeal does not lay to Congress, in all cases whatever, as to Marantime affairs. — Your Friend [&c.]

[Extract] Isle Valcouer Sepr 28th 1776 —

Dear General My last was from the Bay St Amont the 22d Inst by Capt [Isaac Budd] Dunn, which make no doubt you have received. — the next day the Fleet arived safe at this place, (which is an excellent harbour) we are moored in a small Bay, on the West side the Island, as near together as possible. & in such a form that few Vessells can attack us at the same Time, & then will be exposed to the fire of the whole fleet

The 25th I dispatched into Canada a German who. was Mate of the Revenge. & a New England Man, who speaks French well, both are Sensible Fellows, & may be depended on, they are extremely well acquainted with the Country, go in Character of Deserters, & have proper Instructions & Credentials. JOURNAL OF THE NEW YORK CONVENTION[1]

Saturday Morning,

[Fishkill] September 28th, 1776.

Captain Rogers being called in and examined, as to the condition of the sloop Montgomery, says, that the vessel is in good repair; that she wants nothing but provisions and a little gunpowder; that one of the prizes which he formerly took, to wit, a small Bermuda sloop, is at Rhode Island, as he hopes, by this time, condemned; that she had also on board some sails and rigging, taken from the other vessels of which he made captures; that he brought off a few things in a boat from Huntington, at the time he took Isaac Ketcham and Samuel Skidmore; that the latter was a person who had taken possession of a farm of a brother of Capt. Zeph. Platt; that he came to the Convention to request their directions how to dispose of the vessel, the Montgomery.

Resolved, That the vessel of war, the Montgomery, be continued in the service of this State.

That Mr. Harper, Mr. Bancker and Mr. Zeph Platt, be a committee to give such instruction to Capt. Rogers, as they shall think proper, to enable him to proceed on a cruise with all possible expedition; and also that the said committee give such directions to Capt. Rogers relative to any prizes or prize goods, remaining on Nassau island, as they shall think proper.

A letter from Robert Yates, Esqr. chairman of the secret committee for obstructing the navigation of Hudson's river, was received and read, and is as follows, to wit:

Poughkeepsie, Wedy. 25th Septr. 1776.

Sir — We have obtained 2 sloops, 2 brigs, and 2 large ships, for the purpose of obstructing the channel of Fort Washington; one of the sloops, the Clinton, heretofore purchased by the committee, we found here, the other we have ordered from Fort Montgomery; the two brigs are here also, one of which belongs to Malcom, Kip and Lott, the other is a New-England vessel, about 120 tons burthen, loaded with wheat, staves, and a considerable quantity of inch boards; the wheat and staves we have ordered to be stored, but send down the boards for public use. The ships are in Esopus creek, owners Messrs. Franklin; they are two very fine vessels, in the building of which much extraordinary pains have been taken, both as to timber and workmanship. On our going there, we ordered them to be hauled out, and expect they will proceed to Fort Washington this day. The two sloops, the Clinton and that from Fort Montgomery, we think are almost arrived by this time, as the Clinton sailed yesterday with a fair wind, and the other must have proceeded from the fort shortly after the Clinton's arrival there; and as to the brigs, we shall be able to despatch them to-day also. The Camden, Capt. Castle, with near 2,000 feet plank, and Capt. Donaldson with upwards of 6,000 do. sailed yesterday also. The ships and brigs aforesaid, we are to have appraised by the time they are ready to set off from here, and we imagine the ships will run very high. Our stock of money is very low, and our contracts far exceeding the sum we were furnished with; the demands on this committee are frequent and urgent. Upon these considerations we hope the Convention will, by some means or other, furnish us with a further supply. We are, sir [&c.]

By order of the committee,
Robt. Yates, Chairm.

A letter from Mr. Samuel Tudor, one of the agents superintending the building of the Continental frigates at Poughkeepsie, was read, and is as follows, vizt:

Gentlemen — Enclosed I send you General Schuyler's two letters of the 23d and 25th inst. with an order for more cordage; I am, on my own part, extremely anxious to serve, to the best of my abilities, each department, wherein the defence of our country is aimed at; but having this day received a letter from Mr. Van Zandt, (one of the commissioners for building the ships,) wherein he expresses his disapprobation of my sparing any of the materials belonging to the ships, without an express order from Congress or the commissioners. If I have hitherto erred, it is in judgment only, and with the advice of your Honourable House. This second demand from Genl. Schuyler coming to hand unexpectedly, and immediately after the receipt of Mr. Van Zandt's letter, has put me to a stand. An indemnification, or letter of approbation, from Congress, for our former proceedings, which you promissed to procure for us, I believe is the reason of the commissioners disapproving our going further, (as that has not yet appeared either to them or us) ; if you have procured it, pray send it, as also your most candid advice to me in the premises. I am, gentlemen [&c.]

The Soundings Between Valcour and the Western Shore taken by Captain William Chambers in May 1779.

Poughkeepsie, 27th Sept. 1776.

Convention of the State of New-York.

Two letters from General Schuyler, signed by the one bearing date on the 23d; and other on the 25th instant, directed respectively to the superintendents of the Continental ships now building at Poughkeepsie, were read.

The General thereby applies to the superintendents for rigging out of the Continental stores at Poughkeepsie, to fit out some row gallies on Lake Champlain.

A list of the stores wanted for the said row gallies, was also enclosed in the said letters, which was likewise read.

A letter from Robert Yates and Gilbert Livingston, Esqrs. two of the committee for obstructing the navigation of Hudson's river, was received and read, and hereafter follows, vizt:

Poughkeepsie, Septr. 27th, 1776.

Sir — The bearer hereof, Capt. John Hun, is come down with three batteaux from Genl. Schuyler, for cordage; Capt. Tudor, to whom he is directed, informs us that he cannot spare the quantity the General requires.

Out of one of the new ships belonging to Franklin, we have taken all the new cordage and stored it with Capt. Schenk. We acquaint you with this circumstance, that in case the Convention should judge it necessary, they may give directions to complete the remainder of the General's orders out of this store. We are, sir, [&c.].

Robt. Yates,
Gilbert Livingston.

Capt Schenk has the charge of the cordage, and if any orders are given they ought to be directed to him.

Ordered, That the said letters from Genl. Schuyler, and inventory of rigging wanted, the said letter of Capt. Samuel Tudor received this day, and the letter from Messrs. Yates and Livingston of the 27th instant, be committed to Mr. Gansevoort, Mr. Duane, and Mr. Cuyler,

Governor Josiah Martin to Lord George Germain [1]

Duplicate No. 4. Long Island near New York
My Lord September 28th 1776

I have the honor to offer Your Lordship my sincerest congratulations on the successes of His Majesty's Arms, that have already Secured at least the important point of good Winter Quarters for the troops by the possession of the City of New York, and this Island, which although very greatly exhausted by the depredations of the Rebels, will yet contribute much to the support and comfort of the Fleet and Army, if the parts of the coast, most exposed, are timely protected against the New England People, who have crossed the Sound, and made Several descents on the North side of this Island, for the purpose of driving off Cattle, and seizing persons well affected to Government, since the troops took possession of the Western part of it.

It being manifest My Lord that my return to North Carolina, to lie on board Ship can answer no sort of purpose, and Lord Howe having seen it expedient to call away His Majesty's Ships that are stationed at Cape Fear River rendering it impossible for me to resume that very irksome situation, I remain here in readiness to take any part that may be assignd me, until further operations, shall open a way to my wishes, and my particular duty to promote his Majesty's Service in that Province.

Since my arrival at this place I have received My Lord, but I have not been able to find out through what Channel, the original and duplicate of The Earl of Dartmouth's letter of the 8th of November last, signifying The King's Pleasure that I should inform His Majesty's Officers within the Government of North Carolina, that they were not expected by His Majesty to remain in their present stations at the hazard of their lives and properties, and that they were therefore at liberty to withdraw themselves from the Colony whenever their personal safety should make it necessary so to do. – I should have been happy My Lord to have received this letter while it was possible for me to communicate it: for I am persuaded the assurance it gives of attention to the unfortunate circumstances of the Servants of the Crown is a grace that would mitigate the sufferings of every other individual in the proportion it does my own.

The Transport Ship on board which I left at Cape Fear the loyal refugees from the shore of North Carolina I expect My Lord will come here with The King's Ships which are ordered from that Port, when I shall discharge her, and I presume, most of the Refugees, who for their good behaviour, and encouragement, I had formed into Companies, and entitled to pay pursuant to the powers vested in me to levy Provincial troops, will be ready to serve The King in such Corps, as The Commander in Chief shall please to consign them to

I have had the happiness to find my Family in safety, which, all circumstances considered, is better Fortune than I could reasonably expect. I have the honor to be [&c.]

CARTER BRAXTON TO ISAAC GOVERNEUR, CURAÇAO MERCHANT[1]

Copy Virginia September 28th 1777 [sic 1776]

Sir Altho' an entire Stranger permit me to address you in behalf of Messrs Willing & Morris Merchants in Philadelphia & myself & to unfold a Scheme of Trade we have Entered into with Mr John Philip Merckle Merchant in Amsterdam & to inform You that through you this our Scheme is to be executed, and that we Esteem you as Umpire between Us. — Your General Character and not any Personal Acquaintance hath entitled you to this Confidence, & we rest Assured Your Utmost Endeavours will be Exerted for Our Interest. While I had the Honor to Attend the Continental Congress at Philadelphia as a Member from Virginia, Mr Merckle was Introduced from New York to that Body as a Gentleman of Family Fortune, & Integrity, & one in whom we might confide to Negociate a Supply of Necessary's for America. This Gentlemans good Behaviour and Attention to Business while at Philadelphia induced us to conclude he merited the Character given of him, In consequence of which Mr Morris & myself Set on foot with him a Private Mercantile Adventure, which we propose to Conduct in the following manner, We made a Contract with Mr Merckle for Ten Thousand Pounds Sterling worth of Goods Six Thousand of which he is to send us to America on his Own Account and the other Four are to be sent to Curaçoa to be delivered to you & Shipt as Mr Merckle shall direct for Us — For these Four Thousand Pounds sterling Cargo, We are to lodge with you as much Tobacco as will pay for it allowing Thirty Shillings P Hundred as pr Contract. We propose to send to your Care three Hundred Thousand Weight which will command a larger Sum & which you will retain for the Use of Mr Merckle but not to be delivered to him until you have a Certainty that the Goods amounting to Four Thousand Pounds Sterling have been sent us agreeable to the Contract which I inclose you for your Guide, the Quantity of 42,283 being Part of this Three Hundred Thousand now Comes to you by Captn Meredith, Commander of the Sloop Content and for which you will be pleased to pay Your receipt to the Captain. The Tobacco to be retained by you for the Use of Mr Merckle, he paying all Costs and Charges attending it after delivery. The other part of the Cargo agreeable to a seperate Bill of lading comes also consigned to You and which You are to dispose of for and on Account of Messrs Willing & Morris & myself and to send the return in as much salt as the Vessel can bring 40 or 50 dozn Cotten & Wool Cards, 30 or 40 Barrels of Limes of such as the Captn approves, some Hhds of Brown Sugar, & some single & double refined some rum of best and middling Qualities, a few Hhds of Molasses, Salt being a necessary not to be dispenced with by our People, and they being now much Pinched by the want of it, I must earnestly request You, at all events, to procure as much of it as will nearly load this Vessel, & to procure a Sufficient Quantity for the Vessels that are to follow with the remainder of Our Tobacco all of whom I cou'd wish to load back in a great Measure with salt, If it is not to be had in Your Island at present, I wish you to import a large Quantity for our Vessels that are to go to you & who I hope will be with you in 3 or 4 Weeks after this.

As much depends on our Secresy in this Adventure you will keep the Purport of this Contract within your Own Bosom Mr Merckle sail'd from Boston about the 15th of Augst for Holland & I hope will get safe; as he is a stranger to Us in Point of General & Certain Character, will you do us the favour to say what you know of him & his Connexions —

If a Dutch Bottom cou'd be taken out for the Sloop to gain her protection to our Cape it wou'd do us a favour, & if any Dutch Seamen were to come to Colour the Design, they shou'd meet with proper Encouragement, besides the Bounty that is given of 40/ to each Man. – You will address the Vessel & Cargo to me & be so obliging as to give Us at large your Opinion of the West India Trade at present, the danger attending it, the Articles brought to you for market, & what Prices the Commodities of America will bear, & the Demand for them as well as the General appearance of things in the Political Hemisphere & the part that Holland is about to take. Is there any Insurance Office with you, and how are the Premiums. You will give this Vessel all the Dispatch in your Power. Cou'd you procure me a large Jack Ass Stallion. I wou'd give a good Price for such a One – As you will probably retail in small Parcels the Articles Shipped on our Accounts to you for sale, I shou'd be glad You will attend to Our two Hhds No 1 & 2 mark'd RWE, remarked WMB. If I am not mistaken, the scent of it will prove a nosegay, & recommend it to great Price. I shall be much obliged by your sending about 400 Bushels of White English salt, if to be had in sack Bags containing about four Bushels. If no such salt is to be had put as much of the Bay Salt in the sack Bags, you will Oblige me in forwarding the Inclosed Letter to Dunkirk.

The Vessel deceived us greatly in loading and did not carry so much as we Expected by several Hhds of Tobacco, & many of flour, however Mr Merckles Quantity of Tobacco that we intended by her is sent & we hope the Ballance will load her with salt if not, you will supply it & be paid out of the next Cargo. I am Sir &ca

[Extract] Wm'sburg Sepr the 28th 1776 –

. . . I wish you would seriously consider the Scheme of Trade, Vessels loaded with Salt & Fruit, consigned to you in Virginia, to be loaded with Flour &c for Bermuda, or with Flour & Tobo for Martinique, the Mole &c &c &c to return to Carolina, Virginia, or Maryland as may best suit with Rum Sugar &c Arms, Powder & Medicines, would put you into a way of making a very considerable Fortune. Several People in Maryland & the Northern States have made such already – Now I have mentioned the States it will not be amiss to say something of them – I suppose you have long since been informed of the Glorious Revolution which has taken Place in the 13 united Colonies as they were at first called – Our Constitutions I suppose too you are acquainted with – I believe ours is the most perfect in the World – It hath pleased the Almighty Ruler of the Universe to produce Good out of Evil – The insulting insolent Pride & Tyranny of the british King & Parliament have been the Means of freeing Millions from Bondage, & of erecting one of the noblest Republics the World ever saw – & have given Opportunities for such Display of true Patriotism Fortitude & Valour as are unparalleled in History – America now justly claims the Attention of the whole World, & well deserves the Pen of a Livy or Polybius –

Consider the Situation of a Country destitute of Ships Guns, Powder, & even of Clothes & Salt for the Inhabitants, On their Frontiers fierce, perfidious, & Savage Nations ever ready to attack the Defenceless, in almost every Part, Multitudes of Slaves encouraged, by the Hopes of gaining that Liberty their Masters were contending for, to strike the deadly Blow whenever they could be certain of doing it with Impunity, consider A Country in this Situation, engaging in a War with a Nation which has held the World in Awe, & which is at this Time possessed of the most Powerful Fleets & the bravest Troops upon Earth, rather than wallow in Peace & Luxury, if they must be deprived of the Privileges of free Men to obtain that Happiness. But I have neither Time nor Abilities to describe the true public Spirit, & glorious Struggle of America. I could produce many Instances of the Gallantry of the Troops of every State from Boston to Georgia as are scarcely to be found in th[e An]nals of any Country . . .

"EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM CHARLESTOWN IN SOUTH CAROLINA DATED SEPT. 29."[1]

The French and Spaniards are inclined to protect the American vessels; for this purpose two French frigates are actually arrived at the island of Hispaniola, to be joined by two more French and two Spanish frigates, which are to cruise off Port Rico, and round the island of Hispaniola; other vessels are to protect the trade at Martinico and Guadaloupe; we have now here a French sloop with goods from Martinico. A general amnesty to all French deserters is published at Martinico. — A vessel from Turks island brings us a copy of the French commandant's instructions respecting the protection of all American vessels, and informs us, that he requested it may be made known to all America as soon as possible.

[Extract]

Sir, St Pierre Martinique Sept 29th 1776

Agitated betixt Hopes & Fears, I have been waiting with the greatest Impatience & Suspence of Mind, for the Event of an Engagement at New York, which the Papers I lately had the honor of transmitting you, announced the Americans were in daily expectation of.

I have seen an Extract of a Letter dated Philadelphia 29 August, with the following Relation; that Twelve Thousand of the Kings Forces had disembarked at Long Island; that Four Thousand had marched two Leagues into the Country, but were repulsed with the Loss of 100 Men & 2 principal Officers made Prisoners. The Loss on our Side is not mentioned, nor whether they were opposed by Regular Troops or Militia.

I sincerely lament my Inability of furnishing you with the most authentic & circumstantial Intelligence, well knowing how absolutely necessary it is, that you should be thoroughly acquainted therewith; but I am fully pursuaded, that the frequent Captures of our Vessels deprive me of those Papers of Information, which are directed for me; however, if it was not for the disappointment of News, we have no Right to complain; considering the Number of more valuable Prizes that we have taken from the Enemy. Our Privateers have met with uncommon Success. they have made great Havock amongt the West India Men; so that upon casting up Accounts, the Ballance will be immensely in our Favor.

CAPTAIN JOHN PAUL JONES TO THE CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE[1]

Providence, off the Isle of Sable
30th Septr 1776 —

Gentlemen

I had the honour of writing to you the 27th Ulto p the Brigtine Britannia a Whaler which I sent in under the Care of Lieut [William] Grinnell likewise 4th Currt pr the Brigtine Sea Nymph which I sent in under the care of Mr W. [William] Hopkins — also 7th Currt p the Brigtine Favourite which I sent in under the care of Mr J. [Joseph] Vesey — the Sea Nymph was from Barbados for London, the Favourite from Antigua for Liverpool.

From that time 'till the 14th I cruised without seeing any Vessels — I then spoke the Columbus's Prize the Ship Royal Exchange bound for Boston. — by this time my water and Wood began to run short which induced me to Hand to the Northward for some Port of Nova Scotia or Cape Briton — I had besides a prospect of destroying the English shipping in these parts — the 16th & 17th I had a very heavy Gale from the N W which obliged me to dismount all my Guns and Strike every thing I could into the hould — the 19th I made the Isle of Sable and on the 20th being between it and the main I met with an English Frigate with a Merchant Ship under her convoy. — I had hove too to give my People an Opportunity of taking Fish when the Frigate came in Sight directly to windward and was so good natured as to save me the trouble of Chaseing him by bearing down the instant he discovered us. — When he came within Cannon shot I made Sail to try his speed Quartering and finding that I had [illegible] the advantage shortened Sail to give him a Wild Goose Chace and tempt him to throw away Powder and shot — accordingly a Curious Mock Engagement was maintained between us for Eight hours 'till Night with her Sable Curtain Put an end to this famous exploit of English Knight Errantry. he excited my contempt so much by his continual firing at more than twice the proper distance that when he rounded too to give his Broadside I ordered my marine Officer to return the Salute with only a Single Musquit. We Saw him next morning standing to the westward and it is not unlikely that he hath told his friends at Hallifax what a trimming he gave to a "Rebel Privateer" that he found infesting the Coast. — that night I was off Canso harbour and sent my Boat in to gain information on the morning of the 22d I anchored in the harbour and before night got off a Sufficiency of Wood and Water. — here I recruited several men and finding three English Schooners in the harbour we that night Burnt one Sunk another and in the morning carried off the third which we had loaded with what Fish was found in the other two.

At Canso I recd information of Nine Sail of Ships, Brigs, & schooners in the harbours of Narrowshock & Peter de Great at a small distance from each other in the Island of Madame on the East Side of the Bay of Canso — these I fully determined to take or destroy — and to do it effectually having brought a shallop for the purpose from Canso I despatched her with twenty five Armed Men to Narrowshock while my Boat went well Manned and Armed to Peter de great and I kept off and on with the Sloop to keep them in Awe at both places. — the Expedition succeeded to my wish — so effectual was the Surprise and so general the Panic that numbers yeilded to an handful without Opposition and never was a Bloodless Victory more compleat. — as the shipping that were loaded were all Unrigged I had recourse to an expedient for dispatch — I promised to leave the late Proprietors Vessels sufficient to carry them home to the Island of Jersey on condition that they immediately fitted out and Rigged Such of the rest as might be required— this condition was readily complyed with and they assisted my People with unremitting application 'till the Business was compleated. but the evening of the 25th brought with it a Violent Gale of Wind with rain which obliged me to Anchor in the Entrance of Narrowshock where I rode it out with both Anchors and whole Cables ahead. — two of our Prizes the Ship Alexander and Schooner Sea Flower had come out before the Gale began — the Ship Anchored Under a point and rode it out but the Schooner, after Anchoring drove and run Ashore — She was a Valuable Prize being loaded with Oil — but as we could not get her off I next day ordered her to be set on Fire. — the Schooner Ebenezer, taken at Canso, was driven on a Reef of Sunken Rocks and there totally lost — the People having with difficulty Saved themselves on a Raft. Towards noon on the 26th the Gale began to Abate. — the Ship Adventure being Unrigged and Almost Empty I ordered her to be Burnt. — I put to Sea in the Afternoon with the Brigtine Kingston Packet — and being Joined by the Alexander went off Peter de greate. I had sent an Officer round in a Shallop to order the Vessels in that harbour to meet me in the offing and he now Joined me in the Brigtine Success and informed me that Mr [Bernard] Gallagher (the Officer who had Commanded the Party in that harbour) had left it at the beginning of the Gale in the Brigtine Defiance and taken with him my Boat and all the People. — I am unwilling to believe that this was done with an Evil intention. — I rather think he concluded the Boat and People necessary to Assist the Vessel in getting out, the navigation being difficult and the wind, at that time, Unfavourable, and when the Gale was begun I know it was impossible for them to return

Thus weakened I could Attempt nothing more. — With one of our Brigs and the Sloop I could have Scoured the Coast and Secured the destruction of a large Coal Fleet that was loading near Lewisburg with the Savage only to protect them.

The Fishery at Canso and Madame is effectually destroyed. — out of Twelve Sail which I took there I only left two Small Schooners and one Small Brig to convey a number of Unfortunate men not short of three Hundred Across the Western Ocean. — had I gone further I should have Stood chargable with inhumanity.

In my ticklish Situation it would have been Madness to loose a moment — I therefore hastened to the Southward to convoy my Prizes out of harms way — Dawson's Brig[2] having been within fifteen leagues of the Scene of Action during the whole time.

On the 27th I saw two Sail which we took for Quebeck Transports. — Unable to resist the Temptation, having appoint'd a three days Rendavouze on the SW part of the Isle of Sable, I gave Chace, but could not come up before they had got into Lewisburg — a place where I had reason to expect a far Superior Force and therefore returned and this day Joined my prizes at the Rendavouze.

If my poor endeavours should meet with your approbation I shall be greatly rewarded in the pleasing reflection of having endeavoured to do my Duty: — I have had so much Stormy weather and been obliged, on divers Occassions, to carry so Much Sail, that the sloop is in no condition to continue long out of Port. — I am besides very Weak-handed and the Men I have are scarce Able to Stand the Deck for want of Cloathing, the weather here being Very Cold. — These reasons induce me to bend my thoughts towards the Continent. — I do not expect to meet with much, if any, Success on my return — But, if Fortune should insist on sending a transport or so

Boston Gazette, MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1776

Watertown, September 23 [sic 30].

On Monday last Capt. Freeman Paine, in the schooner Eagle from Providence, sent into Boston harbour a ship from Grenada bound for Europe, laden with 209 hogsheads sugar, 158 puncheons rum, &c.&c.[1]

We also hear that Captain Paine is arrived safe into Plimouth with two prizes, one of which is the brigantine from Virginia mention'd in our last,[2] and the other a West Indiaman; and that he took a fifth, from Honduras, but she is not yet arrived.

Yesterday se'nnight was sent into Providence by Capt. Munroe [James Munro], the prize ship Blaze Castle from Barbados bound for London having on board 100 pipes of Madeira wine, 120 hogsheads sugar, 18,000 weight Whalebone, 120 barrels of Oil, &c.[3]

Wednesday last a sloop laden with Dry Fish was carried into Salem by Capt. [Samuel] Waters in the schooner Dolphin, mounting only six swivels.[4]

Wednesday Capt. [Nathaniel] Odiorne, in the Washington privateer, carried into Newbury-Port, a bark from New York, bound to St. Vincents, with provisions for 120 men for 6 months. She sailed in company with 5 or 6 transports, under convoy of the Solebay frigate, in order to fetch troops from thence.[5]

1. Ship Caledonia.
2. The brigantine Fanny, from Virginia, Captain William Tokely. She had been loaded by the Secret Committee of the Continental Congress, and became the subject of extensive controversy.

2. The Peggy, captured by Washington's armed schooners Hancock and Franklin, was condemned at Boston, September 5, 1776. The appeal from the verdict was based upon whether she had been properly condemned in the Admiralty court at Halifax. If not she could be considered only as a recapture, and not a prize. The appeal was finally dismissed "neither party appearing" on May 24, 1784. Revolutionary War Prize Cases, Records of the Court of Appeals in Cases of Capture, 1776–1787, NA.
3. John Winthrop, Jr. was part owner of the Massachusetts privateer schooner Warren.

Sir Providence Septr 30. 1776

Inclosed you have a Copy of a letter which Mr Updike has received from his Friend in Milford – The Vessel therein mentioned is one we Charter'd on the Continental Account and on her return was taken by a tender; but before she got into port was retaken by the Schuyler Captn [Charles] Pond and carried into Long-Island, there they tooke out her Cargo, consisting of Powder, Arms, Salt Petere & dry goods &c for the Continent & a few hhd Molosses as Adventurers, on the Enemy taking possession of Long Iland She was loaded with Sea Coal & carried into Milford – we have now to request of you that you would Endeavour to have this matter accomodated – As you are Continental Agent & she was taken by a Continental Privateer & fitted out on the Continental Accot we think some method might be found that the vessel may be returned to us; that we may return her again to the owner – We should not have troubled you with this affair, but we wrote to Congress about it, and they have been so much taken up with business of more importance, that they have not had time to answer it — In answer to your favr of the 25 Inst we must inform you that the Sea Coal you mention is private property and the persons who own it will not sell as they propose making use of it, in an Air Furnace which they are about setting up, but we imagine you may [be] able to get it out of the Sloop, Nancy before mentioned & it would be rendering the Continent & yourselves a Service if you could get her into your Port & have the Matter settled, as we want to settle our accounts with Congress — your compliance with this request will greatly Oblige Sir [&c.]

MAJOR GENERAL HORATIO GATES TO MAJOR GENERAL PHILIP SCHUYLER[1]

(Copy) Ticonderoga September 30th 1776 —

. . . The Cordage you mention is arrived; but General Waterbury is greatly disappointed in not receiving the Cables. The Gallies must sail with such as are to be had here. Better shall be sent them, the moment they come to my Hands. We are industrious in repairing the Old Fort, the Stone Redoubt at the East Point of Ticonderoga, and constructing the out Line of a Strong Fort upon Mount Independence. Precautions are also making to place the Fleet in Security for the Winter — These are Works which keep us all employed, the Sick and Malingerers excepted, and they are more than they ought to be. —

The Powder, Lead, Flints and Musket Cartridge Paper wrote for, so long ago, are not, even in Part arrived. The large Demand supplied to the Fleet reduces our Magazine so much, that, should the Fleet, after expending their Ammunition, be Obliged to retire, we shall not have any thing like Sufficient, to make a proper Defence here. This should be seriously attended to, and not a Moment more lost, in furnishing the Quantity demanded in my Letter to you of the 5th Instant.

I am informed the fourth Row-Galley is ready to be Launched. — The whole of the different Gangs of Ship Carpenters being Consolidated into one Body to finish her.

Is it not the Intention of Congress to continue to increase our Fleet with the utmost Expedition. – If it is, more Carpenters should be forthwith engaged, and that Work carried on with all the Spirit, and Industry we are Capable of. The Ague has so worn down the Carpenters sent by Order of Congress that more cannot be expected from them this Season; therefore, to Continue this Important Work, more must be supplied.

Inclosed is a Copy of Genl Arnold's Letter to me of the 21st Instant. His Demands are complied with as far as in my power by the Trumbull Galley, Capt. [Seth] Warner, which sailed last Thursday evening to join the Fleet.– General Waterbury Sails with the Two other Galleys to morrow morning Early, & the Schooner Liberty, will immediately after proceed to the Fleet. – The Heavy Storm last night would fill me with Great Anxiety, had not General Arnold (as you will see in his Letter) Assured me that he had a Safe Harbour within his Reach. —

[Harlem, September] 30th. – The moving over of boats to Montresor's Island continued. The same day, a frigate went through Hell Gate, and came to anchor about 10 o'clock, A. M. near La Brune. At 12 o'clock, she came to sail, and stood to the eastward. Just at evening another ship came up; –

Narrative of Captain Andrew Snape Hamond [1]

[H. M. S. Roebuck, September 2 to September 30]

. . . and in the Course of two days that we lay abreast of it [Governors Island], we felt the effect of their return, 2d Sepr as they fired through the ship, and obliged us to shift our birth: but the next day two Companies of Hessians were sent to take possession of it.

3d All the Men of War, except the Vice Admiral & Centurion (that were left at Staten Island) moved up within a Mile of the Town, and the Transports Anchored from Red Hook to yellow Hook, on the Long Island Side. The Army extended themselves on the Island, and after some days erected Batterys against the Rebels Works at Waltons Point near Hell Gate, and the General fixed his head Quarters at Newtown. Flat Boats were sent to the Frigates in the Sound and others were sent up Newtown Creek, so that the Enemy could not guess where the descent of the Troops would be made next. During this time most of the Inhabitants of Long Island came in & took the Oath of Allegiance; and as it is a most delightful Country abounding with every necessary & convenience of Life, and the weather remarkably fine, both Army & Navy were well supplied with every thing they could desire. As soon as the Rebels had quitted Long Island, which they had spent so much time to fortify, General Washington, who was at the Head of their Army, (a Man tho' of dull parts, yet not without some military knowledge) concieved the Town to be no longer tenable, and imediately determined on removing out of it all the Military Stores, and every thing that could be carried away, and took the resolution of making his stand at the North End of New York Island, where the ground is by nature remarkably strong, and where allready they had a very considerable Fortification by the Name of Fort Washington. That this was their intention was easy to be perceived, by what was seen to be going on: and it was imagined, that General Howe was much divided whether he should land his Army upon the Main in West Chester, and come at the back of the Rebels, and cut off their supplys from the Country; or whether he should first secure the Town; which on account of the winter, and for many very obvious reasons was an object of great consequence; He & My Lord Howe both thought so, and in a short time resolved upon the latter: But as General Sullivan had prevailed upon them to grant him his Parole of Honor to go to the Congress at Philadelphia, in order to make a true representation of matters, and to use his endeavors for a committee to be sent to treat with the Commissioners, it is to be concieved they either flattered themselves that by this means an honorable accomodation might perhaps be brought about, or were desireous of shewing, to all the world, that nothing had been neglected to settle the matter without further bloodshed; Our opperations were therefore delayed untill his return. He came back the 11th with the Account that the Congress had appointed a Committee of three of their Members to meet the Commissrs whenever they thought proper: The next day was appointed, and My Lord Howe & the General with the Secretary to the Commission (Mr Stratchey) [Henry Strachey] went to the Jerseys to meet them. The three Persons the Congress chose to send on this occasion were, Doctor Franklyn, J Adams & Rutlidge of So Carolina, three Men the most violent for Independancey of any in their whole body; so that the Meeting was a very short one, for on their declaring themselves deputies from the free & Independant States of America, and refusing to treat on any other terms, his Lordship broke up the Assembly, and returned the same night to his Ship.

13th Sepr All the Fleet Boats were sent to Newtown Creek under the Commd of Commodore Hotham & several of the Captains; And the Phoenix, Carysfort, Orpheus & RoeBuck passed the Batterys of New York Town, into the East River, and Anchored off the Mouth of it, where the Rose had been for some time, and had a few days before been very roughly handled by a battery the Rebels had erected against her, as the River there is not above three Quarters of a Mile wide. The next day we passed with the General at Newtown, where it was determined, that the Phoenix & Orpheus, with the Rose, should proceed the morning of the 15th against the Rebel Battery opposite

15th Sepr to Hell Gate, in order to make a feint and draw the attention of the Enemy that way, whilst the Army should effect a landing at Kep's Bay, opposite to Newton covered by the RoeBuck & Carysfort: But in the Morning the Pilots concieving the Tide would be too rapid for the Ships to Anchor off the Rebel Battery (of which Captain [Hyde] Parker [Jr.] acquainted Como Hotham), the disposition of the Ships were changed: and the whole five moved to the other side into Keps's bay, and took their stations in the best manner to secure the landing of the Army. The Rebels had a Line of entrenchment along the Bank, which on the Ships anchoring they mann'd and made an appearance of giving a strong opposition to the Troops if they should land there.[*] General Clinton commanded this descent; at 9 OClock the Boats appeared coming down the Creek, by 10 they were at the Mouth of it, and as the Tide of Flood run Strong, it was necessary they should row down along the shore, a certain distance, before they attempted to cross the stream, which brought the whole embarkation (consisting of five thousand Men in about 100 boats) in view at the same time. Six large Transports lay a little below taking in the remainder of the Army; The Hills were cover'd with Spectators; The ships kept up a constant fire, which soon set the Enemy running, when the Light Infantry & Granadiers landed, 15th Octr [sic September] and climbed up a Rock, by the Rebels deemed inaccessible, making all together the finest scene one has ever beheld.

In three hours the whole Army was landed and in possession of all the heights within 2 Miles in which they met with little or no opposition: for as soon as it was known the Troops were crossed over, The Rebels imediately abandoned the Town of New York & all their Posts, and made their escape by the Side of the North River. some hundreds indeed were intercepted & taken Prisoners but in no degree equal to what might have been expected.

[September 16] The next day the Army moved forward (leaving behind three Regiments for the Guard of the Town & environs) and extended their Line from River to River. In the afternoon, three Companies of Light Infantry having advanced within Gunshot of the Rebels works, had a skirmish with a considerable Body of them. They were soon supported by a Hessian Brigade & other Corps, when an end was put to the matter, and they retired back to the ground the General had before given orders to occupy, with the loss of about 20 Men killed & 60, or 70 wounded. What the Rebels lost was not known, but from their situation it was imagined they must have suffered greatly. The Ground the Enemy now occupied was so exceedingly strong, and their numbers so great (being at least thirty thousand) that the General determined to wait for the last division of Hessians, consisting of five thousand Men (whose arrival was daily expected) before he made any further attack upon them; and then resolved to embark his army once more, and on land on the Main, in West Chester County; when the Rebels would be under the necessity of either meeting him in the Field, or suffer themselves to be surrounded. He therefore gave orders to throw up a Chain of Redoubts from River to River in front of his Camp, and with Ships of war on each of his Flanks remained quiet untill the.

22d Sepr He thought it necessary however to possess himself of the Post of Paulus Hook on the west side of the North River, as it not only annoyed the Ships passing to and fro, but might do considerable damage to the Town. The Admiral therefore Ordered the Renown Tartar & a Bomb, against the Works, whilst Lord [Hugh] Percy was embarked with about 500 Men to land as soon as the Enemy should be driven from their Guns. This attack was intended to have been made on the 22d Sepr but being little wind & the Renown not being able to get there in proper time, it was put off untill the next day, and The RoeBuck was sent in her place. This delay however gave the Enemy time to move off their Stores, Baggage & Provisions, as well as most of their Cannon, and upon the Ships Anchoring, the post was quite abandoned; & Ld Percy took possessn without the smallest opposition.

A few days before this, the Rebels committed an Act; which at once shewed their inveteracey against us, and their determined Resolution to sacrifice every thing to the cause they had engaged in. They secreted People in different parts of the Town, provided with proper combustibules, in order to set fire to it They just gave time for the Houses to be filled from the Fleet & Army, And for those to return, that had been driven away, and taking the advantage of a very Stormy Night, about one OClock in the morning set fire to the So part of the Town in three or four places, and as the wind blew strong from that Quarter and most of the Houses were covered with Shingles, it soon made a considerable progress Northward. For a long time it burnt with so much fury that there were little hopes of saving any part of the City, and even a Number of the Transports that were got to the Keys were looked upon to be in great danger. Boats were imediately sent to bring them off, and a Number of Seamen from the Men of War were sent ashore to the assistance of the Inhabitants, who, giving all over for lost, at first seemed only to look on with astonishment, but at last being rouzed by the Activity of the Sailors & Soldiers in pulling down Houses to make breaks in The fire, They set heartily to work and being exceedingly well supplied with Engines & Buckets, a stop was put to its progress about 10 oClock next day, by mere dint of labour & ingenuity, after burning 9 hours with great fury and consuming at least a quarter of the whole Town.

General Washington, & the Heads of the Rebels, took great pains in making a publick denial of their being accessary to this disaster, but nobody believed them; as every circumstance that was discovered tended to prove that there had been people hired for the purpose. Several fellows were taken allmost in the very act of setting Houses on fire: others were taken with Bundles of Matches dipped in Rozin & Brimstone, under their great Coats: some of which were thrown into the Flames, or hanged by the Heels, by the enraged Populace; but the greatest part of them, with many other suspected Persons were sent to the Jail, where by changing cloathes with each other, They were so altered that the next day their accusers did not know them, and the greatest part escaped punishment for want of Evidence.

About this time the Commissioners published a declaration importing, that although the Congress had disa-[v]owed every purpose of Reconciliation, not consonant with their extravagant & inadmissable claim of Independancy, They (the Comrs) thought fit to declare that they were equally desirous to confer with His Majtys well effected subjects upon the means of restoring the publick Tranquility: but this like every thing of that kind had not the smallest effect: For so general was the Revolt, that during the whole time of the Seige of New-York, and even after you [sic we] was in possession of the Town, not a Single Man of any sort of consideration left the Rebels and came into us. There were a few Gentlemen (mostly people who had held offices under Government) that had secreted themselves in Long Island, or had taken refuge onboard the ship with Governor Tryon, that came & joined us, but their number, at the most, that ever I heard of, did not exceed twenty.

*Note The Genl & his aid dCamp Lord Maison c[a]me on bd the RoeBuck an officer of my Ship was sent to the masthead and gave notice of the motions of the Enemy in the Trenches [Hamond's note.]

On Wedensday last, the Eagle Man of War, Vice Admiral Lord Howe, came up from off Bedlow's-Island, and moored off the Fort in the North River; and, next Morning, the Bristol, Vice Admiral Lord Shuldham, and the Preston, Commodore Hotham, came up and placed themselves likewise in the North River just above the Eagle.

Many Transports and other Ships and Vessels are anchored off the Town in the North and East Rivers.

JOURNAL OF BARTHOLOMEW JAMES, H. M. S. Orpheus[1]

[September 16 to September 30, 1776][2]

We weighed, and parting from the above ships, ran up between Blackwell's Island and the main, and came to in Turtle Cove, having on our passage struck on a rock, but got off with little or no damage. The 25th [sic] I was sent down to Lord Howe with some dispatches, having ten miles to row; and on my return, the people, having got drunk, mutinied and made an attack on me, which obliged me to use my hanger, and by cutting them over their hands disabled them, in doing which I broke my hanger in two pieces, but first had very fortunately got the better of the most insensible part of them, two having promised to row on board, where I arrived in a most fearful situation about half-past one in the morning, when I had them sufficiently punished for their infamous conduct.

Our boats, while the ship was advanced on this service, constantly rowed guard abreast of Hell Gates, which is perhaps one of the most dangerous situations that can be imagined, its consequences being fatal to a vast number of ships and boats. During our stay in this river we supplied the ship with fresh provisions and vegetables, and recruited our sick, of which we had a vast number, on Blackwell's Island. The 29th [sic September 21], about eleven o'clock, the town of New York was set on fire by some of the rebels, and one-fourth of it burnt to the ground. The chief of those concerned in this business was detected, hung up by the heels, and their brains knocked out with the soldiers' muskets, while others were thrown into the flames and consumed with the houses; such was the consequence attending those unhappy villains who so far succeeded in their wishes as to destroy the property of individuals.

The rebels made an attack on Mintizieurs Island[3] on the night of the 30th [September 22] but were repulsed and a major and several men taken prisoners; and on October 2nd [22] I walked out to the encampment of our army at Kingsbridge, and having viewed the situation of both armies, whose advanced sentinels were within call of each other, saw, in returning, a rebel spy taken and hung immediately to a tree; he died with great heroism, lamenting only that he could not communicate his intelligence to his commander-in-chief, as he had done with success twice before.[4]

We had lately a Schooner taken & carried into the West Indias with a fine Cargo onboard & Yesterday we had the Mortification to hear that the Brigt Charming Peggy Capt Coningham [Gustavus Conyngham] which we sent to Dunkirk[2] was Chased by two Cutters coming out of that Port & she run into Ostend, where in Consequence of the Empress Queen's prohibitory [Dec]laration, Officers went onboard to Seize the Brigt but the Capt & Crew resisted and drove them off, weighd Anchor & got under Sail to push out again when unfortunately in Working out they ran aground, the Vessell bilged, a reinforcement of Officers came down & Capt Coningham was obliged to fly – onboard of this Vessell we had Lead, Flints Arms & Powder more than sufficient to pay our Contract with your State & were Concerned in a Cargo of dry Goods onbd her that wou'd now have sold for upwards of £30,000 Curry had they got here safe; this Vessel has been gone on the Voyage ever since Septr last & is a very hard & heavy loss, as indeed several of the others we engaged in have proved.

The difficultys of procuring Arms & [amm]unition in Europe were unforeseen when we made the engagement, & the low prices agreed at, prevented our looking to the West Indias for the Supplys or it shou'd have been finished long since. We have still several other adventures depending from which we expect to fullfill our engagement and shall be happy in doing so, you may depend that the first Arms & Ammunition we have the good Fortune to receive shall be applyed to that purpose & no other. >
> That if our Delagates think proper to make this application your Committee would recommend that the said Frigates take in as Ballast One Hundred Tons of Bar Iron besides the following Articles

VICE ADMIRAL JAMES YOUNG TO PHILIP STEPHENS[1]

Duplicate Antigua, 30th September 1776.

Sir, My last Letters for their Lordships came addressed to you, by His Majesty's Sloop Weazle; I have not received any Dispatches from their Lordships since those by His Majesty's Sloop Shark; nor have I since had any particular Intelligence concerning the American Rebels; except the common Report of their having sundry Armed Vessels, Cruizing for the homeward bound Trade; from the West India Islands; several of which have been taken, and sent for different Ports in America; and some of them it's said, have been Re-taken by the Kings Ships Stationed on the Coast of America. The aforesaid Armed Vessels are said to Cruize about the Latitudes of 30° to 35° North which is at a greater distance, than I can send the Kings Ships at present under my Command to; unless their Lordships will be pleased Considerably to Reinforce the Squadron; and thereby enable me to send out a greater Number of Cruizers, which might then be spread to a greater distance from the Islands.

The inclosed paper Marked No 1, is Copy of a Letter I received the 21st Current from the Honble Craister Greatheed of St Christophers, (Commander in Chief of the Leeward Char[r]ibbee Islands for the time being) by which their Lordships will perceive that on the 5th Instant a terrible Fire broke out in the Town of Basseterre, St Christophers, which has Consumed the greater part of that Town; and to add to their Calamity, on the 6th & 7th Septemr came on a Violent Gale of Wind, with heavy rain; which has done considerable Damage among the Islands, and to the Shipping; particularly at Guadalupe, Marygallante, Martinico, Montserrat, St Kitts and the Islands to Leeward. His Majesty's Brigantine Tender the Sandwich, in coming over from Prince Ruperts Bay with Water, was caught in the Storm, and obliged to Cut away her Main Mast, and put into the Island of Nevis where She procured a new Mast and got refitted and arrived at English harbour the 20th Instant.

I am apprehensive His Majesty's Sloop Pomona, has also met with some disaster and gone away to Leeward; as her Orders directed Her return back to English harbour, the 5th September, and She is not yet arrived; nor have I received any Intelligence of her since the Gale of Wind.

She had before then taken an Armed Brigantine with 8 Guns and 20 Men; which is put into the Island of Tortola in distress; having Cut away her Foremast and thrown her Guns overboard in the late Gale of Wind.

The Portland has been Careened, is Refitted and Sails this day on a Cruize; — The Hind has been Eleven times hove Kell Out, to repair the Damage her Bottom received by striking the Ground coming into English harbour the 25th July; of which Accident I wrote their Lordships by the Weazle: Her Damages are now repaired, and She is refitting for Sea with all possible Expedition.

Yesterday His Majesty's Sloop Hawke came in from Barbados, and acquaints me no Packet is expected to arrive there from England for the Month of August last – The other inclosed Papers marked No 2, 3, and 4; are Account of the Appointment and removal of Officers between the 1st July 1776, and the 30th September 1776, List of Prizes taken since the 1st August last; and the State and Condition of the Squadron under my Command; which you will likewise please to Communicate to their Lordships. I am Sir [&c.]

Whitehall Evening Post, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 12 TO THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1776

A letter from Hallifax dated Oct 1 says, On Friday last [September 27] arrived here his Majesty's ship Viper, from Annapolis [Royal], having brought in with her three prizes, which she took near that place. On Sunday arrived his Majesty's ship Liverpool from a cruize, in which she has retaken several prizes (three of them, we hear, were West India ships) loaded with rum, sugar, &c. which had been taken by the American privateers.

"EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM HALIFAX, OCT. 1."[1]

On Sunday last [September 29] we received advice from Liverpool, in this Province, that some American privateers had taken in Port Medway, a brig belonging to Captain Hall; a sloop the property of Mr. Richard Cunningham, of this town, and several others; and also a ship (nearly loaded with lumber, spars, &c.) out of which they took the provisions, sails, anchors, cables, &c. cut away all the rigging, and after destroying part of the said ship left her.

A schooner loaded with cattle, roots, &c. was likewise taken out of the harbour of Liverpool, bound to this port; and the following persons, who were passengers, were made prisoners, viz. Capt. Forster, Mr. Hawkins, and Mr. Stevenson.

PETITION OF OWNERS OF THE MASSACHUSETTS PRIVATEER SLOOP Revenge TO THE MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL[1]

These may certifie That The Bearer Robert Gragg [Cragg], late Chief Mate on Board The Ship Anna Maria, from Barbadoes for London, Wm Pringle Commander; and taken by the Privateer sloop Revenge of Salem Joseph White Commander. That said Gragg, ever since he was set on shore here in Salem, has behaved in a very orderly and peaceable manner; is, we believe, a man of sound Morals, of sobriety and temperance; in no wise given to bad Company, a sincere friend to the Cause of America. But being now well advanced in life (upwards of sixty) of a very infirm Constitution, unable to endure the severities of This or the English Climate, He Humbly prays The favour of the Honourable the Council of This State, That of Their Goodness, They will grant him The liberty, to go to the West Indies in any Vessel that may hereafter be bound There; — a Climate, He, a number of years past has been accustomed to; That he may pass the small remainder of his life There in Peace. — He frankly and with gratitude acknowledges, and declares, That on all occasions will acknowledge, That he has been always treated with the greatest civility and kindness since his being made a Captive. May [it] please your Honours, as we are of opinion, That, he said Gragg, is truly sincere in his above declaration and a worthy honest man, Pray your Honours indulgence in this Case, and That his prayer may be granted. —

GEORGE WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOR JONATHAN TRUMBULL[1]

Sir Head Quarters Harlem Heights Octor 1st 1776

I have the honor of your favor of the 27th ulto and note the contents. The Row Galleys belonging to your State together with those the property of the United States and all other vessels, on the approach of the Men of War, ran up the North River under cover of the Battery on Mount Washington, from whence tis now impossible to remove them. As they are now posted they are serviceable to us, by preventing a communication with the Ships, and keeping out Row Guards by night, to give us timely notice of the approach, or any movement of the Enemy. To take from them their Crew would be rendering them entirely useless, and to rob them of their weapons would dispirit the men. However, if it should be thought advisable, after weighing the above circumstances, to have the Crew ordered to Connecticut or any of the Arms or other weapons on board to be sent there, your orders shall be attended to. The situation of the Enemy's Ships is very different at this time from what it was before the evacuation of New York. We then had the command of a narrow pass communicating from the Sound to the East River, commonly called Hell-Gate, which is now in their possession — Two of their Ships came through yesterday, one I think a Transport, the other a Frigate mounting 24 Guns —

[New York] Tuesd: Octr: 1st: 1776 I arose very Early in the Morning, & walk'd the Deck as Usual; It is a Lowery Morning, & the People geting Ready to heave up as soon as the Tide Turns. . .

At ½ after 9 the Snow & the Ships that had the Prisoners on board, got under way, & a little before 12 came to in North River Opposite to the Colledge, where we have a very Melancholy Prospect of the Affects of the late Fire, which is sopos'd to have Destroy'd a fourth part of the City, & chiefly in this part of the Town.

Soon after we came too, I borrow'd a pocket Looking Glass & Raisor, & Shav'd my myself [sic] having never look'd in a Glass before, since I was first sent on board the Fleet on the 29th of Augt:

In the Afternoon there came an Offr: on board, & took a List of our Names again, we were also again Inform'd that we were to go on shore Tomorrow; The Night following was cold & very Tedious for us, in our uncomfortable Lodging.

On my leaving London, Arthur Lee esq requested me to inform the committee of correspondence that he had had several conversations with the French ambassador, who had communicated the same to the French court; that, in consequence thereof, the Duke de Vergennes had sent a gentleman to Arthur Lee, who informed him that the French court could not think of entering into a war with England, but that they would assist America, by sending from Holland this fall £200,000 sterling worth of arms and ammunition to St. Eustatius, Martinique, or Cape Francois; that application was to be made to the governors or commandants of those places, by inquiring for Monsieur Hortalez, and that, on persons properly authorized applying, the above articles would be delivered to them — [2]

Philada. October 1, 1776. The above intelligence was communicated to the subscribers, being the only two members of the committee of secret correspondence now in this city, and on our considering the nature and importance of it, we agree in opinion that it is our indispensable duty to keep it a secret, even from Congress, for the following reasons:

(1) Should it get to the ears of our enemies at New York they would undoubtedly take measures to intercept the supplies, and thereby deprive us not only of those succors, but others expected by the same route.

(2) As the court of France have taken measures to negotiate this loan and succour in the most cautious and secret manner, should we divulge it immediately we may not only lose the present benefit, but also render that court cautious of any further connection with such unguarded people, and prevent their granting other loans and assistance that we stand in need of and have directed Mr. Deane to ask of them, for it appears from all our intelligence they are not disposed to enter into an immediate war with Britain, thogh disposed to support us in our contest with them; we therefore think it our duty to cultivate their favorable disposition towards us, draw from them all the support we can, and in the end their private aid must assist us to establish peace or inevitably draw them in as parties to the war.

(3) We find, by fatal experience, the Congress consists of too many members to keep secrets, as none could be more strongly enjoined than the present Embassy to France; notwithstanding which Mr. Morris was this day asked by Mr. Reese Meredith whether Dr. Franklin and others were really going ambassadors to France, which plainly proves that this committee ought to keep this secret, if secrecy is required.

(4) We are of opinion that it is unnecessary to inform Congress of this intelligence at present, because Mr. Morris belongs to all the committees that can properly be employed in receiving and importing the expected supplies from Martinico, and will influence the necessary measures for that purpose; indeed we have already authorized William Bingham, esq. to apply at Martinico and St. Eustatia for what comes there, and remit part by the armed sloop Independence, Captain [John] Young, promising to send others for the rest. Mr. Morris will apply to the marine committee to send other armed vessels after her, and also to Cape François (without communicating this advice), in consequence [of] private intelligence, lately received, that arms, ammunition and clothing can now be procured at those places. But should any unexpected misfortune befall the States of America, so as to depress the spirits of the Congress, it is our opinion that, on any event of that kind, Mr. Morris (if Dr. Franklin should be absent) should communicate this important matter to Congress, otherwise keep it until part of or the whole supplies arrive, unless other events happen to render the communication of it more proper than it appears to be at this time.

COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE TO WILLIAM BINGHAM[1]

[Philadelphia]

We are now at the 1st of October & have heard from Mr. Deane after his arrival at Bourdeaux his last letter is dated 23d June when he was just setting out for Paris. We have later intelligence than his In Consequence of which we desire you to enquire of the General & Governor whether they have recd any Arms or Ammunition from Monsr. Hortalez with directions to deliver the same to any persons properly authorized by Congress to receive them If they have, We hereby authorize you to receive the same giving your Receipts on behalf of the United States of America. If none such are arrived enquire if they have any advice of such & request they will make known to you when they do arrive. We desire you will make the like application to the Governor of St. Eustatia, but proceed cautiously in this business. We think you shou'd go there yourself in a French Vessell or if that might be unsafe or make a noise get Mr Richd Harrison or some person in whose prudence You can Confide, Let the first question be, whether His Excellency has received any advice from Monsr. Hortalez, if the answer be in the Negative, tell him that he will receive letters from such a person & that those advices have reference to you, therefore request the favour of being immediately made acquainted when they come to hand & you will wait on him or send a proper person in your stead — If the answer be in the affirmative then enquire if his Excellency has rec'd anything beside advice from Monsr. Hortalez & if he has, inform him you are empowered to receive the same from him agreable to the directions sent with the Goods, We believe you had best proceed in the same Cautious manner at Martinico & open no more of the business than Circumstances shall make absolutely necessary

We also enjoin you to the Stricktest secrecy and herewith enclose you two separate letters as your proper Authority for receiving any Goods or Money Mr Hortalez our agent in Europe may remit

It was intended that Capt [John] Young shou'd deliver you this letter but as we have some important dispatches to send Mr Deane, we have concluded to send Mr Wm Hodge junr the bearer hereof with the same in order that he may deliver them with his own hands. You'l please to shew Mr Hodge proper attention and assist him to the utmost of your power in procuring him a passage immediately from Martinico to France, in a good Ship, if any Man of War or Packet should be going, make application to the General to recommend Mr. Hodge to the Commander, also to the Commander of the Port where he goes to in France to give him support & assistance from thence to Paris with the best dispatch. If Mr. Hodge should want money for his Expences supply him & transmit us his receipts for the same. You will serve Your Country by forwarding Mr Hodge without delay but you need not mention to the General how urgent we are on this point unless you find it will promote his dispatch —

We learn from many quarters that a Fleet of Twenty Sail of the Line are fitting out at Brest & Toulon Shou'd they come out to the West Indies & be destined to Commit Hostilities against the British Trade or Territorys, they have a fair opportunity to Strike a Capital Stroke at New York where they have upwards of 400 Sail of Ships Guarded only by 2 sixty four Gun Ships, two fiftys and six Fortys the rest are all Frigates &c Twenty Sail of the Line wou'd take their whole Fleet with ease & then we coud as easily manage their Army. We had omitted above to desire that you shou'd send back in the Sloop Independence Capt Young a proportion of the Arms Ammunition Money or other Stores you may receive either at Martinico or St Eustatia from Monsr Hortalez, taking bills of Loading for the same deliverable to us or our order & if the quantity you receive shou'd be considerable, you may send by Capt Young about the Value of three or four thousand pounds Sterlg observing that we want Muskets & Woolen Cloathing most immediately. We shall send more Armed Vessells after Capt Young to bring away the remainder of what you may receive or buy and are sir [&c.]

[Extract] Philadelphia, October 1, 1776.

Dear Sir: Mr. [Robert] Morris has communicated to us the substance of your letters to him down to the 23d June, when you were near setting out for Paris. We hope your reception there has been equal to your expectations and our wishes; indeed we have no reason to doubt it, considering the countenance we have met with amongst the French Islands and their seaports in Europe. It would be very agreeable and useful to hear from you just now, in order to form certain opinions of the designs of the French court respecting us and our contest, especially as we learn by various ways they are fitting out a considerable squadron at Brest and Toulon. What a noble stroke they might now strike at New York! Twenty sail of the line would take the whole fleet there, consisting of between four and five hundred sail of men of war and transports, store-ships and prizes. Was that piece of business once effected by a French fleet, we would engage to give them a very good account of General Howe's army in a short time; but, alas! we fear the court of France will let slip the glorious opportunity, and go to war by halves, as we have done; we say go to war, because we are of opinion they must take part in the war sooner or later, and the longer they are about it the worse terms they will come in upon . . .

If France means to befriend us, or wishes us well, they should send us succours in good muskets, blankets, cloths, coatings, and proper stuff for tents, also in ammunition; but not like the Venetians, wait until we are beat, and then send assistance. We are willing to pay for them, and shall be able soon as we can safely export our tobacco and other valuable produce . . .

Our frigates are fine vessels, but we meet difficulty in procuring guns and anchors. Our people are but young in casting the former, and we want coals to make the latter. However, these difficulties we shall surmount, and are bent on building some line-of-battle ships immediately. The success in privateering and encouragement given by the merchants will inevitably bring seamen amongst us. This, with the measure that will be adopted to encourage the breeding of seamen amongst ourselves, will in a few years make us respectable on the ocean. Surely France cannot be so blind to her own interests as to neglect this glorious opportunity of destroying the power and humbling the pride of her natural and our declared enemy.

We make no doubt but you have been made acquainted with the negotiations of Monsieur Hortalez, and in consequence thereof we conclude you will be at no loss to obtain the supplies of goods wanted for a particular department, notwithstanding we know that the greatest part of those remittances that were intended you have been intercepted by one means or other It is unfortunate and much to be regretted that those remittances have had such ill fate, but we hope you have obtained the goods on credit, and you may depend that remittances will be continued until all your engagements are discharged.

Clothing and tents are so much wanted for our armies that we entreat you to apply immediately to the court of France for a loan of money sufficient to dispatch immediately considerable quantities of stuff fit for tents, and of coarse cloths, coatings, stockings, and such other comfortable necessaries for an army as you can readily judge will be proper. You will get these goods either sent out direct in French vessels or to their islands, where we can send for them; but if you could prevail on the court of France to send out men-of-war with them it would be most acceptable. Whatever engagements you make for the payment of the cost of such clothing and necessaries the Congress will order sufficient remittances to fulfil the same; but in our circumstances it requires time to accomplish them. You'll observe the secret committee have given orders to Mr. Thomas Morris to procure sundry articles and dispatch them immediately; and if you succeed in the negotiations of a loan from the court for this purpose, you may employ him or act in conjunction with him to procure and dispatch those articles by them and such others as you shall judge necessary, and the remittances to be made him will serve to refund the loan. Should the court decline this matter perhaps the Farmers-General may be induced to advance the money or stake their credit for the sake of securing the tobacoo the secret committee will remit to Europe. These things we throw out as hints, and shall only further observe that you can not render your injured country more essential service at this time than by procuring these supplies immediately.

We are told that our vigilant enemies have demanded of the courts of France, Spain, and Portugal to deliver up the American ships in their ports and to forbid their having any future intercourse with them. The court of Portugal has complied so far as to order our ships away on ten days' notice. That France and Spain gave evasive answers. This is private uncertain intelligence; but we think you will do well to intimate to the ministers of those nations that first impressions are lasting; that the time has been when they stood much in need of American supplies; that the time may come again; that, although we are styled rebels by Britain, yet our friendship may hereafter be of the utmost importance to those powers particularly that possess American colonies, and that injuries now done us will not be easily effaced. These hints of argument you'll offer as the suggestion of your own mind, and endeavour to influence them by interest or fear from taking any active part against us. On the contrary, as it is evidently their interest to encourage our commerce, so we hope you'll be able to influence them by one means or other to protect and license it in the utmost extent.

We shall not take up more of your time at present, But remain, sir [&c.]

ROBERT MORRIS TO THE MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY[1]

In Secret Committee Philada Octr 1st 1776

Gentn Publick Bodys shou'd be equaly cautious of taking offence as of giving it, because mischiefs are very apt to arise therefrom & generally before a remedy can be applyed. You have taken amiss the refusal of fourteen ps Canvass wanted for your Colonial Vessels & had information that 2000 ps had been imported in one Vessell here. These are your premises & the Facts are as follow. It was not this Committee that refused you the Canvass for we had agreable to orders of Congress delivered the whole to the Marine Committee & that whole consisted of about 600 ps instead of 2000, but it was not possible the Marine Committee cou'd spare you a single Bolt, because the Congress had but a day or two before your application ordered all the light Duck & other stuff, then in the Publick Stores or that coud be bought in the City to be made up into Tents and sent immediately to Genl Washington, the Marine Committee remonstrated against this measure alledging that none of the Continental Vessels cou'd be sent out if this Canvass was taken from them, No Matter they were told the Soldiers should have Tents if they stripped the Yards of those Continental Frigates & Cruizers that had sails made up, & in Consequence of this measure which nothing but the extream necessity of our Army coud justify, We have now a parcell of five Vessells lying here useless at a time they might have been most advantageously employed. Therefore Judge you, whether that Committee or the Congress itself cou'd have justifyed sparing you the Canvass you wanted. You may depend Gentn that no just grounds are ever meant to be given by Congress or any of its Committees for Complaints like yours. We are all embarked in a Cause that requires our utmost united exertions to carry us through, and be assured that you can always Command our utmost Aid and assistance, when it can possibly be extended, consistent with the general Welfare. For & on behalf of the Secret Committee. I have the honor to be Gentn [&c.]

We did not enter into any agreement with him to finish it at any particular day; but on his return from Philadelphia, as he coud not get it there, we promised to do our endeavours to compleat it as soon as possible, and which we mean to comply with, so soon as we get rid of the Firgates[2] Riging, which we think will be finished in a week – after that, we hope to furnish for the Gondolas nearly as fast as it is wanted, and shall agreeable to Mr Stewarts directions forward it to Annapolis as we make it. Commissioners Appointed to fit out the Brig Pennsylvania Farmer to the North Carolina Council of Safety [1]

Gentlemen Newbern October 1st 1776.

We being intrusted by your Honble Board to fit out an armed Vessel from this Port, can now inform your Honours that the Brig! Pennsylvania Farmer is compleatly fitted and man'd ready for service, and hath been so some months past only for the want of shot, which we have now got, sufficient for a Cruise and as she is so well man'd and fitted, and the whole Crew as well officers as men so anxious of going out rather than be laying allmost Idle in a harbour, which does not altogether suit the disposition of a sailor, and as she has been at a considerable expence to the Country we think it adviseable she should goe out, as its quite probable that in a very short time she may reimburse the Country in an ample manner the whole expence and much to spare, by bringing in some valuable prizes, which we hope you'll take into Consideration and if approved off by your Honble Board, you'll send us directions to send her on a Cruise. We think no time is [to] be Lost from Certain Accounts we have had of a fleet of Merchantmen sailing this month from Jamaica for England without convoy –

We some weeks agoe were anxious of geting the Brig down to the Bar, but could not send her with Safety as she had not a sufficient anchor and Cable. it was thought, to ride out a Gale of Wind which might be expected at this season of the year and none to be purchased, we thought ourselves justifiable, especially as so much of the Country property was depending, in taking one from a sloop belonging to Mr Schyler of New york, that we were told was to be carried up Trent river there to be Layed up this Winter 'till the Spring, out of the way of Hurricanes, therefore we Judged it could well be spared without any detriment to Mr Schyler sole owner of said Sloop, and [as] the Country's Service required it we did not think the owner himself had he been here would have had the least objection to it nor do we beleive any person else had it not been particularly wanted at the same time for the Brigantine William, belonging to Mr John Wright Stanly and others as we were informed by the master of the said Brig — thus far respecting the said anchor and cable we thought proper to mention to your Honours at this time as we are inform'd a Complaint is intended to be lodged against us respecting the same –

No Commission having as yet been made out for the Pennsylvania Farmer you'll please to send one for her by the Bearer with your directions – We are Gentlemen [&c.]

[On Board the Prison Snow Mentor]

[Off New York] Wednesd: the 2nd: Was a very cold Morning; we had our breakfast of Chocolet, earlier than common, partly on ac[coun]t: of our Expectation of Landing this Day; but about 1 oClock a Number of Marines came on board, and Inform'd us that we were not to Land this Day, & that there had between 3 & 4 hundred of the Prisoners ben Landed, who had all Engaged to Join the Kings Army.

This Day the Capt Order'd a Large Cable to be Quiled away in our Birth, which greatly Disoblig'd us in the Day Time, but yet as we expected Emediately to Land, we thought little of it, but when Night came, we found ourselves greatly Disaccommodated, & by Reason of this unnecessary & Disingenuous Order of Capt: Davis, we Rested but very little but spent the Night considerably, as we had done before, while we were on board the Passific.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN

Né à Boston, dans la nouvelle Angleterre, le 17 Janv. 1706.

COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE TO SILAS DEANE[1]

Sir Philada October 2d 1776

We have this day received from the Honorable Congress of Delegates of the United States of America the important papers that accompany this letter being, first, a Treaty of Commerce & Alliance between the Court of France & these States —

Second, Instructions to their Commissioners relative to the said Treaty —

lastly, A Commission, whereby you will see that Doctr. Franklin, The Honorable Thos Jefferson Esqr & yourself are appointed Commissioners for Negotiating said Treaty at the Court of France.

These papers speak for themselves & need no Strictures or remarks from us, neither is it our business to make any. You will observe that in case of absence or disability of any one or two of the Commissioners the other has full Power to Act.

We therefore think it proper to inform you that Doctr Franklin & Mr Jefferson will take Passage with all Speed, but it is necessary that their appointment on this business remain a profound Secret and we do not choose even to trust this paper with their rout. suffice it therefore, that you expect them soon after this reaches your hands, but by different conveyances. And if you do not see some evident advantage will arise by Communicating this Commission to the French Ministry immediately, We give it as our opinion You had best suspend it, until the arrival of one or both these Gentlemen, because you will then benefit of each others advice & abilities, and we apprehend their arrival will give additional Importance to the Embassy

But should you be of opinion that delay will be in the least degree injurious to our Country or its Cause, you must by all means use your own discretion in this matter, wherein we are not authorised to instruct or advise; we only offer our own thoughts on the Subject. Shou'd you think proper to disclose this Commission to the Ministers of France, enjoin the Stricktest Secrecy respecting the Names, or rather insist that it be not made known to any Persons, but those whose office and employments entitle them to the communication that any others are joined with you in it because if that Circumstance reaches England before their arrival it will evidently endanger their Persons. The Congress have ordered the Secret Committee to lodge Ten thousand Pounds Sterling in France subject to the drafts or orders of the Commissioners for their support, and you may depend that remittances will be made for that purpose with all possible dilligence. We can also inform you, that you may expect instructions for forming Treaties with other Nations. Consequently you will Cultivate a good understanding with all the Foreign Ministers.

We have Committed these Important dispatches to the care of Mr Wm Hodge junr who we hope will in due time have the pleasure to deliver them in person, he knows nothing more of their Contents, than that they are Important and in case of Capture his orders are to sink them in the Sea. This Young Gentlemans Character, Family, & alertness in the Publick Service, all entitle him to your Notice. He is also charged with some business from the Secret Committee wherein your Countenance & assistance may be usefull you will no doubt extend it to him and also engage Mr [Thomas] Morris's exertions therein

You will please to advance Mr Hodge the Value of One hundred & fifty pounds Sterling for his Expences & transmit us his receipt for the same. We most fervently pray for a successfull negotiation & are with the utmost attention & regard Dear Sir [&c.]

B Franklin Robt Morris

P. S Mr Hodge has some instructions from the Secret Committee which he will lay before you & if the Negotiation of Monsr Hortalez respecting Arms & Ammunition has been Conducted with success it will be needless for Mr Hodge to make Contracts for those Articles. You will know how that Matter is and direct Mr Hodge accordingly, And if you shoud think it of more Consequence to send him immediately back here with dispatches than to employ him in the business that Committee have proposed he will obey your orders & Mr Morris may do the other —

Richard Henry Lee to William Lee[1]

[Extract] Philadelphia October the 2d 1776

. . . The American strength on that Lake [Champlain] is at this time so great both by land and water that they rest secure against any attempts from Gens Carleton and Burgoyn. When the whole Fleet and Army were collected before New York, the British Troops havg been for some time in possession of Staten Island, they landed the greatest part of their Army on Long Island, where they had not been long, before an engagement happened between 3000 of the American troops and (as the best accounts here agree) at least 18,000 of the regulars, which ended in the loss of about 1000 Men taken, killed, & wounded of the Americans, who made few prisoners, but who slaughtered of their enemies many more than were killed of their own people — It being very evident that Long Island and the City of N. York were not to be defended against a potent land army & sea force acting in conjunction, both these places were in their turns evacuated, and the American Army retreated to their present post on the heights of Haerlem about 8 or 10 miles above the City and on the same Tongue of land upon which the Town stands. This is a very strong post by nature and strongly fortified by Art[illery]. 30,000 men are there placed to prevent the further progress of Mr Howe and to this time he has been effectually prevented . . . Thus things remain this 2d of October — The British Army have Connecticut on their right where they do not incline to go, Gen Washington with 30,000 men on the heights of Haerlem in their Front, and on their left the Jersies in which an army of observation is posted either to prevent penetration that way or to aid Gen. Washington occasionally. The N. [North] River is so obstructed that Vessels cannot go above the heights of Haerlem, and these obstructions are covered by 50 pieces of heavy Cannon placed on the heights. This you may depend upon it is a true state of things at present, and you will readily see how poor a compensation it promises for the expence of 12 millions this Campaign, and the loss of America for ever. . . . when the Army and Fleet destined against America was made known, the eyes of all Men were opened, the blind saw, the timid became determin'd, and all joined in commanding the Congress to declare the Colonies Free & Independent States, which they did. . . The number of Prizes taken by the American Cruisers is wonderful — At least 6000 hhds of Sugar and a world of other Goods are already safe in these Ports, and the American force by Sea daily increasing. I do realy think, that if a great Statesman with proper powers were to arise in England, he would endeavor to save his Country by immediately acknowledging the independence of North America and forming with these States an advantageous Treaty of Commerce. Shortly it may be too late.

Since our last was sent in here, the ship William, Captain [John] Bond, from Jamaica for Liverpool, with 150 hds. of sugar, 9 hds. of rum, and 2 bales of cotton, taken by the privateer sloop Chance, and a brig from Barbados for London, with 200 hds. rum, taken by the Continental sloop Providence.[1]

By the ships from Jamaica, we learn, that provisions have become very scarce there, that the negroes had actually rose and cut off several plantations in that island, and that the Governor had proclaimed martial law. We also learn, that the humane Butchers of Britain had ordered the scattered remains of the 60th regiment, stationed there since the year 1772, to this continent to cut our throats, instead of letting them remain there to protect the island.

Last Saturday a number of officers and privates, belonging to the American army, and who had been taken prisoners in Canada, arrived in this city agreeable to the proclamation of Gen. Carlton. They were sent in four transports, under convoy of the Pearl frigate of thirty-two guns, from Quebec to New-York, where Gen. Howe detained them on board a fortnight. . . .

I shall therefore be oblig'd to you to regulate this matter with the Committee of York Town in such a way that payment may be made to the Landlords here, as it will be inconvenient for them to wait on the Congress. MAJOR GENERAL HORATIO GATES TO BRIGADIER GENERAL BENEDICT ARNOLD [1]

Dear General Tyonderoga 3d October 1776

Last Night I received Your Letter of the First Instant by Lieut: [James] Calderwood. Capt [David] Hawley carried with him all the Seamen that were to be had here, when he went from Hence. Those who have been procured since, Saild Yesterday in the Two Row-Gallies, under General Waterbury's Command, to which were Added One Hundred & Ten Men, Officers Included. Besides the Number you determined upon, for the Full Complement of each Row Galley, – not One of the Two Hundred Seamen promised from New York, have yet Arrived here. I now give up the hopes of seeing them for this Year – As to the Equipment of the Trumbull, I am not answerable for any Deficiency, General Waterbury, who had the Intire Management of Rigging and Arming The Gallies, will satisfy all your Questions upon that Head. – I know not howmuch Cordage you wrote for in July, or whether it is yet half Arrived; but this I know, that General Waterbury Assured me there was not more than half the Quantity necessary. and we shall have much to do to furnish the Galley which came last night from Skeensborough. Not a Cable yet Arrived from Albany & those here too bad for Use – Capt Dow who perfectly understands Fitting of Vessells, has my Orders to Assist Captain in getting his Galley Equip'd with the utmost possible Expedition. I am told shee will Sail in a Week, being much better Fitted when she left Skeensborough, than those who came before her from thence, Col [Jonathan] Trumbull [Jr.], & Mr Conductor Lane, assure me they have put every Article that you Demanded in your last Letter on board the Liberty Schooner Except what is not to be had here – where it is not to be had you, & the Princes of the Earth must go unfurnish'd – As to any unnecessary delays made by the Captain of The Liberty, I must refer you to Genl Waterbury. I am told the Man was dilligent, and that the Vessell wanted more Caulking than you suspected

All the Cloathing we have, goes in the Liberty Schooner, to be delivered to your Order –

I have represented to General Schuyler & to Congress the Absolute necessity of taking immediate measures to Augment Our Fleet upon this Lake, I suppose so Important Business will not be deferred, or Delay'd: –

I take it for Granted you will Consult with General Waterbury & Colonel [Edward] Wigglesworth & with them Determine when it is proper Season to retire Up the Lake, I am confident Your, & their Zeal, for the public Service, will not suffer You to return One Moment sooner than in prudence & Good Conduct you Ought to do it. Perhaps, some Station nearer Crown Point, may, About the Time you Mention, be proper to be taken but this must be submitted to your better Judgements in Maritime Affairs –

The Commissary sent in the Gallies which Saild Yesterday Fourteen Barrells of Rum, Six more go now in the Liberty; a Quantity of Fresh Beef, and Other Victuals, went by the same conveyance, which Mr Yancey acquainted you with, particularly by Letter; if you think proper to keep the Lee Gondola, or any Other, to go between Ty– & the Fleet, we can be Able to send you Supplies in as Ample manner as Ty– will Afford –

I have read & Noticed Serjeant Stiles's Examination, by the Enemy's building a Battery for Heavy Cannon at River La Cole, I am inclined to suspect they are rather Acting upon the Defensive; – but until the Middle of the next month Arrives, I shall not intirely give up the probability of seeing them this Year –

Col Trumbull gave you the best Account in his Power of the Transactions in the Neighbourhood of N. York, as I have constantly done, & as I shall continue to do; therefore, be satisfied, when you do not hear all you wish; it is because all you wish is not come to my knowledge. There is not a Syllable of News, good or bad, since I wrote to you, Yesterday –. My Affectionate Compliments to General Waterbury & Col Wigglesworth. & believe me dear Genl Your Affectionate [&c.]

MAJOR GENERAL PHILIP SCHUYLER TO JOHN HANCOCK[1]

[Extract] Albany October 3d 1776

The Cables are by this Time arrived at Tyonderoga – They were made at poghkeepsie and with Dispatch and forwarded without a Moment's Delay.

No Carpenters are to be procured here, the far greater part of the great Numbers I sent up in the Course of the Campaign have sickened and returned Home — On the Subject of encreasing our Navy on Lake Champlain I have already wrote to Congress.

Journal of Ambrose Serle[1]

Thursday, 3d [October].

The Daphne, Capt. [St. John] Chinnery, with 12 Sail of Transports having on board the 16th. or [John] Burgoyne's Regiment of Light Horse, came up this Morning. They have been 10 Weeks and 3 Days on their Passage, having parted with one of their Ships, and lost about 40 Horses. No Letters from England for me, to my great Disappointment. One Ship was missing, wch (as we afterwards learned) was taken by the Rebels.

Lord Shuldham, Sir Peter Parker, Commodore Hotham, and their several Captains, dined on board the Eagle. Their Discourse ran much upon the good or ill Qualities of Wines, in which I have but little Judgement, and therefore could have but little to say.

Diary of Lieutenant Jabez Fitch[1]

[On board the Prison Snow Mentor]

[Off New York] Thirdsd: the 3rd: [October] Being very weary of my Lodging, I turn'd out Early in the Morning, & Walk'd the Deck for a Long Time, the Weather being Clowdy cold & Chilly; Capt: [Jonathan] Brewster is much unwell this Morning; We seem this Morning also, to meet with great Difficulty in geting Breakfast nor do we yet know whether we are like to break our Fast at all.

We had some words this Forenoon with Capt: Davis, on acct of the Cable, but to no great purpose that I know of as yet.

At about 10 oClock (with much Difficulty) we procured a Dish of Chocolet; Capt: Hawker came on board about this Time, but Informs us of nothing new, concerning our Landing, or any other Matter; I spent most of this Day on Deck, on acct: of being Discommoded below, alth'o the weather was Chilly & uncomfortable, I was also somewhat unwell.

Toward Night the Sailors came down and cover'd the Cable with Grating & other Rough Affairs for us to lodge on, pretendedly soposing we were much beholden to them for so great a piece of Lenity & Care for us. After this I procured a number of Oxslings, with which I prepared myself a Lodging on one of the Gratings, on which I Rested the most Comfortable that I had done since my Imprisonment.

Continental Marine Committee to Hewes & Smith, Edenton[1]

Gentlemen [Philadelphia] October 3d 1776

You will receive this from Lieutenant Thomas Albertson commander of the Schooner Muskeeto now employed in the Continental service as an advice Boat, She carries but few Letters this voyage but what there are must be put in the post office, and the same price charged for carriage as if they had gone from hence by Land — which you will please to see done Mr [Joseph] Hewes having fitted this Schooner himself before he left

We desire you to Ship back by this Vessel One hundred barrels Cool Tar, two tons tawlow in barrels, and twelve barrels Rosin, for the use of our Navy. If the Schooner will carry more put it on board, if not so much, you must leave out a little of each. We beg you will despatch Mr Albertson back immediately, don't allow him to stay on any account. If he wants a few men pray assist him in getting them and your drafts on the Chairman of the Marine Committee for the Cost of the goods ordered & of the Schooners disbursements will be duely honored. We are sir [&c.]
P:S: You have enclosed a manifest of the Cargo and Mr Hewes must allow a handsome freight for his goods which you'l Credit in the Schooners accounts.

[Copy] Philadelphia Octor 3d 1776

Sir We deliver you herewith Copies of the Letters & Credentials you had from us when you sailed on your late unfortunate voyage, the originals whereof we understand you destroyed on being taken by the Orpheus Man of War.[2] We have since that time taken other measures for procuring Arms and Ammunition which probably may have succeeded, therefore we request you will lay those Copies and this Letter before Silas Deane esqr at Paris and follow such advice and directions as he may give respecting Arms and ammunition but with respect to the Cutters we approve much of that Plan and wish it to be executed and even enlarged. We therefore propose that you should consult with Mr Deane and Mr [Thomas] Morris on this subject, and if you find it will be in your power to procure Seamen and obtain liberty to Arm and fit out vessels in France, Spain, or Holland that you should if possible buy a Frigate of 20 to 40 Guns, have her compleatly fitted armed and manned putting in a gentleman of unexceptionable good character being also an able Seaman to command her for which purpose we give you herewith a blank Commission to be filled up with his and the Ships name which may be the Surprize. The Captain and you may appoint the other Officers necessary for this Ship giving to each a Certificate shewing his Station. When the Ship is compleated you must give Orders to the Captain signed by Mr Deane to cruize in the Channel against the enemies of the United States of America, making Prize of all British property as he can meet with. He may send his prizes into such Ports in France as may be most convenient and you will there demand protection for them, or rather let Mr Deane demand this and also liberty to make sale of such goods as he, Mr Morris and yourself may think best to sell there, direct the Captain to take out any drygoods he finds on board his Prizes into his Own Ship, and when by this means he has got a considerable quantity on board, let him come away for this Coast, and get into the first place of safety he can in the United States of America. The Captain must before he goes give bond duly to Observe all the Rules and Regulations of Congress and herewith we deliver you a blank bond, with a book of those Rules and a List of the Continental agents. Any Prize that he sends into France you must send forward from thence to some of these States, unless Mr Deane Mr Morris & yourself agree it is more for the Public good to sell in France and if you sell them there apply the Neat proceeds to pay the Debts you Contract in this business. Besides this Ship we approve also of the Two Cutters as mentioned in our former Letters. You may Arm fit and Man them and dispatch them hither soon as possible, either with Arms, Ammunition, or such other goods as Mr Deane and Mr Morris may recommend or provide. We deliver you Commissions &c. for these Vessels also, and recommend you to be very attentive to the choice of Captains; they should all be good Seamen Men of good character and Principles, strongly attached to this Country and its cause and prefer Americans thus deserving to any other Country. If such Americans are not to be found, seek for good men of other Countries that have been here or have connections amongst us; we know that there are many such in Europe that would be glad of the employ. This Ship must make but a Short Cruize in the Channel and a Short one will do the business for she will daily meet Prizes, but if She is long there they will have men of War in quest of her. We hope you'l meet with some fine fast sailing ship for this purpose, and be able to purchase & fit her on reasonable Terms. We shall desire Mr Deane & Mr Morris to join you in the necessary assurances to those you deal with of being faithfully reimbursed & we again repeat that we shall make remittances in the produce of this Country for that purpose.

We will also make you a proper Compensation for your trouble and services hereafter when they can be better ascertained therefore wishing you success we remain Sir [&c.]

P.S. It is absolutely necessary that you observe the utmost Secrecy in all this business and make use of every Cloak or Cover you can think of to hide the real design

I wrote to you by a Merchant Ship the 15th of Septr in which I desired you would be pleased to acquaint their Lordships, that we were so short of water that unless we had a fair Wind very soon I should be obliged to put into some Port, we have since been very unlucky in our Winds and not meeting with any Men of War, I propose putting into some harbour in Newfoundland to get water; Thirteen of the Convoy parted Company in a Gale of Wind, the rest have parted by request or of their own accord, as we have taken the greatest pains the whole Voyage to keep them together and never have steered out of their Course only gone a little more to the Northward than they chose. On the 30th Septr we retook a Ship that had been taken by an American Sloop Privateer the last day of August in Latitude 42° N; Longde 39° W, she was call'd the Anne bound from Dominica to London they were carrying her to New York. Connecticut Gazette, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1776 [1]

New-London, October 4.

Last Lord's-Day Se'nnight Capt. Rowe, with a Party of Men, landed at a Place called The Old-Man's, near Brookhaven, on Long-Island, in order to remove his Family from Corum, to the Main, where he met one Richard Miller, a Native of East-Hampton, who had taken a Commission under Gen. Howe, and was inlisting Men for the Regular Army, and as he was riding by Capt. Rowe's Door where a centry was placed, Miller was hailed and ordered to stop, which he refused to do, and rode the faster, and after being repeatedly called upon to stop, and he not regarding, the Guard fired at him, when a Ball entered his Body, and he died the next Morning.

Last Wednesday a Prize Ship from Jamaica, bound to London, was sent into Port by the armed Brig Defence, belonging to the State of Connecticut, commanded by Capt. Seth Harding; she sailed from Montego Bay in company with 200 Sail under convoy of two Men of War, who had parted with them and returned into Port. Her Cargo consists of 306 Hogsheads of Sugar, 158 Ditto of Rum, 16 Bails of Cotton, a Quantity of Coffee and Mahogany, and has two Turtle on Board. She is about 300 Tons, called the John, McDonald, Master, was taken 12 Days ago.

An Embargo being laid on the Shipping in Jamaica, on Account of the Insurrection among the Negroes, for want of Provisions, detained the above Fleet; who, when they sailed, were on short Allowance of Provisions.

Yesterday Noon, Capt. Harding, in the Defence Privateer arrived from a Cruize; the same Morning off Narragansett-Beach, he fell in with two British Frigates, who fired 60 or 70 Shot at him, and he returned them a like Number. About 2 o'Clock Yesterday the two Frigates came to Anchor off Goshen-Reef, about 5 Miles westward of this Harbour.

Capt. Harding, two Days after taking the Prize before mentioned, fell in with and took a Guinea-man, homeward bound from the West-Indies, William Jackson, Master.

Affidavit of John Finley and Others [1]

Alexandria, the 4th October 1776.

On Tuesday the 23rd of July last, we, the subscribers, set off from this place with intention to see the enemy's ships, which we were informed were proceeding up Patowmack, and arrived opposite them at Sandy-Point, in Maryland, about half an hour past 6 o'clock in the evening, where we found a body of militia stationed, who informed us there were more men a little lower down the river, to whom we immediately went, and were by them told that col. [William] Harrison, with a detachment of 25 men, was gone down to prevent the enemy's taking off capt. [Robert] Conway's boats, by means of a gondola and armed schooner, which had left the ships for that purpose, as was conceived. We saw the Roebuck under way turning down, and firing now and then across the field, between the detachment and main body, and heard other great guns, which we supposed were from the gondola and armed schooner. We returned to the main body where we immediately heard a brisk firing of small arms and swivels, which was thought to be an engagement betwixt the detachment and the enemy. We think about sixteen cannon were fired in the whole. The men appeared to be all drawn up ready with their arms, and during the firing seemed in good spirits, and we heard several of them ask if they might not to go to the assistance of the detachment. We saw, nor discovered, nothing like cowardice; but on the contrary, a willing spirit seemed generally to prevail.

GOVERNOR NICHOLAS COOKE TO GOVERNOR JONATHAN TRUMBULL, LEBANON [1]

Sir, – Providence, October 5th, 1776.

I am to acknowledge the favour of your Honor's letter of the 1st instant, and to inform you that I laid it before the committee appointed to act in the recess of the General Assembly, who also conferred with Commodore Hopkins, and Mr. [Aaron] Burr upon your plan of an expedition to Long Island.

The committee upon the information and advice of Mr. [Stephen] Hopkins, a member of the General Congress, had countermanded their order for the marching of Col. [William] Richmond's regiment to New York, and had given permission to the men to enlist on board the Continental vessels fitting from this State. But anxious to do everything in their power to serve the general cause have, in consequence of the conference above mentioned, issued new orders to Col. Richmond to march with such of his regiment as shall not engage in the Continental vessels to proceed to New London on Friday next, and then to follow such orders as he shall receive from a general officer to be appointed by General Washington. They have also directed Mr. Bowler to send forward the whaleboats from the Massachusetts by that regiment, together with such as he can collect in this State, which will be between twenty and thirty. They have also ordered the two Row Gallies of this State to New London to strengthen the naval force as much as possible.[2] The Row Gallies are to be under the direction of Commodore Hopkins, who will write you by this express, and to whom I beg leave to refer you for an account of the forwardness of the Continental vessels in this State. This letter will be delivered you by Mr. Jonathan Hazard, a member of the General Assembly, whom I beg leave to recommend to your Honor's attention. I am, with great esteem and respect, Sir, [&c.]

YESTERDAY arrived here the Brigantine Marquis of Kildare, Capt. Thomas Palmer, in 9 weeks from Bourdeaux with a cargo of military stores &c. Further particulars in our next.

Extract of a letter from Philadelphia, Sept. 6.

"Our affairs at Ticonderoga and Crown Point wear a favourable appearance, where by the last return, the army were about thirteen thousand strong, of which about 2 or 3 were unfit for duty, in addition to these six other Regiments were on their march from Connecticut and Massachusetts, and about 4 regiments at other different posts. At New-York things for the present are a little shattered, by means of the retreat, but the skirmish on Long Island has served to convince our army, that they are now able with the regiments that are disciplined to meet the enemy on equal terms: General Lee, is ordered to reinforce them with several regiments from the Northward, and one from Rhode Island, and with him conducting the General may yet baffle the enemy. There is reason to imagine that the enemy have suffered more than our army, including the captives."

The sloop Industry arrived at Falmouth, Casco-Bay, a sloop from Halifax, commanded by one Potter, and taken off Narraganset river, by Capt. Joshua Stone, in the Revenue Privateer, fitted out from Falmouth.

I shall do all in my power to forward your Expedition, and join your Fleet when ever you give Orders so to do at New London – but expect you will Excuse me to the Congress for not putting their Orders in Execution with respect to some of the Fleet – I am with great Respect Sir [&c.]

Providence, October 5.

On Sunday last Capt. Gideon Crawford arrived here from Nantz, in France, after a Passage of eight Weeks. He informs that great warlike Preparations continue to be made in that Kingdom, where every Kind of Indulgence is shewn to American Vessels. He also advises, that he saw an Account in a French Paper of the Marlborough, a 90 Gun Ship, being blown up at Plymouth some Time in July last, and that great Part of the Crew perished.[1]

The same Day arrived here, from a successful Cruize, the Ship Columbus, Captain Abraham W[h]ipple, in the Service of the United States, having taken four Prizes, viz. a Brig from St. Croix, bound to Scotland, with 265 Hogsheads of Rum, 1 Tierce and 12 Barrels of Sugar; a Ship from

St. Christophers, bound to London, with 291 Hogsheads, 59 Tierces, 23 Barrels and 12 Kilderkins of Sugar, and 15 Hogsheads and 3 Barrels of Rum; a Ship from Grenada, bound to London, with 300 Hogsheads of Sugar, 57 Hogsheads of Rum, 1 Pipe and 2 Hogsheads of Wine, and some Cotton; and a Brig from Montserrat, bound to Cork, with 218 Hogsheads of Rum. Two of the above Prizes are arrived at the Eastward.[2]

Capt. John Field, in the Privateer Joseph, of this Place, has taken a Schooner, bound from Nevis to London, laden with Sugar and Rum: And Capt. [Thomas] Child, in the Privateer Industry, likewise of this Place, has taken a Brig from Antigua, bound to Ireland, having on board Sugar and Rum. Both the above Prizes are arrived in Port.[3]

It is reported that five or six Sail of Provision Vessels, bound to New-York, have been taken by some Privateers, and carried in at the Eastward.

1. Brig Happy Return. Captain Crawford's account of H. M. S. Marlborough had no basis in fact.
2. The prizes Royal Exchange and Lord Lifford arrived at Boston; the other two were recaptured.

October 5. Went up to our corps at Riviere-la-Cole,[2] after remaining with my friends of the 31 regiment till I recovered sufficient strength. I sailed up in a raddoux vessel carrying six 9 pounders, commanded by captain [Edward] Longcraft, who shewed me every civility in his power. The floating Battery, Maria, and Carlton sailed with us, & our little voyage was pleasant, the day being fine, & the Lake now turning very broad. General Burgoyne was on board the Maria, who ran aground on a bank, but was towed off without any damage. The vessels were all cleared & ready for action, waiting only for the Inflexible, our largest vessel which was shortly expected up.

[On board the Prison Snow Mentor]

[Off New York] Saturd: the 5th: [October] Was a very Cold uncomfortable morning, we had our Chocalet Earlyer than Usual, after which I spent some Time in walking the Deck. I then went below and did some writing.

At about 10 oClock the Prisoners on board the Argo were Landed, soon after which, we were Direct ed to have our Bagage &c Ready to Land Early Tomorrow Morning; We Observ'd a Considrable number of Horse Landed again this Day; The Seamen spent most of the Day in overhalling the Hold, they Hoisted out a great number of Water Butts &c. which clutter'd the Deck in a prodigous manner, which greatly Disaccomodated us above, as well as below; About Noon some of our People had some small Stores came on board, by the Snows Boat; The Night following some of our People met with some peculiar Insults from the Centrys when they attempted to go on Deck, for Necessity, this we were afterward Inform'd was occasioned by a fals Report, that some Officer on board, had an Intention to make his Escape.

A letter from Tench Tilghman to Wm. Duer, Esqr. dated the 3d inst. was read, a part whereof is in the words following, to wit:

> Capt. Cook is now up the river cutting timber for chevaux-de-frise; as he is much wanted here to sink the old vessels, the General begs that you would immediately send him down; we are at a stand for want of him, for as he has superintended the matter from the beginning, he best knows the properest places to be obstructed.

Ordered, That a certified copy of the above part of Mr. Tilghman's letter [be] immediately despatched to Capt. Cooke.

A letter from Capt. Samuel Tudor, one of the superintendents of the Continental frigates building at Poughkeepsie, was read, and is in the words following, to wit:

Poughkeepsie, 2nd, Octr. 1776.

Gentlemen — The bearer, Mr. McEuen, is employed in the yard as plumber to the ships; his business is obliged to stop for the want of lead, which we cannot procure for him. We are informed there is a quantity at Fishkill under your direction and disposal; beg it as a particular favour you would furnish him with such quantity as he may want, with all expedition, as our orders from the commissioners are to put the ships in the water as soon as possible. We are with respect, gentlemen [&c.]

Saml. Tudor.

Peter R. Livingston, Esqr.

Malcom McEuen, the bearer, was called in and interrogated as to the lead necessary for the said frigates, and withdrew.

Ordered, That Mr. Danl. Bush be and he is hereby directed to deliver to Nathl. Sacket, Esqr. all the lead in his possession belonging to this State, taking a receipt for the same; and that this Convention will justify him in the execution thereof.

Ordered, That Nathl. Sacket, Esqr. deliver to the bearer hereof, Mr. Malcom McEuen, for the use of the Convention for the Continental frigates building at Poughkeepsie, two tons of lead, and that he take Mr. McEuen's receipt for the same, to be charged to Continental account.

Sir Boston 6 October 1776.

Yesterday I received from Mr Glover, Agent at Marblehead, a Box of broad Swords, which he lately found in the Scotch Ship Ann, that was taken some time since. Also received from Mr Bradford, Agent for Continental Prizes, the inclosed Invoice, of articles which he has in his hands. The reason he gave for delaying it so long, was, the Plaids were infested with the small pox and he thought it necessary to cleanse and air them considerable time before they were used. Lieutenant Thomas Quigley to Thomas Randall [1]

On board the [General] Putnam, Cranberry,
Sir – Oct. 6, 1776.

I received yours of the 1st of October, in which you advise me to keep a good look out for the enemy's vessels. You may depend there shall none of them pass us through our negligence; we have seen three since my last to you, the first, a large snow, which we chased within sight of the Hook, but two of the enemy's vessels, tenders, coming out of the Hook, was obliged to give over the chase and return. The second, a brig, we took to be a transport, which we likewise chased some hours off Cranberry inlet, but being in sight of four other vessels, and one of them, a frigate, who gave us chase, we were obliged to run in again. The third, a hermaphrodite, but the wind blowing hard at northeast, could not get out to her. I have thought fit to send Mr. Little to you to be informed what we are to do for provision, it being very near out; we have, since the captain went away, broached one barrel of beef and one of bread entirely spoiled, and at this time there is not above three days' meat on board the vessel. We have not above four foremast men that is able to stand their watch upon deck for want of shoes and other clothing; therefore they beg you would endeavour to give us some speedy relief, either by sending us some money or otherwise as you shall think most expeditious. I had a letter from the captain of the same date as yours, but he has not mentioned any certain time of his being on board, which makes me conclude that it will not be very soon, as he is no great starter. I am, sir [&c.]

Sir Portsmouth October 7th 1776 –

Your favour of the 5th Ult. came to hand a few days since on the receipt of which I immediately made strict enquiry for Duck & other Cloth suitable for Soldiers Tents but not a single Bolt was to be had in this State, what few ther was to be had some Time since I bought to compleat the first suit of Sails for the Frigate Raleigh am now much in want of about seventy Bolts of heavy Canvas to Compleat her second Suit for which I hope to have an order on the Agent at Providence who I hear has some belonging to the States. – I have now the pleasure to inform you that Yesterday the Marquis of Kildare (which I sent to France with Lumber &c (on the accot of the States) arrived from Bourdeaux which place she left the 15th August & Cap [Thomas] Palmer who commands the Brig says that on the 17th Septemr in Lattitude 39.20 N, Longitude 46.12 W fell in with Twenty three Sail Ships three of which he took to be Men of War the rest Transports it being thick Weather was within Gun shot of them before he discovered them; one of the men of War bore down upon them, upon which he & also the Passengers (who were two) on board threw their Letters Overboard not thinking they had the least chance of escape but it luckily came on verry thick & blew fresh Gale by which he got clear. There was a large Packett for [sic from] Mr Deane which was done up in Lead for the purpose Destroyed, & even my Letter with Invoice from the House of S & J H Delap suffered the same Fate, have no other papers than a receipt from the House of the Delivery of the Cargo & Copy of the Bill of Ladeing of the Goods Shipt; shall have Duplicates by Severall Vessels who were to Sail soon, of which are the following. The Schooner Wm Joshua Bunker to Sail in four or five Days after Palmer for Providence the Sloop Mary Samuel Morgan to sail in four or five days for the Continent; Sloop Samuel James Hutchins to sail in 10 or 15 Days Sloop Lucretia Jacob Surly for new York 20

Days the Cap & Passengers give very pleasing accot of Matters the French Ports all open for every sort of Merchandize from America, all high in favour of the Continent. Cap Palmer was in Company with Mr Dean at Bourdeaux who spoke very highly of the Treatment he received there; the Cap. understood that Mr Dean was offered a Million Sterling on the Credit of the Continent before he left Bourdeaux for Paris to which place he was gone when Palmer came away. Capt Palmer has made verry pretty Freight for the Cargo he carried out which amounted only to about Eight Hundred Pounds Lawful Money first cost here haveing bro't the following Articles on Cargo (tho' he came away without compleating the Sales leaving it with the House of Messrs Delap what was on hand) — Vizt 5000 wt Powder 250 small Arms, One hundred Thousand flints, upwards of four Thousand Yards of small Canvas 400 or 500 Jackerats 100 Knapsacks 100 Legings 80 large Ruggs 2 small Bales woolings one Bale Linnen not yet opened, and Ten Tons of Lead, The Powder only will pay cost of Cargo with all charges and hire of Vessel, no doubt it will be agreeable to the Honle Secret Committee that I should reserve such things as may be wanting for the Frigate such as the Powder about fifty or a hundred of the Musquetts some Flints Lead some of the small Canvas which together with that I hope will be immediately ordered from Providence will compleat the second Suit of Sails the Ruggs & Blanketts cannot be done without on board Ship The rest of small Canvass which is very suitable for Tents, can be spared & sent as soon as I receive orders for that or any other part of her Cargo the Masts & Oak plank sold verry well, as the Cap. says some were disposed off before he came away I mentioned to the Honble Committee severall Times that Masts are to be had here which together with other things would make a Good Cargo for France or Spain & pay the Greatest Freight by far of any thing I know of upon the Continent which may be seen by this Brigs Cargo which made the Freight of One Thousand pounds Sterling out & as much (nearly) home on about 800 £ Lawf[ul] money cost of Cargo should the Honle Committee see fit to send Vessel from hence with such a Cargo it may be done to advantage as one of these prize Ships might be purchased Low which would carry large Cargo of Masts & Lumber. I am with respect [&c.]

Watertown, October 7.

A Privateer belonging to Salem which arrived there last Thursday, fell in with the Fleet of twelve Sail, and was so closely pursued by the Daphne, that the Enemy fired musket balls into her; but by heaving over all her Guns, Water and Provisions, and by sawing down her upper Works they (bravely) escaped.[1]

We also hear that three more prizes have arrived at the Eastward, 2 laden with Fish, the other with Molasses.

We hear that Capt. [Jonathan] Greely in a Privateer belonging to Boston, who sailed from thence last Monday afternoon, sent into Marblehead last Friday a Prize Brig, laden with Pork and Beef.[2]

Saturday last a Sloop laden with Lumber, was sent into Boston by Capt. Waters. She was bound to New York from the Eastward[3] — Is it not astonishing there should still be such People among us, who would supply our Enemies to cut their own throats?

"Extract of a letter from Boston, October 7." [1]

The prize taken by Captain [Jonathan] Greely and sent first into Marblehead is come round here,[2] she has brought papers to the middle of August, which give particular accounts of the Spaniard's invading the kingdom of Portugal and taking possession of several towns. The inference is plain — war is or must be declared.

The mate of a London ship brought up this evening by Capt. Atkins,[3] informs, that the ministry are so suspicious of plots and conspiracies being laid, that four persons dare not be seen conversing together in London, — they are immediately dispersed. A privateer is just arrived at Salem, after taking three prizes, one of which is loaded with dry goods to the amount of 37,000 l. sterling. This fine prize is not yet arrived. A day seldom passes without provision vessels, Jamaica-men or something being taken.

But the Committee appointed to act in the Recess of the General Assembly which sat here on the 5th instant did not think proper to take such a Measure: And I am sorry to inform you that it is not in our Power to afford you any Cannon from this State. Narrative of Captain John Paul Jones [1]

[August 21 to October 7]

He left the Delaware the 21st of August, and arrived at Rhode Island on the 7th of October, 1776. Captain Jones had only seventy men when he sailed from the Delaware, and the Providence mounted only 12 four-pounders.

Near the latitude of Bermudas he had a very narrow escape from the enemy's frigate the Solebay, after a chase [and an engagement] for six hours within cannon-shot, and considerable part of that time within pistol-shot Afterwards, near the Isle of Sable, Captain Jones had a running fight with the enemy's frigate the Milford; and the firing between them lasted from ten in the morning till after sunset. The day after this rencontre, Captain Jones entered the harbour of Canso, where he recruited several men, took the tories' flags, destroyed all the fishery, burned the shipping, &c. and sailed again the next morning on an expedition against the Island of Madame. He made two descents at the principal ports of that island at the same time; surprised, burned, and destroyed all their shipping, and the fishery, though the place abounded with men, and they had arms. All this, from the Delaware to Rhode Island, was performed in six weeks and five days; in which time Captain Jones made sixteen prizes, besides a great number of small vessels and fishery which he destroyed

7 October. The First-Brigade moved up to our post at Riviere-la-Cole, and ours went up to Point-au Faire, seven miles higher. The order for our proceeding on the Lake, was as follows. Three small boats in front of all, as a party of observation; our schooners and armed vessels in line of battle following; Gun boats carrying 24 or 12 pounders in their bow and maned by the Artillery. The battalion of Grenadiers in flat bottom boats, & in their rear, the remainder of the army in battows. One gun fired from a gun boat was a signal to form 8 boats abreast, and two guns a signal to form a line of boats, this had a pretty effect, as our men were all expert at rowing, having been ordered to practise frequently. This was the first intention of our crossing, but afterwards found not to answer so well, as our armed vessels and gun boats engaging theirs seperately, leaving the troops on land to wait the decision, as were any accident to happen to the armed vessels, the troops must be in a most hazardous situation, & little able to defend themselves with small arms against the cannon of the enemy.

Dear General Valcouer Octr 7th 1776 –

I received your favour of the 2d Inst & Coppy of yours of the 23d Ulto yesterday by General Waterbury who arived with the Two Gallies about 2 oClock. – I fully expected by him, to have all the particulars of the Evacuating Long Island, & New York, He seems to know little of the Matter, & General Washingtons Letter seems not very explicit – the Affair of long Island, seems, still in Obscurity – I am Very Anxious for Our Army, & Friends. below Lord Hows, desiring a Conference, & Neglecting his Appointments, seems not very favourable It Appears to me our Troops, or Officers [sic], are Pannic Struck; or why does a hundred Thousand Men

Fly before, One quarter of their Numbers, is It possible my Country Men can be, callous to their wrongs. or hesitate one moment, between Slavery, or Death – what Advantage can we derive by blockadeing, the Enemy when, they Are in possission of a Part of the Country sufficient to support them. it appears to me Concise measures, should be Adopted – however, I will say no more, least I incur the Censure, we passed on their Councel last Spring for Judgeing too rashly of our measures – That Being, in whose hands are all human Events will doubtless turn the Scale in favour of the Just. & opprised –

Nothing worth Notice has Occurred in this quarter since my last, the weather is very severe here, & Gales of wind freq[u]ent. If the Enemy do not make their apperance by the Middle of this Month I have thought of returning to Button Mold Bay – as I think they will not pretend to Cross the Lake after that Time, we are prepared for them at all Times & If they attempt Crossing the Lake, I make No Doubt of giveing a good Accot of them – I am Dear General Your Affectionate [&c.]

New-York Gazette, Monday, October 7, 1776

New-York, Octo. 7.

On Thursday last arrived here from England, the Daphne, Captain [St. John] Chinnery, with several Transports under Convoy, having on board the XVIIth Regiment of Light Horse, under the Command of Lieutenant Colonel [William] Harcourt.

So vast a Fleet was never seen together in this Port, or perhaps in all America, before. The Ships are stationed up the East-River or Sound, as far as Turtle Bay; and, near the Town, the Multitude of Masts carries the Appearance of a Wood. Some are moored up the North-River; others, in the Bay between Red and Yellow-Hook; some, again, off Staten Island; and several off Powles-Hook, and toward the Kills. The Men of War are moored chiefly up New-York Sound, and make, with the other Ships, a very magnificent and formidable Appearance. Five Men of War have been detached from the Squadron into the North-River above Greenwich, probably to assist the Operations of the Army against the Rebels, who still remain on the Northern Extremity of this Island, and on the Heights about Kings-bridge.

It is said, the Flora Frigate of 32 Guns commanded by Capt. [John] Brisbane, is preparing to sail, with several Transports under Convoy.[1]

[On board the Prison Snow Mentor]

[New York] Mond: the 7th: [October] Our Chocalet was Spoil'd in the Morning for want of good Water, we had therefore but a very Indifferent Breakfast; I spent most of this Forenoon on Deck; At about 11 oClock Mr: [Joshua] Loring & another Offr: came on Board & Order'd us to make Emediate preperation for Landing, there was also a Parole, or Writing prepared for us to Sign, which we all comply'd with, & the Field Officers first went ashore with Mr. Loring; After which I went up onto the Quarter Deck & Wrote some of the foregoing Lines, in Expectation soon to leave the Snow, not knowing what kind of Quarters or Treatment, will be next provided for us, yet hope that the Exchang will not be for the Worse.

About 4 oClock we were Landed with our Bagage on a Ferry Wharf near the Bair Market in N. York, where we wated for Orders, while near Sunset, when Mr. Loring Directed us to a very large House, on the West side of Broad Way, & South of Warren Street. . .

Having this Large House Assign'd us with a small Yard to Walk in &c, we sopose we have chang'd our Cituation Rather for the better, both on acct: of Noise & Crowd.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO JOHN LANGDON[1]

No 6 Philadelphia Octobr 7th 1776

Dear Sir As I have not been able for some time to attend the Marine Committe I last Saturday took the liberty to show Mr Morrice [Morris] your letters Concerning the Conduct of the Providence Committe about Guns and soon found Mr Hancock thro the multiplicity of Business had not laid the affair before the Marine Committe Mr Morrice resented their Conduct extremely and Desired liberty to lay the letter before Congress but as I was uncertain but some bad Effect might arise from laying it before the whole Congress I Declined it He then Desired liberty to lay it before the Marine Committe to which I Consented He said he would do his utmost that your ship should have them Guns at Providence and without paying that Enormous price for them I am in hopes them guns will be ordered for your Ship & one of theirs ordered to wait till guns can be sent from here where they are Contracted for at 35 & 40 pound this money pr tun

I Believe (inter nos) your letters to the President Concerning marine affairs have not been laid before the Committe nor much attention been paid them the great & important Business in which he is Constantly Employed and the almost immense number of letters which he is Constantly receiving on the most interesting Subjects makes it impossible for him to attend to them all and lesser matters must be neglectd I sincerly wish he did not belong to the Marine Committe but would Confine himself to the affairs of Congress which is Business abundantly sufficient to employ the time of any one human being

I was Disappointed of seting out last week as I Expected and as I am in hopes I am some better than I have been I Believe I shall try to tarry here till Col Whipples arrival which I think I may Expect in 12 or 14 Days from this time according to his letter of the 23d ulto

As for news we have none at this time how long we shall be without any I Cant say as by the last accounts from Ticonderoga they were Dayly looking for Burgoine up the lake and it seems Genl Howe is preparing to attack our Camp at Harleam God grant we may have better fortune than we had at the attack on Long Island the Enemy are now in Possession of Stratton Island, Long Island, Governors Island, the City of New York & Powles's hook I pray God they have now reached their Ultimatum and that from this time their power may Decline I am your very hearty friend

At a meeting of the Council,

[Savannah] Oct. 7th, 1776.

The President[2] laid the following before this Board, viz.:

In Convention.

This house having received some information which gives them great reason to apprehend an attack is intended against this Province; and having also been informed of an armed boat being upon the coast, and having committed some acts of depredation upon the inhabitants. It is the opinion of this house that the said matter, together with all evidence and proofs attending the same, be referred to the President. That he be requested by and with the advice of this Council to use the most vigorous, speedy and effectual means for putting the Province in a proper posture of defense, so as to repel the said attacks in case they shall be made, and prevent further depredations and robberies; and to assure him that this Province will most heartily concur with him in the said measures, and cheerfully defray the expenses attending the same.

Ordered, that a copy of this minute be presented to the President by Mr. Speaker after the rising of the House.

The above being considered, it was the opinion of the Board that two boats of ten men each be stationed at the inlets of Hossaba, Saint Catherine's, Sapalo and at the dividings of Saint Simon's Island, for observation and intelligence; and fifty men stationed at the extreme points of land Beulah, Hardwick, Sunbury, Sutherland's Bluff and Darien.

COMMODORE MARRIOT ARBUTHNOT TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN[1]

My Lord

The success which his Maj: Arms have Obtained over the Rebels on the 27th of August, the particulars of which will come to your Lordships hands from better authority, than mine.

I shall therefore only say that it has enabled Lord Howe to send some ships of Warr for the protection of this coast from the Rebel pirates, who have entred our defenceless harbours indiscriminately from Cape Sable, to very near this port Landed to the great terror of the Well Affected People; Cut out several Vessels and done much Mischief, to prevent which for the future I have aplied to General [Eyre] Massey and he has been pleased to comply with my requisition that a Capt & 50 Men be sent to Barrington, near Cape Sable, & a Subaltern & 30 to Liverpool with Arms & Amunition under the care of the Comanding Officers to be delivered to such well Affected subjects as will joine the Kings Troops, if necessary I hope my Lord this precaution will Effectually secure this part of the Frontier from further insult.

I must now pray your Lordship will excuse the Hurry in which this letter is written As I have not time to read it the Vessel who carries it being Under sail unexpectedly. I have therefore chosen to be deficient in allmost every thing rather than omit the smallest attention to your Lordships comands, because I am Most Unfeignedly My Lord [&c.]

JOHN LANGDON TO JOHN HANCOCK[1]

Sir Portsmouth October 8, 1776

Your favour of 21 Ult. is now before me nothing would give me Greater pleasure than to have it in my Power, to Coopperate with the Agent of the Massachusetts in fitting out the Frigate Raleigh to cruise in Conjunction with the Boston Cap. McNeale, as recommended by the Honle Assembly's of Massachusetts & New Hampe and now ordered by the Honle Committee, At present it's impossible, as both States have only Guns for one Ship indeed in this State we have not a Single Gun suitable, The Ship Raleigh as I've often wrote the Honbl Committee has laid since June entirely waiting for Guns a sett of which has been laying at Providence during that Time, every other material might have been obtained and the Ship manned at that Time had the Guns been ready the Privateers have stript us of our hands tho' I've no doubt she would soon be manned could the Guns be had we have about fifty Men on board and no more can be prevailed upon to enter untill the Guns are here, I conversed with Mr. [Thomas] Cushing and some of the Honle Committee on the Matter & told them I would Strain every nerve, to procure the Guns but told them at the same time of my Disappointment at Providence & that unless a sufficient number of Guns could be procured out of the Batteries in the Massachusetts she could not go out —

I shall use my best endeavours to procure Cannon but see not the least prospect unless ordered from Providence or Philadelphia in some Armed Vessel, which would not be verry great risque as there is not any Ship cruizing in this Bay at present belonging to the Enemy. —

The Brig which is just arrived here from Bourdeaux on accot of the Continent,[2] (of which I've wrote the Honle Secret Committee fully to which I beg leave to refer the Honle Marine Committee) has brou't Powder small arms &c which I shall reserve for the Ship agreeable to order of the Committee, so that nothing is wanting but Guns & Men the latter of which I believe may be had, should there be a prospect of the Ship's going out I shall take Care to keep all Matters as secret as possible relative to the Continent agreeable to Orders but as to this matter all this part of the Creation knew the Intent long ago. —

Mr [John] Wheelwright who was second Lieut, of the Raleigh has left her for the Command of a Privateer I've therefore put Cap Hopley Yetton [Yeaton] on board as third Lieut; (Mr. [Josiah] Shackford who was third riseing to second instead of Wheelwright) to act untill pleasure of the Honle Committee is known, I would beg leave to recommend Mr Yetton as a Gentleman worthy of that Post, he has Youth of his side a most excellent Seaman of undoubted Spirits, verry high in favour of the States verry popular among the Seamen — I am with all due respect To the Honle Committee [&c.]

Vice Admiral Clark Gayton to Philip Stephens[1]

Squirrel, Jamaica
October 8th 1776

Sir./.

Herewith you'll receive Duplicates of what I sent you by the last Packet

I beg leave to acquaint their Lordships that the 17th of last Month, a French Frigate arriv'd Command'd by The Chevr de Monteil, the occaision of His coming was to claim a Rebel Schooner which had been Seiz'd by His Majestys Ship Squirrel and sent into Port Royal; The Chevalier in his claim sets forth, that she was taken within a Mile of the Shore, within Gun Shot at the Point under the Colours at the Mole, which he consider'd as passing beyond the bounds of the Treaties, & a violation of the Laws of Nations, and at the same time say'd he flatterd himself, I should think it very Natural for the Schooner to avail herself of the Protection afford'd her by his Court. In answer to which I inform'd him that after the repeat'd assurances which had been given from all the Foreign Powers to His Britanick Majesty of not Interfering or affording any protection to his Rebellious Subjects, I was greatly surprizd at the part of his Letter mentioning affording those people protection, which was very contrary to the Assurances; I mention'd before.

In respect to the Vessel in dispute she was a considerable distance from the Island of Hispaniola, when she was first Chased by the Squirrel, and was not within Gun Shot when taken, that I had always given particular directions to the Captains of the Kings Ships under my Command never to approach near any French or Spanish Possessions but in cases of the greatest urgency, it being my most sanguin wish, for the good understanding at present Subsisting between the two Nations to be maintaind, as this Rebel Schooner, had been Seizd in consequence of the Kings directions it was not consistant with my Honor to deliver her up, but as it was a National matter must be Settled by our respective Ministers, which I should take the earliest oppertunity of laying before mine, with which answer he Sail'd the next Morning very well Satisfied, and inclosed is for their Lordships information exact Copies of His Claim in French, with the English Translation & likewise of my Answer, which I hope will meet with their Lordships approbation

On Captain [Stair] Douglas's arrival I gave Him Copies of The Chevaliers claim and desird he would be very particular in His answer, as it was to be sent for their Lordships information, which he [sic it] accordingly has been. In His Log for that Day, Sworn to by the Master of the Ship, it appears that when he made the Tenders Signal to Chace this Schooner, Cape Nichola Mole bore about SEbS 7 or 8 Leagues, and by the Affidavit of the Officer Commanding that Tender, attested by the Crew, that when he made her a Prize he was Five or Six Miles distance from the Land, all which circumstances are very contrary to those advanc'd by The Chevalier and plainly shews He was not well acquaint'd with the nature of His claim, Capt. Douglas likewise gave me his Log for the 6th & 7th days of September Sworn to by His Master, wherein it also appears that this very French Frigate offer'd protection to a Schooner from St Augustine at the Distance of Ten or Eleven Leagues from the Land, in Sight of the Squirrel, provided she had come from any part of North America, bound to Hispaniola and desired it, and inclosed me the Depositions of the Master & Supercargo of that Schooner, who are both People of very good Character. I must beg leave to say that I think this behaviour of The Chevaliers a Gross violation of the Treaties he talks of, and contrary to the Laws of Nations. Inclosed for their Lordships information are exact Copies of Captain Douglas's orders, His Answer to the Chevaliers claim; the Papers refer'd to in it, which I hope will also meet with their Approbation[2]

(I likewise beg leave to inclose their Lordships the Extract of a Letter from Captain [Thomas] Lloyd, complaining of the Master of the Anna Teresa Packet not complying with His Instructions and parting Company, which I hope they will be pleas'd to Communicate to the Port Masters General, in order that the Master may be made an Example of for leaving his Convoy, after the Port Master General of this Island, had applied to me for one.)

Inclosed is likewise an Extract of a Letter from Captain Davey respecting the Illicit Trade carried on in the River Mississippi, since which I have receiv'd another from Him dated 27th August, informing me of His having been in at the Havanna, for Water, but that they would not permit any Person to go onshore, but sent onboard every thing wanted. He was told there was in the Harbour a Sixty four Gun Ship, and Six large Frigates

In my Letter of the 13th June last, I inclos'd their Lordships; Letters I had received from the Principal Inhabitants of the Mosquitto Shore, of two Spanish Guarda Costas, having Seizd a Sloop belonging to the Inhabitants, I now beg leave to inclose them the Copy of a Petition from Messrs Irving & Blair Owners of the Sloop, with an Affidavit annex'd to it, of her being carried to Porto Bello, and from thence to Carthagena, praying I would send to Demand her, which His Excellency Sir Basil Keith, has likewise desird as Governor of the Island, so that as soon as the more Important Duty of the Station will admit of it I propose sending a Ship to Carthagena to Demand the Sloop, or the value of her, & her Cargo

I likewise beg leave to inclose the Copy of an Affidavit of a James McGlashan, of an English sloop being taken by a Spanish Guarda Costa, at a place call'd Alta Vella, on the South Side of Hispaniola, in the Spanish Territories, and shall also send to Demand her, as soon as the Service will allow of it –

The Grantham Packet, arriv'd the 16th of last Month, Dismast[ed] in a Hurricane to Windward – I've order'd her Damages to be repair'd at the Kings Yard and supplied with Stores, and directed the Storekeeper to procure Bills of Exchange for Payment thereof — and by this oppertunity have wrote to the Navy Board respecting it, which I hope their Lordships will approve

I have the pleasure to inform their Lordships that His Majts Ships & Vessels under my Command have taken Forty Six Sail of the Rebel Americans; including Eight taken by the Diligence at Pensacola

With respect to the Disposition of His Majestys Ships & Vessels under my Command I beg leave to inform their Lordships that the Antelope, Winchelsea, Atalanta, Racehorse (Sloop) are Cruizing in the Windward Passage — The Squirrel, at Port Royal but intend'd to go with the Convoy the 28th instant — The Boreas arriv'd the 5th instant from New York having safely Land'd the 30th Regiment. The Maidstone is likewise arriv'd from the Convoy, both of which Ships I've order'd to be fitt'd for Sea again as fast as possible — The Badger Brig will Sail in a few days for Pensacola to releive the Diligence who is exceeding bad, and intend her to remain 'til the Atalanta has Careen'd which shall releive her — The Porcupine Schooner is at Greenwich attending the Survey on the Masts & Bowspreet many of which are very defective after the Survey, if I find them in such Condition as I Judge Necessary for their Lordships immediate Knowledge I shall dispatch her Express – I am, Sir, with great respect [&c.]

JEREMIAH WADSWORTH TO BARNABAS DEANE [1]

Dear Sir Saw Pitts 9th Octob 1776

Your Favour of the 6th Instt I recd Yesterday by the returng Post who was flying and I cou'd not acknowledge it by him Is it Possible that Capt Mortimer has forgot his engagements. You remember how often I urged [John] Cotton to clinch that Rigging. However I am surprised at Nothing the daily disappointments I meet with, prepare me to believe any thing. The Rigers I believe will do as they please about the pric of their Labour or quit; Curse on such double dealing I think this Country is older in fraud & Chicanery than G Britain. This day several Ships & Tenders passed Fort Washington and penetrated through all our Cheaveaux D'frieze, Sunken Vessels & the Devil knows what, and have arrived safe on Taupon Sea a wide place about 4 Leagues above the Bridge. This will obstruct our Navigation down that River & bring us to the Necessity of much Land Carriage and if the Enemy effectually Stop the Navigation of the Sound their will be great difficulty in supporting our Army. . . .

I am very greatly mortified that You are so disappointed about the Ship,[2] and I suppose the Communication with the Jersys will be cut of[f] or greatly Obstructed but if it should be otherwise I dont see as any hemp will be had. the Devil has got footing among all orders of Men and we are going at a great rate to ruine unless a speedy alteration takes place. half the World are speculating. I fear the Person who [you] dispatched about the Hemp deserves a Neckcloth of it. I have no news from him Yet. . . .

[H. M. S. Roebuck, October 3 to October 9, 1776]

3d Octr The Daphne arrived from England with Burgoyn[e]'s Regimt of Light Horse: They had 10 weeks passage, and gave account that the Hessians had sailed about the same time, so that they were now hourly expected.

[5th] As the Rebel Army was chiefly supplyed by the North River, and placed great dependance upon it, they had taken a great deal of pains to throw a Boom a cross, by sinking Vessels & frames of Timber, to prevent our ships from passing up. They had placed these obstructions in the narrowest part, where the 9th Octr River is about 12 hundred Yards wide, between two High Lands, having Fort Washington on the Right, and Fort Constitution on the left, each containing several batterys of heavy cannon, placed at some distance along the shore, and six row Galleys with each a large Gun in their prow guarded the boom in front; so that, we understood, they looked upon it to be perfectly secure: and it is possible, from seeing the great preparation they had made, we might also have thought so, if a deserter had not informed the Admiral that there was a passage open between two of the sunken Vessels (which his Brother the Ferry Man had given him marks for) and offered himself as a Pilot. This intelligence was exceedingly agreable to both the General & Admiral, concieving, that if ships could be got up the North River, the Rebel's supplys would not only be cut off from Albany & that country, but even their Communication with the Jerseys would become very uncertain & unsafe which could not fail of distressing them, and would very much assist in the intended opperation of surrounding their Army as soon as the Hessians should arrive.

9th Octr The Phoenix Tartar & Roebuck were therefore ordered upon this service, when after waiting a few days for an opportunity they passed through on the 9th Octr without the least obstruction, and with but little loss, considering they were an hour & a quarter within the Enemys fire.[2] The Galleys made the best of their way up the River, but two of them, with sevl other Vessels that came with supplys to the Rebel Camp were soon over taken, and fell into our hands: the former of which was a great acquisition to us, as they never after dared to shew us their Galleys again. Much praise is due to Capt Parker on this occasion (who led, in the Phoenix) for his steadyness & good conduct – when they drew near to the danger, the Pilot, in great confusion told him, that the marks which then appeared were not those that had been described to him, and he was totally at a loss. upon which C. [Captain] Parker, very prudently, imediately determined to take his chance where he knew the deepest water to be, which was Close to the eastern Shore, and which was the passage he came through when he passed down, before the obstruction of the Channel were said to be completed.[3]

1. Hamond, No. 5, UVL.
2. In the margin of his narrative, Hamond listed the losses of the three ships as follows:
   The Phoenix lost a Midn & 2 Men & had several wounded.
   The Tartar had a Midn killed & 2 or 3 woundd.
   The Roebuck lost the 1st Lieutenant a Midshn & 2 Men and had 4 wounded.
   The Phoenix actually had 4 killed and 13 wounded.
3. Ibid., No. 1, a second version of the passing of the batteries is contained in a rough sheet attached to the narrative. It reads:
   an American came into our Camp & stated that he was Brother to the Ferry Man who plyed from Fort Washington on the York side to Fort Lee on the Jersey shore, who had informed him that there was an opening in the Dam by which ships might pass, and had showed him where it was, and being asked if he would undertake to Pilot a ship through the opening, to which he assented for a Reward – The General upon this Information very strongly & officially pressed the Admiral to take advantage of this Information when 3 ships were ordered on that service the Phoenix Capt Parker Roebuck Capt Hamond & Tartar Capt Ommaney and embracing the first opportunity of a strong wind & flood Tide each ship followed in a Line after the other, having previously considered what would be best to be done in the Event of the Guide proving Treacherous a favorable opportunity offered abt Noon on when Capt Parker being senior officer Led the way & steered by the direction of the Guide towards the Middle of the Dam having Pistols laying on the Binnacle telling the guide what would be his Fate if the ships should stop in their passage. He for some time persisted in his knowledge, but on the near approach confessed his perfect ignorance — Fortunately this had been so strongly suspected, that Capt Parker immedty hauld up to the side where it was known the deepest water lay — and the ships all passed within 40 yards of the Muzzles of the Enemys Guns in the Batterys of Fort Washington — amidst the fire of 100 Cannon from both sides of the River — in little more time than about 20 minutes —

[Headquarters, near Harlem] 9th [October]. – Early in the morning, three ships, two of 40 guns, and one frigate, with two or three tenders, stood up the North River. They were briskly cannonaded from Fort Washington and Fort Constitution. They however passed our works and the chevaux-de-frise; the American galleys, small craft, and two large ships standing on before them. The two ships were run on shore near Phillips's mills, and two of the galleys near Dobbs' Ferry. The enemy took possession of the two galleys, and got them off. A boat landed a number of men, who plundered a store, stove the casks, and then set the store on fire, and left it. The Americans soon extinguished the fire.

Our General ordered Col. [Paul Dudley] Sargent, with 500 infantry, 40 light-horse, Capt. [Jotham] Horton of the artillery, with two 12 pounders, and Capt. [Edward] Crafts with a howitzer, to march immediately, with all possible expedition, to Dobbs' Ferry. The enemy took a schooner loaded with rum, sugar, wine, &c. and sunk a sloop, which had on board the machine, invented by, and under the direction of, a Mr. Bushnell, intended to blow up the British ships. This machine was worked under water. It conveyed a magazine of powder, which was to be fixed under the keel of a ship, then freed from the machine, and left with clock-work going, which was to produce fire when the machine had got out of the way. Mr. Bushnell had great confidence of its success, and had made several experiments which seemed to give him countenance; but its fate was truly a contrast to its design.[2]

GEORGE WASHINGTON TO JOHN HANCOCK[1]

Octr the 9th [1776]

About 8 o'clock this morning, Two Ships of 44 Guns each, supposed to be the Roebuck & Phoenix and a Frigate of 20 guns, with Three or Four Tenders, got under way from about Blooming dale where they had been lying some time and stood with an easy southerly breeze towards our Chevaux de Frise, which we hoped would have intercepted their passage while our Batteries played upon them, But to our surprise and mortification, they ran thro without the least difficulty and without receiving any apparent damage from our Forts, tho they kept up a heavy Fire from both sides of the River. their destination or views cannot be known with certainty, but most probably they are sent to stop the navigation and cut off the supplies of boards &c. which we should have received and of which we are in great need. They are standing up, and I have despatched an Express to the Convention of this State,[2] that notice may be immediately communicated to Genl [George] Clinton at the Highland Fortifications to put him on his guard in case they should have any designs against them and that precautions may be taken to prevent the Craft belonging to the River from falling into their hands.

TENCH TILGHMAN TO MAJOR GENERAL WILLIAM HEATH[1]

Sir Head Quarters 9th October 1776

I have this Moment yours of this Evening. The Party of 100 Men were ordered up to assist a Detatchment of Artillery in covering the two New Ships, should the Enemy attempt to cut them out or destroy them. Soon after I got home from Fort Washington I recd a Report that the Enemy had passed the new Ships and were landing at Dobb's Ferry, I then directed Colo [Joseph] Read to desire you, if that should be the Case to send the Feild Peices and Howitzers forward if it should be judged necessary, and as Genl Clinton best knew the Ground to consult him upon the Necessity of sending on the Artillery, and if it was sent, that a strong covering Party should go with it. Till I recd yours I heard no more of the Matter. I am sorry you have been misinformed as to the Movement of the other Ships below, they have never stirred from their Moorings. You will therefore be pleased to order Capt Benson to be as expeditious as possible in getting the new Ships afloat and bringing them down to where they may be conveniently ballasted. I will take proper Care of the prisoners you are sending down —

While I was writing the above by his Excellency's Direction he went to Bed. I thought it a pity to disturb him to sign it. I therefore have the Honor to subscribe myself [&c.]

Journal of Ambrose Serle [1]

Wednesday, 9th [October]

This Morning the Phoenix, the Roebuck and the Tartar sailed up the North River above the Cheveaux de Frize of the Rebels under a heavy Discharge of their Cannon, which was not perceived to do them any Damage. The Pearl & Repulse kept where they were before; so that now the North River is in full Possession of His Majesty's Fleet, and the Retreat of the Rebels entirely cut off from N. Jersey. Their Vessels and Boats made the best of their Way up the River; but it is not yet known, whether any of them are destroyed or taken. The Rebels, we find, are deserting apace, are very sickly, and much dispirited. They are also retiring backward, destroying Corn & Hay as they go, further into New Jersey from Bergen & Newark, and the adjacent Parts.

[New York] 9th Octr — At half past 7 in the morning The Phoenix, Roebuck, and Tartar, weighed anchor, and having the advantage of the flood tide, and a brisk Southerly wind, stood up the North River, followed by three or four small tenders. As soon as the Rebels perceived them under way, they beat to arms and manned all their batteries on each side of the River. About 8 o'Clock they began to fire very briskly at the Ships from both sides, but particularly from the batteries near Kingsbridge and immediately opposite. The Ships fired but little, and in about 3/4 of an hour had entirely passed those batteries without receiving any damage that could be observed by us. In their passage up, while we could see them, they drove about 20 sail of small craft before them, some of which they took. About 10 o'Clock they were again fired on by Some of the Batteries up the River, but as they were then out of our sight, it was not known what the consequence was.

This movement is certainly connected with the general plan for the attack of the Enemy, and points out clearly that our operations are intended against Mr Washington's Army on this Island.

Gentlemen [Philadelphia] October 9th 1776 —

We have been presented with a Letter from John Langdon Esquire Continental Agent at Portsmouth in New Hampshire to Josiah Bartlett Esquire a member of Congress, giving a very extraordinary account of your proceedings in respect to the Canon cast in your State for the use of the Continental Frigates. He says that the frigates at Providence cannot be ready to go to sea for two or three months, and that the frigate at New Hampshire waits only for Cannon, which under One pretence or other you have refused to supply him with altho they are lying useless in Rhode Island, and another Set might be cast in time for your ships. He represents your refusal of his reasonable request as having its foundation partly in interested motives and partly in Jealousy of the New Hampshire ship being at Sea before yours.

We cannot pretend to judge of the propriety of his Observations having only heard One side, but if the representation he has made be a just one, we shall think the Continental Interest was much misplaced when put into the hands of those who are capable of acting from such Motives against the public good. You'l observe we do [not] pretend to decide on your conduct, because we are willing to hear your defence of it. Mr Langdon is a Gentleman of character and puts his name to what he writes, therefore we suppose he will be ready to make good his charge, however it is not our present purpose to inquire into your conduct at this time, but to inform you that we have sent Mr Langdon Orders to call on you again for a Set of Cannon suitable for the New Hampshire Frigate, & as we understand those Cannon are paid for out of the Moneys you have received and drawn for, We now direct and insist that a compleat set of the Cannon most suitable for that Ship be immediately delivered to the said John Langdon Esquire or to his order for the use of the Continental Frigate the Raleigh now at Portsmouth, and we request that you will render him or his Agents all the assistance in your power in transporting the said Cannon to Portsmouth in the most safe and expeditious manner. Mr Langdon has said nothing about Shot or other stores, but as it is our business to consider and attend to the Continental Interest at large abstracted from Jarring Interest or Jealousey of one State against another we likewise desire you may Supply Mr Langdon with Shott or any other Stores you have provided for the Continental service provided he wants them to expedite the sailing of the Raleigh which is now under Orders for immediate service. We also inform you that we shall send an Agent to inspect the state of the Frigates built under your direction that we may include them in our intended report to Congress.— We are Gentlemen [&c.][2]

2. Ibid., the Marine Committee also wrote this date to Stephen Hopkins: "We hope Sir, that, your attachment to the general Interests of America, Your regard to the character of your State and your Friends employed therein, and your influence in that State will all combine to have those abuses re[c]tified. . . ."

Gentlemen [Philadelphia] October 9th 1776

We the Subscribers Members of the Marine Committee of Congress being duely authorized to give such directions as may conduce to the Service of the United States of America in all things relative to this department, are now of opinion that a Compleat Set of the Cannon you have had Cast for the Continental Service ought to be applied to the immediate use of the Raleigh Frigate and therefore do Order and direct that you deliver a sufficient number of the most suitable Cannon for that Ship to John Langdon Esquire or to his Agent employed for the purpose of receiving and forwarding the same to Portsmouth, and for so doing this shall be your Warrant. Given under our hands at the Marine Office in Philadelphia the day and year above written. —

Continental Marine Committee to Captain Nathaniel Falconer[1]

Sir [Philadelphia] October 9th 1776 —

You are hereby authorized and directed to repair to Providence in Rhode Island and there view examine and inspect two frigates lately built & now lying at that place. You are to call on the respectable Committee of Gentlemen under whose direction they were built and are to be fitted; give them notice of your arrival and appointment to this service, require from them an Inventory of the Continental Stores provided for these Ships, and examine into the quality of the same compareing the said Stores with the Inventory to see that they agree, and you are to make report as soon as may be to this Committee of the State and condition of these Ships, as to the Strength, workmanship, beauty and other qualitys, also as to the quality and quantity of Stores, Number of Men and Officers belonging to them and of their forwardness for the Sea; and all persons employed in the building or fitting of said Frigates are hereby required to aid and assist you if need there be in performing the service hereby enjoined you, and for so doing this shall be your Warrant.

CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE TO JOHN LANGDON[1]

Sir [Philadelphia] October 9th 1776. –

Your friend Mr Bartlett having laid before this board your Letter to him of the 14th Ultimo respecting the conduct of the Committee at Providence Rhode Island, on your applying to them for Cannon for the Raleigh, this conduct appears to us in the most extraordinary point of light, but as it is unbecoming of public Bodies, to condemn the conduct of any before they are heard in their own defence, We have wrote them of this date telling the points of which you complain and ordering them to deliver you a compleat set of the Continental Cannon in their possession those that are most suitable for the Raleigh, and further we have directed them to deliver you Shot or any other Continental Stores they have, if you think them necessary to expedite the sailing of that ship. we have also requested them to afford you any assistance in their power in transporting the cannon and Stores safe and soon to Portsmouth. We may not omit telling you that we have thought it only common justice to send Governor [Stephen] Hopkins a Copy of your Letter as the Commee were all of his appointment. We have said that deeming you a Gentleman of honor we doubt not but you will support the charge made against them, and under that beliefe we think it is justly your due and return you thanks for the information given us, as well as for your apparent solicitude for the public good. We have determined to have the Frigates inspected, and report made thereon. Before we close we must request your utmost exertions to get the Raleigh out to Sea, and the Captains and other Officers Commissions will now go forward immediatly We are sir [&c.]

By a vessel from Cape Francois we learn, that a French 50 gun ship was cruizing off that place to protect the trade; that two prizes had been carried in there and sold by Captain Monro [James Munro], of Rhode-Island;[3] and that they will not suffer the English men of war to go in there for water.

[Extract] Port au Prince, 9 October 1776

P. S. I must add that besides the English frigate cruising near the end of the mole to intercept Insurgent Vessels, there is another cruising off Cap [Haitien] and Fort Dauphin for the same purpose; M. de Monteil is watching the mole; surely he will not tolerate any insults and at the very least he will comply with Instructions. Since Cap remains unguarded, I will send M. de Beaussier there as soon as possible because he is sighting and learning nothing during his cruise; this will not take place before the end of November however. M. de Monteil wants to leave without delay having only three months provisions left. I pointed out to him that I would keep him on my own responsibility until I receive your orders concerning him or until the arrival of other frigates which could relieve him. I shall give him the order in writing to stay here because, in the present circumstances, it is at least suitable, and necessary that two of the King's frigates remain on station here. I hope that you will approve the orders which I am issuing M. de Monteil and M. de Beaussier in this matter. As I reported upon first receipt, we have news that a lively action took place in New York between the Royalists and the Insurgents; in any case, it cannot be decisive and I believe that the campaign of the English has been a failure since they will have to begin another one next year, which will prove very costly in any case.

COMMODORE CHARLES DOUGLAS TO CAPTAIN PHILEMON POWNOLL, H.M.S. Blonde [1]

Sir Sorel October the 10th 1776

Hereby acknowledging the late receipt of your letter and weekly account; I acquaint you, that so many things have concurred to retard my progress towards Quebec; that I despair of reaching Champlain before the 12th In the meantime, lest I should be still farther retarded, I take this method of expressing my earnest desire, of your getting the Blonde down below the Rapids to take in your lumber out of the Lord Howe: to the end that she may get down to the Bason, in order to be in readiness to proceed towards England, at a very short notice — where I wish to see us all speedily reunited: that we may concert measures how to dispose of His Majestys very important naval concerns in this River; in such manner; as shall be most for the interest of Government.

By what I have learnt, I think it probable that General Carleton did on Tuesday Evening or yesterday morning find our flotilla in readiness to go in quest of that of the Rebels so that we may shortly Expect important news from the farther end of Lake Champlain — As the Inflexible is of the party, I am not uneasy about the event — Her Keel was laid on the 5th of September, she was launched the 30th, and sailed the 4th instant: by no means the last of the Armament — All the Carpenters work bestow'd upon her; until launching; did not exceed 12 men's labor for 16 days — By Lieutenant [John] Schank's contrivance and close unremitting diligence, Seamen did the rest of the business — If you have no occasion for the aid of the Lord How's men to get your Ship down send them forthwith to theirs — But I hope this may not find you at Champlain — am with great regard Sir [&c.]

One of the Frigates gave him Chase, which continued from Noon, till half past 11 at Night; and was at one Time within 2 Miles of him, and finding he overhauled him so fast, was obliged to through over-board his Guns, stave his Water, &c. – and by it's growing dark, was the Means of his escaping being taken.[1]

Boston, October 10.

Same day [October 7] Capt Forrest[1] return'd to Salem from a cruize, in which he has taken 5 prizes, one of which is of considerable value, as the bills of laden of her cargo that is come to hand amounts to £ 36,000 sterl. Capt. Forrest put his prisoners ashore at Cape Finister, where he was inform'd that the Spaniards had made a public Declaration of War against Portugal, and were ravaging the frontiers of that kingdom.

[Extract] Valcouer Octr 10th 1776 –

I am much surprised so little Attention is paid to us by the good People below, I should have imagined, Two hundred Seamen could have ben sent us, in three, or four Months, after they were so pressingly wrote for. – I make not the least doubt there has ben the greatest Industry Used at Ty, in fitting out the fleet, I am glad to hear the other Gally is so forward, I expect to see her the first fair wind –

The Cloathing which is arived is a sufficient supply of the kind, we much want One hundred pr Shoes. & Hose, One hundred Watch Coats, Fifty pair Breetches, & Twenty Blankets & hatts – or Caps – We are Victualled for abt Ten Days. –

You may depend I shall do nothing of Consequence, without Consulting Genl Waterbury, & Colonel Wiggelsworth, both of whom, I esteem Judicious honest Men, & good Soldiers – We Cannot at Present Determine how long it will be requisite to remain here. It may depend on the Intelligence we may receive – we shall Not return One Minute Sooner than is prudent. & necessary.

I have received no late Intelligence From the Northward, the loss of the small Canoes, (All we had) has prevented my sending out small Parties. I have wrote Colonel [Jonathan] Trumbull [Jr.] to Send me three or four which may be procured at Ty. or at Crown Point. –

I am of Opinion with you respecting the Battery building at River a Cote, that the Enemy, are Acting on the Defensive, they are at the same time Exerting themselves, to Augment their Navy, & if they hear (in Time) that Lord How is in Possession of New York, they will doubtless Attempt a Junction with him. If they think it practicable, their Fleet. I make no Doubt in the Course of this Month will be very Formidable, if not equal, to Ours. –

I have taken Two four Pounders From the Liberty for the Trumbull, & three of her small Guns, there is others at C Point Suitable for Her, & Colonel [Thomas] Hartley may be supplied with large ones for his Castle from Ty. – The Schooner goes up for Provisions I wish she may be, emediately dispatched Back – the Guns may be ready when she returns at Present she does not want them. –

I am, extreemly glad You have represented to Congress & Genl Schuyler the Absolute Necessity of Augmentg Our Navy, on the Lake, It. appears to me an Object of the utmost Importance, I hope measures will be emediately taken for that Purpose – There is water between C Point & Point Aux Feu for Vessels of the largest Size, I am of Opinion that Row Gallies are of the best. Construction & Cheapest for this Lake, perhaps it may be well to have One Frigate of Thirty Six Guns, she may carry Eighteen pounders on the Lake & will be Superior to Any Vessel that can be built at, & Floated from St Johns – Carpenters ought to be emediately employed to Cut Timber & Plank — & three hundred set at Work at Skensborough the 1st of Feby — of these Matters I hope we shall have time to Confer hereafter.

Diary of Joshua Pell, Jr.[1]

[Pointe au Fer]

10th Oct'r our little squadron sail'd from Point au Fer toward the upper or great Lake; about 12 o'clock on the 11th one of our arm'd boats espied their Fleet at anchor in the Bay of Belcour [Valcour]. Our arm'd Boats immediately rush'd in amongst them and engag'd them without waiting for orders; the Carlton went to their assistance, and kept a continual firing until dark, during which time we destroyed a Schooner called the Royal Savage, and greatly damaged another; unluckily for us, the wind chang'd and hindered the other part of our Squadron from giving the Carlton any assistance; had it not thus happen'd, in all probability, the Rebels whole fleet would have been destroy'd. Our loss consist in two Arm'd Boats been sunk; about ten men kill'd and sixteen wounded. The loss of the Rebels is not positively known.

I do justice to Capt'n Dacres, he behav'd like a true British Tar; he was engaged by five of them together, and when order'd to join his squadron he would not, till the General's own Boat came on board with positive Orders to dissist.

The Rebels Fleet consisted of sixteen sail of schooners, sloops and Row Galleys. The Rebels Anchor'd close under the Land, and our Indians did them considerable damage with their small arms from the shore.

[Extract] Camp Haerlam Higths Octobr 10th 1776 –

My dear Sir, Since I wrote you last nothing very Material has happened with our Army and that of our Enemies, now and then, a few shot are exchanged by the scouting parties, except that, we have been very friendly Neighbours since the 16th Ulto in this Quarter, nor do we understand any thing of Consequance has taken place in Canada, Burgoing [Burgoyne] is on one side the lake perpairing to cross with a very large fleet, of Boats and some Arm'd Vessells, Genl Gates is ready to receive him at Ticonderago where he has a well Regulated Army in high spirits, The place well Fortifyed, and a fleet nearly equal to his, Our lines at this place are now very Formidable and I think sufficient to defend against twice our Number, The Troops Desart from each Army almost every night, four Sentinals left their posts two nights ago and went over to the Enemy, all of them Irishmen, four from the Enemy came over to us yesterday morning, are of the same Kidney. – Lord Stirling was yesterday Exchanged for Govr Brown of [New] providence, he got to Head Quarters in the Evening, and relates his treatment whilst a prisoner was very polite from those in High rank, except Dunmore, who Vissited him the Morning after the Battle on the Island, with one Epthorp, The latter treated him with Complaisance, but our Old acquaintance on whose enterlex this Climate has had no Impression, Accosted him thus, "So, how do you do, I am sorry to see you in such D——nd Black Company," (meaning other officers who ware Prisoners in the same room) He Observed to him, it was poor Consolation to Gentlemen officers who the chance of war had put in his power, and remarked, he had not of late been so fimiliar with Black Company as his LdShip, This wheel'd him on his heel, and since he never would see him – his Lordship has returned to us Exceeding hearty, and brings account that Burgoyings Light Horse arived at N. York three days ago, They ware four months at sea, you may Guess the Order they landed in, besides this they lost 70 of them on the passage, The last Division of Hessians with a very large Fleet of Transports are still at sea, they are Bringing out several Hundred Waggon Horses, Waggons, Carts, flat Bottom Boats &c, &c, and is call'd the Grand Fleet, I hope the equinox has some hidden blast in store for them, . . . I inclose you a rough sketch of this most horrid Country, now the seat of war, by it you may form some Idiea of the Advantages the Enemy has over us in their Shiping, and dair say you'll wonder how this Army has so long escaped, when you come to see the Number of creeks, Rivers, and Guts that make into it, all of which are Navigable for almost any ship, and at this time a 28 Gun Frigate lays in Hellgate, a place not much wider then the Streets of Williamsburg, I dair say Andrews may be able to form a pritty Exact sketch from the one sent, the distances are laid down by Griffith who is well Acquainted wth every part . . .

"Extract of a Letter from New York, Oct. 10"[1]

On the 8th of October 340 rebels, in five flat-bottomed boats, with two pieces of cannon, came down Harlem river a little past four in the morning, and attacked an out-post of ours on Montresor Island, where there were about 80 men. The Brune frigate being at anchor near the Island, fired at the boats in the dark, and by the first shot sunk one of them full of men; and after a short skirmish they were beat off the island. Their loss is not exactly known, but they left a major and 27 men wounded. Our loss fell upon the 71st regiment, of which four were killed and six wounded. Had it not been for the darkness of the morning, in all probability few, if any at all of them had escaped; for the frigate was obliged to cease firing, because she could not distinguish our people from the enemy.

CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE TO COMMODORE ESEK HOPKINS[1]

Sir, [Philadelphia] October. 10th 1776—

We learned some time ago with much concern that the expedition we had planed for you to execute, woud prove abortive; as the ships had gone out a Cruizing under the sanction of Governor Trumbulls recommendation, with which we cannot be well satisfied, altho in this instance, we are disposed to pass it by in silence being well convinced both he and the several Captains meant to perform service at a time the Ships were idle. Supposing therefore that you will have been obliged to lay aside the expedition to Newfoundland, We now direct, that you immediately collect the Alfred, Columbus, Cabbot & Hampden, take them under your command and proceed for Cape Fear in North Carolina where you will find the following Ships of war

The Falcon of 18 Guns
The Scorpion of 16 Guns & the Cruizer of 8 Guns & a number of valuable prizes said to be 40 or 50 in number, and other vessels under their protection the whole of which you will make prize of with ease. We understand they have erected a kind of a fort on Baldhead at the entrance of Cape fear River but it being only manned with a few people from these Ships we expect you will easily reduce it and put the same in possession of the State of North Carolina or dismantle it as may appear best. When you have performed this service you had best deliver to the Continental Agents there such of your prizes as may sell well or be useful in North Carolina others you may convoy into Virginia or this place for we don't recommend your remaining at North Carolina for fear of being blocked up there; perhaps you will receive advice that will render it eligible to proceed farther Southward to rout the enemies ships at South Carolina and Georgia and if that is practicable you have not only our approbation but our Orders for the attempt.

We hope, Sir, you will not loose one single moment after receipt of this Letter but proceed instantly on this expedition. We are sir [&c.]

P:S: Should the Cabbot be still on a Cruise, or if returned cannot be ready to proceed upon the Above expedition as early as one of the frigates lately launched at Rhode Island, you will proceed with the later in lieu of the Cabot as soon as she can be prepared for the Sea or you may take both the Cabot and frigate if to be done without delay. We wish your plan for manning this fleet from the State of Rhode Island may prove effectual, and we do in the warmest manner urge you to omit nothing on your part which may tend to promote so important a purpose and which we have most earnestly at heart. The Commissions for the officers of the frigates will be forwarded immediately – [2]

2. The postscript only is in the Hopkins Papers, RIHS, and is signed by eight members of the Marine Committee: John Hancock, Robert Morris, William Ellery, Josiah Bartlett, Thomas McKean, Richard Henry Lee, William Hooper, and Arthur Middleton. An endorsement reads: "Honourd Sir Have Taken the Liberty to open it and Find That it Should be Forwarded Imediately, have Sealed and Dispatch it / our Ship is all Ready but maning your Dutifull Son J. B. Hopkins." The endorser was commander of the frigate Warren, which still lay off Providence.

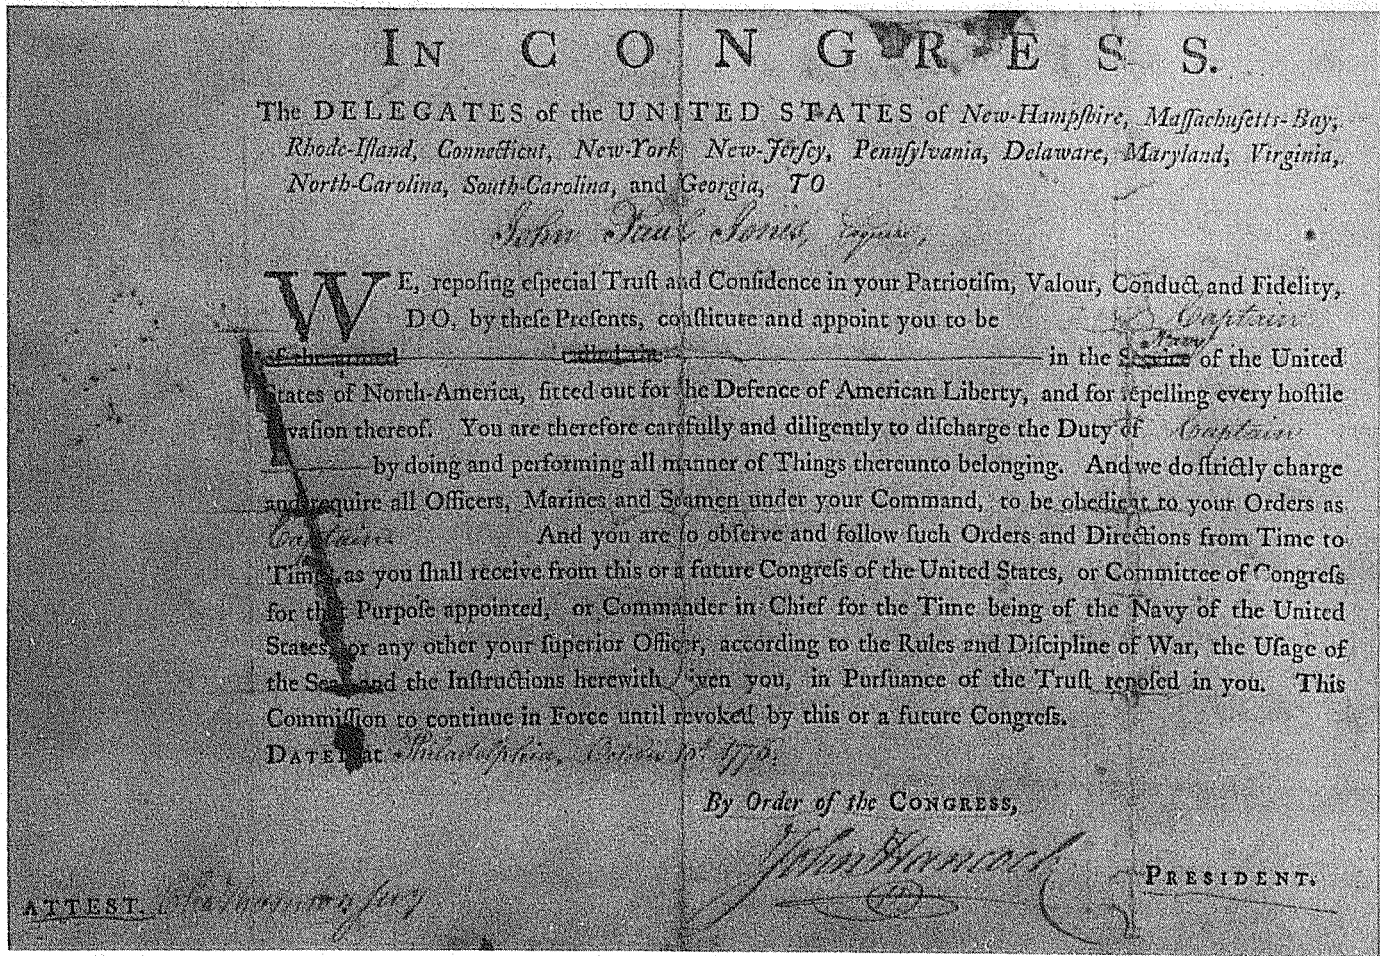
CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE TO HENRY TUCKER AND THOMAS GODET, BERMUDA [1]

Gentlemen [Philadelphia] October 10th 1776

We have occasion for a quantity of Salt to cure beef & Pork the ensuing season for the use of our fleet and dont care to buy up what arrives here transiently as the people are much in want of that article, and would murmer were it to be bought off their hands. We therefore request that you will immediately on receipt of this letter Charter five or Six good fast sailing large Sloops, Schooners or Brigantines, and either load them with Salt at Bermudas or send them to Turks Island for it, just as you may find safest and best — send one of them to Edenton in North Carolina consigned to Messrs. Hewes & Smith one to Baltimore in Maryland consigned to our Order; & the others here addressed to us. Perhaps it may be most prudent to load part in Bermudas and part in Turks Island but our great Object is to get the Salt soon and safe here. —



You will Charter these Vessels on the best terms in your power by the Month or otherways, have them valued and we agree to insure them for so long as they remain in our Service, and if the terms are reasonable that may probably be a long time. You'l buy the Salt as cheap as you can and give them the utmost dispatch or it will be too late for our purpose. We must depend on you to advance the money for the cost of the Salt until we can reimburse you, which shall be done by returning some of these Vessels to you with Cargoes of Provisions and probably a Convoy with them. Should any of the Vessels be taken or lost we will either pay for them in Provisions or undoubted good bills on Europe or the West Indies as may best suit the Owners. We hope you will be able to comply with these orders immediately for which we shall allow you areasonable Commission — Interest for the advance of your Money and Commissions on the Goods we shall consign you hereafter and for your security we pledge you the faith and Credit of the United States of America being so authorized to do by the Honorable the Continental Congress of which we are members and are Gentleman [&c.]
P:S: If you cannot send Six send as many Vessels as you can short of that Number

But that your Memorialists have never received any satisfaction for the Time their vessels was employed in that service which was about three and one half Months.

As that matter is referred to the Council of Safety, we would pray that a day may be fixed for Our attendance at Annapolis, and that the Bearer may be informed what Voucher will be necessary to lay before your Honorable Board.

Gentlemen [New Bern, October 10, 1776][2]

Mr Stanly [John Wright Stanley] having Occasion to wait on you with a memorial relative to the Conduct of the Commissioners of the Provincial armed Vessel the Pennsylvania Farmer permit me by the same Opportunity to lay before your Honours something on the same Subject To this Duty I am impelled by the strongest of Ties, a sacred and venerable Regard for constitutional Liberty and the Honour and Interest of my Country. When these are invaded it would be criminal to be silent. And here Gentlemen it would be necessary to pause a while and endeavour to investigate the secret Springs of this Patriotism If it is expected Honours, lucretive Appointments, or any sinister Expectations whatever that whets my Zeal I may be justly suspected of deviating from the modern Patriots, and little Credit paid to my Narrative. But if none of these Views appear, and that they do not I appeal to the Gentlemen of the Council themselves, to the chief of whom I have the Honour to be personally known to, then I hope you will believe the Facts I shall here endeavour to state to be true.

The Provincial armed Vessel the Pennsylvania Farmer sailed from this Town a few Days since after lying here with 110 men on board at the Expence of near Forty Pounds per Day, upwards of six months, in the most inglorious, inactive and dissolute state that perhaps was ever suffered in any Country. By the Inexperience, Inactivity and neglect of the Officers of this Vessel, who early began their Irregulaties by inlisting the regular Soldiers into their Service, a continued Scene of Riot, Outrage and Robbery has been carried on by the People of her the most daring Insults on the Inhabitants of the Town suffered to pass with Impunity. One hundred and ten Pints of Rum poured out to them every morning kept them continually drunk and ready for any mischief, especially as they consist of Men of all Nations and Conditions, English, Irish, Scotch, Indians, Men of Wars Men and the most abandoned sett of Wretches ever collected together Two of the Officers broke open the Gun Room, and with a number of the men went off with the Boat with Intent to join Lord Dunmore's Fleet, and actually reached Currituck County. they were apprehended and are still at large on board. They have wasted near 100 Pounds of Powder in wantonly firing at and bringing too all Boats, Canoes and Vessels of every sort, even Passengers in the Ferry Boat have been insulted. Capt. Thos Shine of the Militia, with his Company on board coming up to the General Muster, was fired on and a Ball passed within a few Inches of his Arm. Of this Insult he complained to me I remonstrated to the Officers but met with nothing but Abuse. With Regard to myself Gentlemen, I have been exceedingly obnoxious to this Crew of Banditti, for I can call them by no other Name. As I had the Honour to be one of the Commissioners for that Vessel I very early opposed the iniquitous measures I saw pursuing and objected to the injudicious Choice, as I thought, of the Officers of the Vessel, men utter Strangers, without Abilities, without Interest, Connections, or any Tie whatever to the Country the Captain having never sailed in, much less more commanded, a square rigged Vessel in his Life, Capt. Oliver of the marines being the only officer on board known to the Country. The Chief Mate, one Barton, a Person intrusted by Mr. Durant of St Croix with a Vessel and Quantity of Powder for the use of this Province, the whole of which Vessel and Cargo he attempted to [illegible]. I say Gentlemen, by the means above I became obnoxious to these men and have suffered every Insult from them and sustained considerable Damage. They came to my Landing and destroyed a Bay Boat that cost me Thirty pounds, cut her up for Fire Wood and took out every Bolt and spike Nail they could come at Of this I complain'd to the Officers and Commissioners but could get no Redress. As the Vessel lay opposite my Plantation at Green Spring the men came repeatedly into my Cornfield and carried off Quantities of green Corn and grew so daring that I was forced to repell them by Force and lay on my Arms for many nights. Of this I complained to the Commissioners but could get no Redress.

I have been told the Reason for lessening the number of Commissioners for this Vessel was the Impossibility of doing Business effectually with such a number I heartily agreed with the Gentlemen who made this complaint, and am fully convinced Business could not be effectually done while I opposed Contracts for Beef for the Vessel at 5d a Pound when I was buying for my own use at 3d and while I opposed some glaring accounts that freely passed after my Expulsion from the Commission. While I was on the Commission I spent much Time and some Money and was willing to do every act in my Power to further the good Intentions of the Council in ordering this Vessel to be fitted out, but am not concerned at being left out of a Commission wherein I could do no good to my Country nor Honour to myself.

I must beg your Honours further Indulgence while I say a few Words in Justification of a most infamous Slander cast on me by Capt. Hamstead [Joshua Hempstead] and the Officers of this Vessel. They have propagated in all Companies a Story of my being disaffected to the present measures pursuing against British Tyranny, which I make no Doubt has reached your Honours Ears, giving for a Reason that I would not let my Son go in the Vessel. My Attachment to the glorious Cause of Liberty in which we are at present embarked, and the very early and active Part I have taken in it, stands, I hope, too well recorded in this Province to be shaken by the insidious and base Acts of disappointed Faction, and as to my Son as he is yet too young to be known to the World it is necessary I should set the Matter right with regard to his Conduct. He was brought up to the sea, and great Part of his Apprenticeship sailed out of Cadiz in Spain to many Parts of Europe, since his Return home he has been in the Employ of Mr Cornell and has been master of a Vessel out of this Port. He was the first Officer shipped on board the Vessel to superintend the Rigging and continued on board upwards of two months. When the Commissioners went into the Choice of Officers he was appointed Second Lieutenant in a short Time after, by the Caprice of the Commissioners he was appointed Master with this he was contented, and would have now been on board, had not I ordered him to resign an Employ he was not likely to gain any Credit by

Upon the whole Gentlemen I have the fullest Conviction within my own Mind that this Vessel in her present Dress will utterly defeat the good Intentions of the Council, and as far as my poor Opinion goes would heartily recommend a Revision of her.

I hope your Honours will pardon my Presumption in troubling you with this long Epistle, But when Arbitrary Power runs triumphant among us and the Sacred Barriers of Private Property are destroyed; the inestimable Blessings for which we are now contending and pouring out our best Blood in Streams, I could no longer be silent. I have the Honour to be Gentlemen [&c.]

[Copy] N[ew] O[rleans] 10th October 1776

Sirs, This will be handed you by Captain George Ord, whom I have supplied with Sundries, and to whom I beg Leave to refer you for Particulars.

As I conceive myself to be too much interested in every Thing that can serve America (notwithstanding my present Situation is remote from the Scene of Action) I eagerly embrace the Opportunity of exerting my utmost Endeavours for the glorious Cause, and had every Thing compleated soon after he came here: But just when he was ready to Sail, arrived the D[iligence] s[loo]p of w[ar], and I had only Time to save the Cargo, and did every Thing in my Power to save the Vessel under his present Protection: But then your Situation and Consequence was not sufficiently understood here, and of Course I laboured in vain both for my Friends and own Interest; but of late since your last Declaration, and every Circumstance turning out so far beyond the Expectations of your warmest Friends, Times here have taken a quite different Turn, and I make no Doubt but before this you have taken such Steps as will gain the Hearts & Protection of all those you desire. Permit me therefore to make tender of my hearty Services, and to assure you that my Conduct shall be ever such as to merit Confidence and Approbation of that Country I owe every Thing but Birth. I have the Honor to be, Sirs [&c.]

JOHN B. LIVINGSTON TO ROBERT R. LIVINGSTON [1]

Dear Robt Providence Octobr 11th 1776

I am just arrived at this place, and by good information find every kind of goods immoderately dear, sugars three pounds.. Rum 6/9. to 7/. Cotton 3/4 – Coffee 8½ all in Lawfull money, so that you will easily concieve that it will not answer for me to lay out any money on my own acct dry goods they tell me are in the same proportion. . but I am in hopes that they will fall somthing as a large Ship bound to Quebec with Clothing &ca was brought in a few days ago by Capt [Arthur] Crawford but is not yet condemned,[2] as the Ship belongs partly to the Governor. I shall to morrow morning wait upon him. and endeavor to make a purchase before hand upon the Invoice which if I can the goods will come much Cheaper as the merchants of this place make a point of out bidding strangers, and indeed the owners themselves bid, which is by no means customary any where else. I shall endeavor (if we cant purchase on the Invoice) to play them a like trick –

This evening I was informed that a Vessel belonging to the C. Congress[3] has taken 8 Vessels which she has manned and sent home, And destroyed 5 more most of which are Ships. she took them in a Harber near the banks. it is I think very great news – Capt Crawford has likewise taken two more prizes both sugar Ships the one a three Decker, the many Captures that are daily made convinces me that it is best to lay out our money in Privateers I wish you. Mr [William] Duer, and Mr [John] Jay would be concerned in one, a small Sloop now laying at Hartford. would be a very proper Vessel. Could you get Guns in our province, she would not I think cost above £2000 pounds, and she has the charecter of a fast sailer – Mr [James A.] Stewart tells me I have made £800 pounds by the beaver Capt [Stewart] Deane;[4] much more than I expected. which money Blair has recd and vested it in a ship mounting 28 Guns. as I have not seen him I dont know on what terms I am interested though I am not sorry for it as it is utterly impossible buying in a privateer here, Guns and other stores being so high – Stewart was offered £3000 pounds Lawfull money for the Beaver as she lay just from a Cruize. when her Cargo. and all cost the owner but £2400 York – You may think things has rose amazingly here – I wish you and Mr Duer would endeavor to buy up all the 6 and 4 pounders you possibly can. at any thing less than £ 70 a pair – For the 6. and £ 50 pounds for the 4 – at least you may buy if it is possible 10 pair of each sort, if you can buy the Cannon endeavor to buy muskets lik[e]wise – Capt Cook no doubt will be a proper person to get these things if he will engage. I shall be at Hartford in a fortnight where I wish you would direct my Letters to be left, as the Cannon will determine my buying the Sloop. – I find that I cant exchange any of my Tea here. as the merchants are afraid of engaging in that Article expecting it will be imported soon, and I believe it will. – You see that I am baffled in all my schemes. but I have one more, which is to go to Govr Trumble [Jonathan Trumbull] and endeavor to borrow a few Tons of Salt Petre – which if he consents will stand me in good stead. as I shall repay him when the bounty is taken off. should I succeed I shall do wonders as the devil himself has not more cunning than these people – I have not heard of Harry since my last, but believe he is safe as the Enemy has not come to Huntington as yet. [5]

I come now to the Articles you desired to get for you. shoes none to be had. Linnen of about 4/ formerly now 16/. Hatts £4. and every thing in proportion I am afraid to buy for Mr Duer as he may get them at Phila much cheaper but if I must purchase for him he must write me by the Post. show him this Letter that he may see what prCt we shall make or break by purchasing goods in these parts. . Carting Goods they pay 2/8 pr mile. strangers no doubt must pay 3/. & they are a set of Vagabonds that shall never have the honor of my company Among them again — I expect to recieve a large Packet of Letters at Boston from you in answer to my last untill which unless I hear something extraordinary I shall not be able to write, in the mean time I remain

Newport, October 11.

Last Tuesday two of the enemy's ships took 4 vessels off Montague Point; 3 of which were prizes to Capt. [James] Munro, and some other privateers; the other a merchantman belonging to Connecticut. All the people belonging to these vessels, we hear, took to their boats, and got safe ashore near Stonington.[1]

Last Monday the Continental sloop Providence, Capt. [John Paul] Jones, arrived at a safe port, having, in a cruise of 6 weeks, captured 16 sail of vessels, 6 of which he burnt; among the others is one ship, with 3000 quintals of codfish, some smaller fishermen, and two West-Indiamen.

Memorial from Stonington to the Connecticut General Assembly[1]

To the Honourable the General Assembly, now Setting at New Haven – The Memorial of the Committee of Correspondence & Inspection of the Town of Stonington; and Sundry of the Inhabitants of said Town. Most humbly sheweth

That where as, Your Honours thought fit in your Last Session in May to Grant for the Defence and Protection of this place: a Captain and Ninety Men; Since which one half has been Ordered to New London. Your Honours may Remember that this Town is the only one in this State, that has Received any Damage from those Sons of Tyranny and Despotism: Sent by that more than Savage Tyrant, George the Third, To deprive us of those unalienable Rights, that the Supreme Governour of Heaven and Earth has invested us with. Your Memorialists therefore pray that the Number of men Ordered and Destined as above, may Still be Continued. And that the Two Eighteen Pounders, and four Twelves, and Shot &c that were Ordered in your former Session for this place: may be Delivered as Soon as possible;

As this Harbour is perhaps more Used by Coasters, and Vessels bound to Sea, than any Harbour in this State; and is a place of great Consequence; not only to this, but other States We therefore beg Leave to Inform your Honours: that Several Vessels have Lately been Chasd into this Harbour by the Kings Ships; and have here been protected. Your Memoriallists further pray that the Three Large Cannon (now at New London) belonging to this Town be likewise ordered for this place; and the Two field pieces that was Lent by this Town to the Town of New London: be ordered back to the Town of Stonington

We therefore Flatter our Selves that this our Most reasonable Request will be granted. And your Memorialists as in Duty bound shall ever pray.

New-London, October 11.

A Ship burthen 225 Tons, taken by Capt. Tho. Nickeson [Thomas Nicholson], in the Privateer sloop America, belonging to Plymouth, was last Week brought into a Port in this State. The Privateer had been only 7 Days out when she took this Prize, and was left in Chase of another. The Cargo of this ship is as follows, viz. 200 Hhds. sugar, 100 Puncheons Rum, 20 casks Madeira Wine, & Quantity of Logwood and M[a]hogany.

Last Tuesday two prize Snows were retaken by two British Men of War in sight of Stonington Harbour. – One of them was a Prize which had been taken by a Providence Privateer, commanded by James Munro; the other had been taken by a Privateer belonging to the State of Rhode-Island. We learn that the People got on shore in their Boats.

Wednesday a Brig bound into this Port, from the West-Indies was taken by a Man of War near Montauk Point; but the People got on shore in their Boat.

Yesterday the Prize ship (a Guinea-man) mentioned in our last to be taken by Capt. Harding, in the Brig Defence, belonging to this State, arrived safe in this Harbour.

The ship Hope, mentioned in this Paper, (No. 670.) to be taken by the schooner Spy, Capt. Niles, we hear was afterwards retaken by the Enemy and carried into New-York.

GOVERNOR JONATHAN TRUMBULL TO GEORGE WASHINGTON [1]

Sir New Haven October 11th 1776

In consequence of your favor proposing a descent on Long-Island, although I was so unhappy as not to be able to meet Generals [James] Clinton and [Benjamin] Lincoln at this place as requested, I applied to the State of Rhode Island and obtained their consent and orders, that Colo [William] Richmond and such part of his Battalion as shall not enlist on board the Continental Vessels should assist in the enterprize. Colo Richmond will accordingly begin his march this day for New London, and bring with him the Whale Boats collected in Massachusetts Bay and Rhode Island to the number of which, it is apprehended, will be of use to the Troops ordered on this servic – , especially to secure their retreat, should it be attempted to be cut off. When Colo Richmond arrives at New London he has orders to put himself under the command of such General Officers as Your Excellency shall appoint. I have this day conferred with Colls [William] McIntosh and [Henry Beekman] Livingston on the subject. They inform me they are supplied with provisions and ammunition for their purpose, and only want such a number of water craft as, with the Whale Boats divided into three parts that each may be sufficient to transport 12 hundred men, as he means each division to be so placed at the inletts to the Island, as, if cut off from one, he may resort to the other, to make his retreat sure, if necessary. These I have ordered for him, and dare say will be provided for him without delay. The number of men he proposes to set out with will doubtless be sufficient for his first attempt but what reinforcement will be best soon to follow after to answer every purpose Your Excellency will judge. They may be thrown over from Norwalk or Stamford very soon, if placed there. I am apprehensive lest some difficulties may arise with respect to the command. Colo McIntosh is a superior Officer to Lieut Colo Livingston, and Richmond is superior to both – Colo Livingston appears to be a young Gentleman of real spirit and abilities, and has every advantage in his knowledge of the Island and the people there. The other Gentlemen have also their merit. May not a difficulty arise as to the command. I hope there will not. As the Gentlemen are all well disposed, I hope they will all cooperate to the best advantage in the whole. What is further necessary to render their operations effectual you will please to consider and direct –

Our naval expedition against the Ships of the Enemy in the Sound is still in contemplation, and preparations are making for the same as fast as we can. Commodore Hopkins writes me the 5th instant, that the Alfred and Hampden are ready, and that the two new Frigates there would be ready in about a week if they can be manned, neither of them having more than half their complement at that time. Our Ship and Brig, will, we trust, be ready to join them; and when they are equipped it is proposed they shall first attack the two Frigates that infest the Coast about Montauk Point, if they attempt to give them any interruption; otherwise, that they proceed directly up Sound, and give the best account they can of the Ships in the East River — I am now informed, that the two Frigates and the Alfred are manned from Colo Richmonds Regiment, which I hope will prove true, but if not, am in hopes they may be compleated by Volunteers from Rhode Island and New London. But if they should still fall short of their full compliment, I beg leave to suggest to Your Excellency, whether they could not, with out inconveniency, be filled up from some parts of your Army, unless the Row Galley Men, by the Enemy's Ships passing up the North River, are rendered useless, in which case, they may be ordered to some proper place along Sound for Commodore Hopkins to take them in. I have given Commodore Hopkins the utmost assurance, to give him all possible intelligence, from time to time, of the Enemy's Ships of Force this side of Hell Gate, that he may be apprised what he has to encounter. To that purpose I beg leave to suggest to your Excellency to give orders to such Commander of the Guards or Posts in sight of the Enemy's Ships to give me intelligence from time to time of their force and whether or when any of the Enemy's Ships may join them through Hell Gate. I understand one 24 Gun Ship of the Enemy has already passed through to them — Since my last from Commdore Hopkins am informed, that the Columbus Capt Whipple has arrived in Port at Rhode Island. Have wrote to him to take her with him, if possible, which will make a considerable addition to his force. Please to afford me your advice and fullest information. I cannot but flatter myself with strong hopes of advantages to be desired from this adventure of our Ships as well as the expedition to Long Island. Secrecy in both is of utmost importance

Governor Jonathan Trumbull to Commodore Esek Hopkins[1]

Sir New Haven Octobr the 11th 1776

Your favour of the 5th Instant came safe to hand in which you Inform me, that the Alfred & Hampden are ready & the two New Frigates you expect will be ready in about a week, I hope no attention or diligence will be wanting to have them prepared by that time, and shall Indeavour that there be no delay as to ours, tho am Necessitated to Apply to you or your State to furnish a quantity of Shot for our Ship We have the Round, but double headed, Chain Sliding and Starr Shot we have none. hope you can Supply what will be wanting for the present. we have sent to our furnace for them but fear it will be impossible to have them ready at New London by the time they may be wanted for the present Expedition but may be ready to be replaced if Necessary very soon after; the size of the Cannon for which we shall want them are Nine pounders. I understand the Columbus is now in Port, if so, cannot she join your Squadron? for no force ought to be Omitted which human foresight can devise to render our Success as sure as may be at this Critical time with our Army As this expedition if Success full may much disconcert [illegible] the Enemy –

Since my last to you there has been two more frigates up sound as far as against Say brook, but Suppose now returnd towards Block Island how far they or either of them may be the Object of your attention shall Submitt, no doubt there ought to be a Spy upon them out from Newport or New London or both to Watch and give Intelligence of their Motions, and if they or either of them may be decoyed in, so as to fall in your way, and the force from New London to join you at an Appointed time or Signal given, perhaps you may first give a good Account of them before you proceed up the Sound which by the way is the Main Object. I have Employed Capt [Nathaniel] Shaw [Jr.] the barer hereof to Conferr with you on the Subject and Acquaint you from time to time with every Occurrence, & see that every preparation is made on our part and give every necessary Intelligence & Assistance as it will be difficult for me to do by letter & at this Distance where I may be detaind with the Assembly for a fortnight or three Weeks. The Expedition on Long Island set forward by Genll Washington will be Conducted by Coll McIntosh & Livingston & Richmond if he joins them –

I have Requested Coll Livingstone as soon as he Arrives on Long Island to employe trusty spies along on the south side. to Watch the Motion of the Enemies Ships from New York & give speedy Intelligence if there is Any Appearance of their Coming round the Island that you May have the earliest Notice if any such matter should happen, we hear that your ships are now Manned from Coll Richmonds Regiment. if any failure on that Account tho hope Number of Volunteers may be found at Rhodisland & New London, but if still wanting there may possibly be a Complement thrown Aboard from Genll Washingtons Army upon a sudden Occasion & for so short a time as they might be wanted, if timely Notice is sent forward to Genll Washington of their being wanted. I understand there is a 24 gun Ship got thro Hell Gate & joined the two frigates tho now one lyes at Huntington a Considerable Distance I shall Indeavour to gain every Intelligence in my power & acquaint you with any alteration or reinforcement which may happen there I am, with Esteem & Regard Sir [&c.]

Memoirs of Major General William Heath[1]

[Headquarters, near Harlem] 11th [October]. – There was a considerable movement among the British boats below. This afternoon, Gen. Washington's pleasure-boat, coming down the river with a fresh breeze, and a topsail hoisted, was supposed, by the artillerists at Mount Washington to be one of the British tenders running down. A 12 pounder was discharged at her, which was so exactly pointed as unfortunately to kill three Americans, who were much lamented.

[On board H.M.S. Eagle, East River, New York]

11th [October]. – This afternoon the admiral, with most of the captains, and Commodore Hotham, with all the flat boats and batteaux, went up the East River to Kipp's and Turtle Bay, near the west end of Blackwell's Island, where we remained all the night, during which time the army were striking their tents and preparing to embark. About three o'clock Saturday morning, the 12th, the troops were embarked in the flat boats and batteaux, to the number of between four and five thousand men; the guards and 42nd regiment, between fourteen and fifteen hundred men, were embarked on board sloops under my direction. At daybreak in the morning the boats set off, and no sooner had they put off, with an amazing strong tide, but it came on a fog equal to pitch darkness, with now and then an interval of light for a few seconds. The boats were put off; to attempt to stop them would have been very dangerous, for the headmost boats must have anchored, and the boats that followed would in all probability run foul of them, to the imminent danger of sinking each other; the admiral, therefore, rather chose to run the risk of passing Hell Gate with all the boats in that rapid tide and dark fog. I went astern and ordered all the boats to move forward. Soon after their putting off, a galley towing one of the artillery boats, in endeavouring to cross a vessel lying in the passage, towed her athwart hawse; the boat ran directly up her cable, and overset instantly. Many of the people were picked up; there were three field-pieces lost, and I suppose five or six people. There were very few people in the flat boats had ever been through or knew anything of the passage of Hell Gate. This made the danger much the greater. To keep the starboard shore was the safest passage; straight through carried them upon the rocks, and the larboard shore would have brought them under the fire of the enemy, perhaps without being able to land or retreat; but the boats got all very luckily through, the one instance only excepted, and arrived at Frog Point, the place of their destination about nine o'clock, where they landed without opposition.

Dear Sir, Philadelphia 11th October 1776

Among the inconveniencies of this busy scene, I esteem it not the least, to be so often prevented from acknowledging the favors of my friends sooner than I do. It has been owing to much business that your letter of the 27th has not received an answer before now. I have the pleasure to acquaint you that in ranking the Captains of our Continental Ships, the Congress have placed Captain [James] Nicholson at the head, he being the first Captain. I wish it were in my power to give you a satisfactory answer about the building another Frigate. Hitherto nothing has been determined on this subject, the Committee having been prevented by an infinite multiplicity of other business; and to the same cause has it been owing t[hat] no orders have been sent concerning the Frigate Virginia. I have no doubt but that another Frigate will soon be directed, and that the Builder of greatest merit will be prefer'd. It would give me the greatest pleasure to hear that the Virginia was ready for Sea, and I am happy in being satisfied that the Managers of this business in Baltimore will not loose a moment in effecting so salutary a work. I suppose a want of Anchors will be the greatest obstruction, as I take it for granted no time will be lost in getting the guns down from Mr [Samuel] Hughes's works, and having the Carriages made. I shall be glad to have an exact state of the Frigate & what She wants to complete her. I refer you to the papers for news and am Sir [&c.]

[Extract] Philadelphia Oct 11th 1776 —

A naval Expedition is on Foot, which if carried into Execution will be very advantageous to the United States, and to the Officers and Seamen in the Navy. If the Cabot should not be in Port the Marine Commee have ordered that One of the Frigates should be employed in it. Commodore Hopkins in a Letter to that Commee hath informed them, that One of the Frigates could soon be got ready, and intimated that he could mann her with Draughts from our Troops. I hope that the Genl Assembly will countenance this Measure, and give every other Assistance in their Power to forward the sailing of the Fleet.

MAJOR GENERAL JOHN BURGOYNE TO CAPTAIN CHARLES DOUGLAS, R.N.[1]

(Copy) Camp at River La Cole 12th [October] 76

My Dear Sir I seize the first instant of my Intelligence, to inform you, that the Rebel Fleet, was found Yesterday Morning, at Anchor between the Isle Val[c]our, and the Main: They had intended to sail as this Morning: and it was a Compleat Surprize. Our Fleet got above them, And the Carleton with one Division of Artillery Boats engaged; the rest of the Ships could not get into action, the Wind being strong at N.E. with this small part of our Force, we have taken & destroyed, the Royal Savage the largest of their Vessels; two others are supposed to be disabled: We have besides Thirty or forty Prisoners: but the best part of my intelligence is, that our whole fleet, was formed in line above the Enemy, and Consequently they must have surrendered this morning or given us battle upon our Terms, the Indians and Light Troops, are abreast with the Fleet: they cannot therefore Escape by Land. You may therefore expect my dear Sir, in a day after this news, the important decision of the Lakes I will forward it to you with Equal diligence and Joy, in the mean time accept my Congratulations, upon the Glorious Spirit, with which the Naval Department has begun, I am going forward shortly in person, in hopes the leading Brigade of the Army, may be able to move on directly.

I dare say you will think it right, and I request the favor of you to Act Accordingly to lay a positive Embargo on the sailing of all Vessels, till the result of this great business properly Authenticated by the Generals dispatches, can be forwarded through you to Government. I have the honour &c:

Last Sunday arrived at Saco a small prize-Schooner sent in by the Putnam Privateer, John Harmon Commander, having on board 300 bushels of salt and some oyl. Next day arrived another schooner, taken by the same privateer, having on board 375 Quintals of green fish; and some oyl; she brings an account of another small vessel taken that is not yet arrived, and one that they took, which was afterwards drove ashore by a frigate — the Vessel lost, but the people got on board the privateer again; the frigate drove the Privateer into a harbour, and came to anchor with intention of keeping her in; but Capt. Harmon got one of his guns ashore on a point of land, & fired on the frigate, when she returned whole broadsides into the woods at them, but did no damage — Capt. Harmon after a few shots was so lucky as to cut away her fore-stay, which obliged her to come to sail, and put to sea.

Last Wednesday arrived at Falmouth, a Prize ship, of between 3 & 400 tons, from Portsmouth in England, to Quebec, laden with Powder, Nails, Beef, Butter, &c. has 16 carriage-guns, 8 of which were mounted. She was taken by a Privateer from Newbury, by stratagem.[1]

Since our last arrived in this Port, two prize Schooners, the Glasgow and the Neptune, laden with fish & oyl, to a considerable amount, taken off the banks of Newfoundland, by Capt. Robert Parker, of this Port.

This morning a small prize schooner with 200 quintals of fish was sent into this harbour; she was taken by Capt. Calton [William Carleton] in the General Gates Privateer from Salem.[2]

Dear General Schuyler Island Octr 12. 1776

Yesterday morning at 8 oClock the Ennemies fleet, Consisting of one Ship mountg Sixteen Guns, One Snow, mounting the same Number One Schooner of fourteen Guns, two of Twelve, Two Sloops, a Bomb ketch, & a large Vessell (that did Not come up) with Fifteen, or Twenty flatt Bottom Boats or Gondolas varying, One Twelve or Eighteen pounder in their Bows — Appeared of[f], of Cumberland Head. we, emediately prepared to receive them, the Gallies & Royal Savage were ordered Under way, the rest of our fleet lay at An Anchor at 11 oClock. they ran under the Lee of Valcouer & began the Attack. the Schooner by some bad Management fell to Leward, & was first Attacked. One of her Masts was wounded. & her Rigging Shott away. the Capt thought prudent to run her on the Point of Valcouer, where all the Men were saved the Enemy boarded her & at Night, Set fire to her — at, half past 11 the engagement, became General, & very warm. Some of the Enemies Ships & all their Gondolas, beat & rowed up within musquet Shott of us. they, Continued a Very hot fire with Round & Grape Shott untill five OClock. when they thought proper to retire to about Six or Seven hundred Yards distance & continued the fire, untill Dark — the Congress & Washington have Sufferd. greatly, the Latter Lost her first Lieut killed, & Capt & Master wounded, the New York lost all her Officers except her Captain. the Philada was hulled in so many Places that She Sank, About One hour after the engagemt was over, the whole, killed & wounded, amounts to abt Sixty, the Enemy, Landed a large Number of Indians On the Island & each Shore, who. keep an Incessant Fire On us, but did little Damage — the Enemy had to Appearance Upwards of One thousand Men in Batteaus, prepared for boarding. — We suffered much for want of Seamen & Gunners, I was obliged myself to Point Most of the Guns on board the Congress which I believe did good execution — the Congress received Seven Shott between Wind & Water, was hulled a doz times, had her Main Mast Wounded in Two places & her Yard in One, The Washington was hulled a Number of times, her Main Mast Shot thro. & must have a New One. both Vessells are very leaky & want repairing.

On Consulting with Genl Waterbury & Colonel Wiggilsworth, it was thought prudent to Retire to Crown Point, every Vessells Ammunition being Nearly three fourths spent. & the Enemies greatly Superior to us in Ships, & Men — at. 7 oClock Colonel Wiggilsworth in the Trumbull got under Way, the Gondolas & Small Vessells followed & the Congress & Washington brought up the Rear. the Enemy did not, attempt to molest us, most of the fleet is this minute came to An Anchor, the Wind is small to the So ward, the, Enemies fleet is Under way to Leward & beating up. – as soon as our Leakes are Stoped, the whole fleet will, made [sic make] the utmost Dispatch to Crown Point, where I beg you will Send Ammunition & your further Orders for us. — On the whole I think we have had a Very fortunate escape, & have great reason to return, our humble, & hearty thanks to Continental Fleet on Lake Champlain.

Allmighty God for preserving. & delivering so many of us from, our more than Savage Enemies. I am Dr General Your affectionate [&c.]

P S I had not moved on board the Congress, when the Enemy Appeared, lost All my Papers & most of my Cloaths on board the Schooner I wish a doz Batteaus well Manned could be sent emediately to tow up the Vessells in case of a So[uther]ly Wind

I cannot in Justice to the Officers in the fleet Omit mentioning their Spirited Conduct During the Action

MAJOR GENERAL HORATIO GATES TO BRIGADIER GENERAL BENEDICT ARNOLD [1]

Dear General, Ticonderoga 12th October 1776. —

I have received your Favours of the 7th & 10th Instant, and am pleased to find You, and your Armada, ride in Valcour Bay, in defiance of the power of Our Foes in Canada; The Liberty arrived last Night, and sails this Moment with the provisions you wrote for, and some of Mr Yauncy's best Beef. — I have long ago urged the necessity for Continuing to Increase Our Naval Strength upon the Lake, and shall now send your Letter to General Schuyler, and desire him to make such Extract from it, as if further requisite to induce Congress to direct the forwarding that Useful Work. —

No News, is good News; for, except what is in the inclosed paper, I know none to send You. — I firmly believe that the beating the Enemy received from Our Troops, upon Monday the 16th Ulto, & the Fire of New York, have cooled their Ardour so much that it remains a doubt with me whether General Howe will make Another Attempt before he gets Succours from England; perhaps his Foreign and National Troops have disagreed; perhaps he waits fresh Instructions from His Master. — Whatsoever is the Cause of his Inaction, it is quite Certain, he has given Our Army Three Weeks to Form their Blockade of New York, and to Strengthen their posts in such a Manner, as not to be Forced but with Greater Loss than I think General Howe Can Afford. —

Inclosed is a Resolve of Congress, which when put into Execution will Establish their Independcy: and effectually, and forever, put a period to the Domination of Great Britain. —

My respectfull Compliments to General Waterbury & Colonel Wigglesworth. — I am Dear General Your Affectionate [&c.]

[Schooner Maria, October 11 to October 13]

. . . the Rebel Fleet was attacked and destroyed in the two different engagements, in the Lake Champlain, on the 11th and 13 of October 1776 — By this Victory the command of the Navigation of the Lake was regained; the Province of Quebec was secured from future invasions; and the Army whose operations had been impeded untill this object was attained, had now scope to act — The Season of the year being far advanced, the expedition against Ticonderoga was postponed untill the following year.

Diary of Dr. Lewis Beebe[1]

[Ticonderoga] Sunday 13th [October] . . . This day a boat arrived express from the fleet: which informed, that our fleet was attacked by British Butchers on fryday 11th which continued the greatest part of the day, that on Saturday 12th our fleet retreated near split rock; where they lay in sight of the enemy; their army being a little in the rear in flat bottom Boats. This morning the fleets engaged the second time; as we heard an almost incessant fire from day break till afternoon. What damage is done on either side, we have as yet not heard.

"Extract of a letter from Harlem, October 13."[1]

Yesterday morning about 4000 of the enemy landed at Fogg's or Frog's [Throg] Point, in the sound, about 6 miles above us: a detachment was immediately sent to oppose them: The enemy got possession of the point, but as I was informed last night had made no farther progress. Our people, I am told, had taken up a bridge which was there, and felled trees across the road, to obstruct them till a reinforcement could arrive. In the afternoon 42 sail passed the mouth of Harlem river, in their way to the point; they consisted of sloops, schooners, brigs and 9 ships. I expect there will be bloody work there to-day. From the number of men landed and the ships which went up, I think this can be no feint, but that the main body of Howe's army must be there, and that there he intends to make his Coup-de-Main. This week will probably finish the campaign. – Upon the arrival of the ships at Dobbs' ferry they landed some men and plundered a store-house. I suppose those men who landed yesterday are to go across that country, and form a line from Frog's point to Tarrytown, 4 miles above Dobb's ferry, where the ships lie, but in this I expect they will be mistaken.

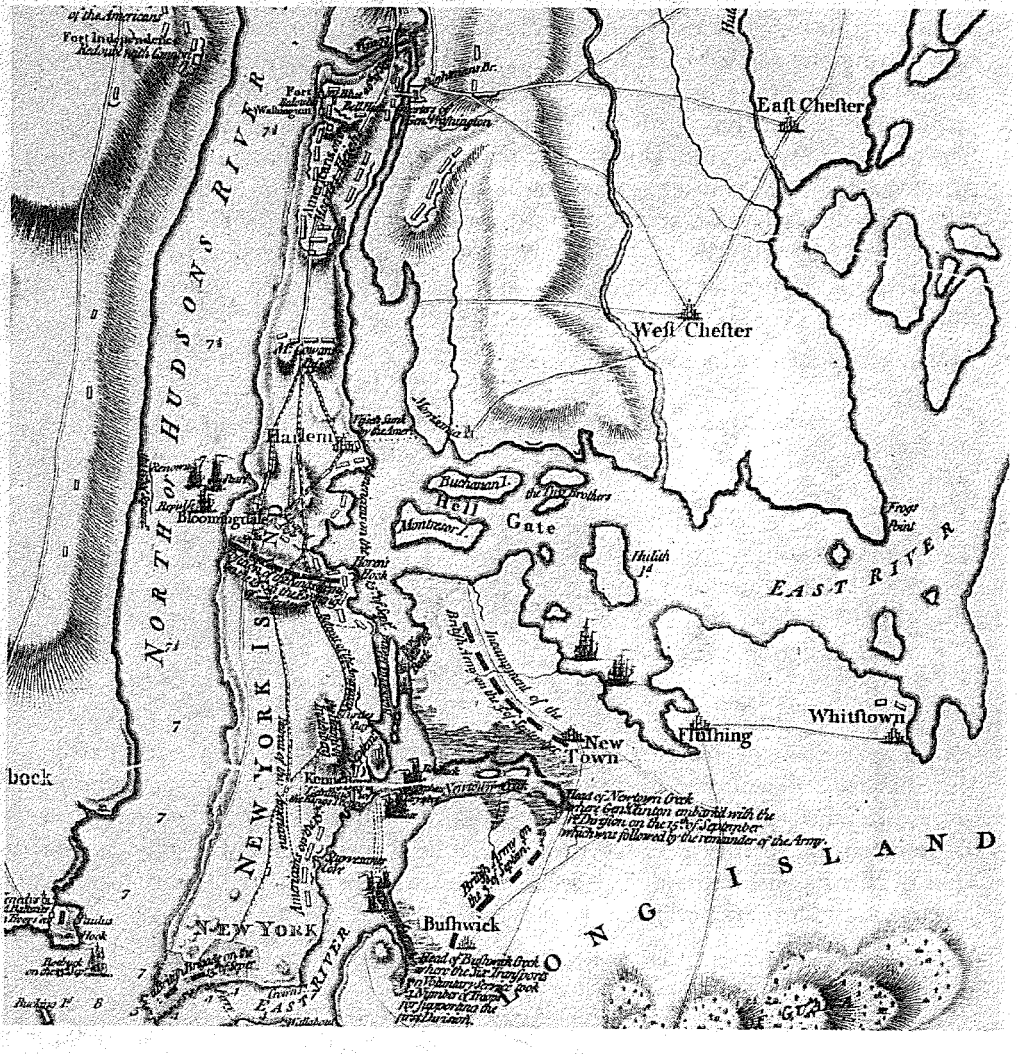
[Extract] Philada October 13th 1776

Sir We have the pleasure to inclose you herein an Invoice of Some Cloths and Blankets lately imported into Rhode Island on Continental account[2] and the Congress have directed the whole to be applyed to the use of the Army, wherefore we also inclose herein an order to Messrs Nicholas & John Brown in whose care they are, to deliver them to your Order –



It is recommended to you by Congress to have the Cloths made up immediately into Soldiers Cloaths and you will consider whether it may be best to have them made in Rhode Island & Connecticut or by the Taylors in the Army or whether it may be best to employ all the Taylors at each place. . . .

Sir [Philadelphia] October 13th 1776. –

We are in great want of Coals to make anchors and other Smiths work for the frigates here, and as you are going on public business into the States of Connecticut, Rhode Island Massuchusets & New Hampshire you may probably meet with some Coals fit for Smiths use, that have been or may be taken on board some of the Prizes sent into those places. Should that happen we request you will purchase as many as will load two Schooners or Sloops and send them to us immediately For this purpose we desire you will buy two fast Sailing Marble head Schooners or Sloops that will sail and carry well, buy them cheap as possible and if you get coals send them here directly. If you get the Schooners but cannot get the Coals, then put some Salt, Sugars, or rum on board as much in value as you think will pay for a load of Coals for each at about 2/ per bushel and dispatch them with the same immediately for James's River Virginia consigned to the Honble Benjamin Harrison Esqr inclosing him an Invoice of the Goods you send and advising him to sell those goods and load the Vessel with coals immediately dispatching the same to us. You will take care to procure active good Masters, Mates and men, and manage the whole to the best advantage for the public and as you have this and other business to transact we deliver you herewith Four thousand Dollars for which you are to account on your return. We also give you letters of Credit & recommendation to the Continental Agents in each state and a warrant authorizing you to survey the Continental Frigates at Rhode Island, but since this was agreed to, we have heard those frigates are compleated and ready for the sea which we hope may be true. Continental Marine Committee to the Rhode Island Frigate Committee [1]

Gentlemen [Philadelphia] October 13th 1776

We fear our orders of the 9th Instant for sending aSet of Cannon from your State to New Hampshire may not be so proper as we thought them at the time of Signing, because we are since informed through several Channels [that your frigates] are quite or very near fit for the Sea, which is avery different account from that which caused us to send that order, therefore to prevent inconvenience or disadvantage to the public service we dispatch this immediately after the other and desire you may not forward the said Cannon to Portsmouth if your Ships are actually ready for service, for our veiw is only to get such of the frigates as are ready into action, and it matters not to us whether it be yours or the New Hampshire frigate that goes first, but you will still answer what we have said to Governor Hopkins respecting Cannon. Since sending you our Order of the 9th instant we are well informed that the Frigates at Rhode Island are ready for sea and if that is really the case it would be improper to strip them of the Cannon to send them to you. We have now wrote the Committee to keep their Cannon if their Ships are actually fit for service, for we did not mean by the former order to give a preference, it was our design only to prevent the Guns from lying useless there when you wanted them: but we desire them to tell us whether they will not cast another set and on what terms. You are with the Brigantine Ham[p]den under your Command to go out on a Cruise, and endeavour all in your power to distress the Enemies of the United States of America – You are to Take all Vessels with Goods, bound to any of the Enemies Ports, and send such of them into Port for Tryal as you shall judge worth your while; and others you may Destroy, first taking the People out –

You may Cruise as Long as you can Conveniently keep your Vessel fit for that Service – I think you will do your Country most good by Cruising in such places as will be most likely to meet with the Store Ships bound to Newyork for the Supply of General Howes Army –

My Orders was to Send you to annoy the Trade at Newfoundland but I imagine that is too late – If you should think proper to go that way it will be best to Steer down in the Lattitude of about 30 or 40. which I think will be the likelyiest to meet with Vessels bound to Newyork. I am Sir Your Friend

[Extract] Say Brook 14th Octr 1776.

Last Wednesday I had a Conference with Governour Trumbull at New Haven, I laid before him the Plan I had formed for our Expedition, which was as follows, we were immediately to engage fourteen Hundred Ton of Vessels, Seven Hundred of which being Sufficient to carry our whole Detachment, were to be Stationed at Oyster pond Point, with Instructions to wait till farther Orders from us unless disturbed by the Enemies Shipping, when that happened, they were to make some secure Port on the Continent; and whenever Danger disappeared they were to resume their Stations. the Other Seven Hundred Tons are to be Stationed at Satauket about Twenty Miles farther westward with the Like Instructions that in case we should be baffled at one Place we may proceed to the other we will have as I am informed by Governour Trumbull Ninety Whale Boats they will Land Nine Hundred Men at a Time, they are not yet arrived at New London but are expected in to Night. To morrow I fancy they will be here. they are to take in their Detatchment and proceed for Fairfield from whence we are to land as many Men as we Conveniently Can on the west side of Huntington in order to cut off the Communication of Three Companies of Troops Stationed at that Place, as soon as this can be effected, the Whale-Boats are to Proceed to Mill Creek and Carry across into Southold Harbour where they are to wait for us unless Circumstances permit us with Safety and Secrecy to get them into South Bay, if that should be the Case they are to follow us as far as Huntington and take in our Baggage in Case Necessity should Oblige us to Make a Retreat, Head Quarters on Long Island are now made at Flushing about Twenty Eight Miles from Huntington where a Guard is kept; the Inhabitants are much Oppressed being Prohibited threshing their Grain or Selling their Hay, which Transports are now Loading with at Huntington all the Vessels they Could lay their hands on have been Taken up and ordered to Flushing where their Guard is kept no other part of the Island except that Place and Huntington being Guarded excep a few Men in the Forts Opposite the N York Major [Robert] Rogers is at Huntington tho I cannot hear that he has the Command. The Accounts I have now given You may be depended on. they are given by a Brother to one of our Lieutenants who has been Concealed among them for some time, but has at length made his escape with three others and got Safe to this side, the Enemy were in pursuit of him when he came away. . . . I expect it will be the latter end of the Week before our Desent will be made. I shall with all my Powers forward it — tho' Govr Trumbull is of Oppinion the force allowed is not adequate to the Undertaking tho' I cant help Differing from his Honour in this Particular. . . .

[No.] 197 Off Crown Point 14th October 1776

Sir It will no doubt give you pleasure to learn, that the armament, to the fitting out of which you so much contributed, has answered so well the end for which it was intended by having already given the Rebel fleet a total defeat. The 11th Instant we found fifteen sail of them behind the Island of Valcour, not expecting our visit so soon, our attack, that day, was only with a part of our force, the Carleton and the Gun boats, and tho we had as we thought cut the enemys retreat off, they nevertheless gave us the slip in the night; but on the 13th we got up with them again, and from the effects of both days, for the particulars of which I refer you to Lieutenant [James Richard] Dacres, only three of their vessells, have escaped, the rest being destroyed or taken.

The Gallant behaviour of Lieutenant Dacres induces me to beg you will permit him to go home with my dispatches both to Lord Sandwich and Lord George Germaine. I am &c

Governor Sir Guy Carleton to Lord George Germain[1]

On Board the Maria off Crown Point,
My Lord, October 14, 1776.

The Rebel Fleet upon Lake Champlain has been intirely defeated in two Actions; the first on the 11th Instant, between the Island of Valcourt and the Main; and the second on the 13th, within a few Leagues of Crown Point.

We have taken Mr. Waterbury, the Second in Command, One of their Brigadier Generals, with Two of their Vessels, and Ten others have been burnt and destroyed; only Three of Fifteen Sail, a List of which I transmit, having escaped. For farther Particulars I refer your Lordship to Lieutenant Dacres, who will be the Bearer of this Letter, and had a Share in both Actions, particularly the first, where his gallant Behaviour in the Carleton Schooner, which he commanded, distinguished him so much as to merit great Commendation; and I beg to recommend him to your Lordship's Notice and Favour; at the same Time I cannot omit taking Notice to your Lordship of the good Service done, in the first Action, by the spirited Conduct of a Number of Officers and Men of the Corps of Artillery, who served the Gun Boats, which, together with the Carleton, sustained for many Hours the whole Fire of the Enemy's Fleet, the rest of our Vessels not being able to work up near enough to join effectually in the Engagement.

The Rebels, upon the News reaching them of the Defeat of their Naval Force, set Fire to all the Buildings and Houses in and near Crown Point, and retired to Ticonderoga.

The Season is so far advanced, that I cannot yet pretend to inform your Lordship whether any Thing farther can be done this Year. I am, &c.

Guy Carleton.

JOURNAL OF CAPTAIN GEORGE PAUSCH[1]

[Windmill-Point, Lake Champlain]

11th [October] We raised our anchor, and, with a favorable wind, got very early under sail. At 5 o'clock in the morning, we received orders to get in readiness for an engagement. About half after ten, we heard the sound of artillery; and soon after, under a splendid and auspicious wind, all the batteaux met the enemy's ships in a bay behind an island. The first sight, encountered by our advance guard, was a frigate of the enemy stuck fast on a stone cliff or island and abandoned; and soon after we saw two other frigates sending forth a lively fire. Besides this they had several armed gondolas, which, one after another, emerged from a small bay of the island firing rapidly and effectively. Every once in a while they would vanish in order to get breath, and again suddenly reappear.

Our attack with about 27 batteaux armed with 24, 12, and 6 pound cannon and a few howitzers became very fierce; and, after getting to close quarters, very animated. But now our frigates approached. One of them, the "Maria," having His Excellency, von Carleton on board, advanced and opened a lively cannonade. This one was replaced by the frigate "Carleton;" and as she in turn retreated, the "Inflexible" took her place only to retreat as the others had done. One of the enemy's frigates two of which were at echelier, or rather at echelon, one behind the other, began to careen over on one side, but in spite of this continued her fire. The cannon of the Rebels were well served; for, as I saw afterwards, our ships were pretty well mended and patched up with boards and stoppers.

Close to one o'clock in the afternoon, this naval battle began to get very serious. Lieut. Dufais came very near perishing with all his men; for a cannon ball from the enemy's guns going through his powder magazine, it blew up. He kept at a long distance to the right. The sergeant, who served the cannon on my batteau, was the first one who saw the explosion, and called my attention to it as I was taking aim with my cannon. At first, I could not tell what men were on board; but directly, a chest went up into the air, and after the smoke had cleared away, I recognized the men by the cords around their hats. Dufais's batteau came back burning; and I hurried toward it to save, if possible, the Lieutenant and his men, for, as an additional misfortune, the batteau was full of water. All who could, jumped on board my batteau, which being thus overloaded, came near sinking. At this moment, a Lieutenant of artillery by the name of Smith, came with his batteau to the rescue, and took on board the Lieutenant, Bombadier Engell, and one cannonier. The remainder of Dufais's men, viz: nine cannoniers and nine sailors remained with me; and these, added to my own force of 10 cannoniers, 1 drummer, 1 Sergeant, 1 boy and 10 sailors — in all 48 persons — came near upsetting my little boat, which was so over-loaded that it could hardly move. In what a predicament was I? Every moment I was in danger of drowning with all on board, and in the company, too, of those I had just rescued and who had been already half lost! It being, by this time, nearly evening, the batteaux retired. The Radeau arrived at dusk because, although we had a favorable wind, it was light, and it made, in consequence, but little headway. Any way, the two 4 pounders did their best, in firing at the frigates of the enemy. The distance, however, was too great, so that no ball was effective, and the approach of night prevented our advancing nearer. This night a chain was formed of all the batteaux; and every one had to be wide awake and on the alert. The Captain's frigate, which had run aground, was set on fire at dusk by the orders of his Excellency; and her ammunition, blowing up, caused a fine fire lasting all night. Up to this time, nothing more occurred; for the enemy's frigates remained in the same place where they had acted on the defensive.

[12] Toward morning, however, it was clear that they had escaped. A pursuit was begun and some vessels were captured. Five large and small vessels, which had entered a bay on the left shore were set on fire and abandoned by the enemy.

[13] The following night, my batteau, together with some other armed English batteaux, lost sight of the fleet on the Lake; and we were thus forced to continue rowing by guess-work the entire night that we might not be left behind. The next morning at day-break, we were lucky enough to meet a few English vessels which had met with the same experience as I had. Others followed in my rear, so that I arrived in time (ahead of some and behind others) at 9 o'clock A.M. at Crown-Point.

During our last engagement, Lieut. Dufais lost one cannonier named Rosemer, who was shot dead, and the drummer Pillant, and the pilot, who were burned up. A sailor, also, lost his leg by the same ball that killed the cannonier, and which dug a hole under the gun-carriage three inches above water mark. During this time all ate and drank rum and water together — officers as well as men; and for a change, water and rum! Salt meat and Zweibach, continued to be our food.

[Ticonderoga] Monday 14th [October] Last evening about sunset two Schooners, one shallop, 1 Gundalo and one Row galley; being the whole of our fleet which remained out of 16 sail that were not destroyed or taken by the enemy, arrived at the Garrision. Several of our vessels were obliged to strike to them, some being disabled by their shot made for the shore, ran aground, set fire to their vessels and made their escape, and this evening upwards of 160 have arrived safe in Camp. A flag, from the enemy is now here, of 150 men, with whom came Genl Waterbury, the contents are not yet known.

Autobiography of Colonel John Trumbull [1]

Early in October our naval preparations were completed, and our little fleet, composed of a brig, several gallies and gun-boats, mounting altogether more than one hundred guns, commanded by Generals Arnold and Waterbury, proceeded down the lake to look for the enemy. His preparations were completed about the same time, and on the 11th of October the two fleets met, engaged, and we were defeated with total loss. Gen. Arnold ran the galley which he commanded on shore, and escaped with the crew; the other vessels were either taken or destroyed, and their crews, (with the exception of some who got on shore and straggled up to the army,) with Gen. Waterbury, remained prisoners of war.

On this occasion Sir Guy Carleton, who commanded the hostile fleet and army, behaved with a degree of humanity, as well as policy, which, if it had been generally employed by other royal commanders, might have exposed to great hazard the success of America. As soon as the action was over, Sir Guy gave orders to the surgeons of his own troops, to treat the wounded prisoners with the same care as they did his own men. He then ordered that all the other prisoners should be immediately brought on board his own ship, the Royal Charlotte, where he first treated them to a drink of grog, and then spoke kindly to them, praised the bravery of their conduct, regretted that it had not been displayed in the service of their lawful sovereign, and offered to send them home to their friends, on their giving their parole that they would not again bear arms against Great Britain until they should be exchanged. He then invited Gen. Waterbury to go below with him to his cabin, and requested to see his commission, — the moment he saw that it was signed by the governor of Connecticut, (my father,) he held out his hand, and [s]aid, "General Waterbury, I am happy to take you by the hand, now that I see that you are not serving under a commission and orders of the rebel Congress, but of Governor Trumbull. You are acting under a legitimate and acknowledged authority. He is responsible for the abuse he has made of that authority. That which is a high crime in him, is but an error in you; it was your duty to obey him, your legitimate superior."

A few days after this defeat, a number of row-boats approached our advanced post, and there lay upon their oars with a flag of truce. I was ordered to go down and learn their object. I found Capt. [James Henry] Craig, with Gen. Waterbury and the other prisoners who had been taken in the recent action; dismissed, as Sir Guy had promised, upon parole. The usual civilities passed between Sir James and me, and I received the prisoners; all were warm in their acknowledgment of the kindness with which they had been treated, and which appeared to me to have made a very dangerous impression. I therefore placed the boats containing the prisoners under the guns of a battery, and gave orders that no one should be permitted to land, and no intercourse take place with the troops on shore until orders should be received from Gen. Gates. I hurried to make my report to him, and suggested the danger of permitting these men to have any intercourse with our troops; – accordingly they were ordered to proceed immediately to Skeensborough, on their way home, and they went forward that night, without being permitted to land.

[Manor of Livingston] 14t Octr

I dined at the Mansion House. A large Quantity of Ball Chain Shott and Grapeshot lay on the Wharg [sic] for the Forts at Tconderoge and several Tons of Iron Bars ordered for the intended Chain across the River in the High Lands, long since reported to have been constructed. My Brother [Peter R.] L[ivingston] writes to his Wife 12 Inst. that the Ships are before Haverstraw and Money demanded by Colo. [A. Hawkes] Hay for the Support of the River Guards which the Convention not having a Demand is made upon the Cont: Congress for One hundred Thousand Dollars. How astonishing the Confidence of the Public in the Obstruction of the River below! – Boards & Provisions must now pass by Land from Fishkill to King's Bridge – but how can Bricks be transported for the Chimneys and Hearths of the Hutts? – They ought to have been made near the Bridge instead of Albany. The Ships have taken 2 American Row Galleys in ascending the River, and I did not percieve but one Fireship in the Highlands – Colo. [Robert] Livingston assures me, that a Ship can find 5 Fathoms of Water up [to] this Place. There must be great Consternation below –

JOURNAL OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS [1]

[Philadelphia] Monday, October 14, 1776

The committee appointed to hear and determine upon the appeal brought against the sentence passed on the libel, Joshua Wentworth vs. the ship Elizabeth, reported as follows:

Joshua Wentworth Esq. for and in behalf as well of the United States of America, as of John Manly, Daniel Waters and John Ayres, commanders of the officers, marines and mariners, of the three armed vessels Hancock, Lee and Lynch, in the service of the said states, having exhibited a libel before Joshua Brackett, Esq. judge of the court maritime of the state of New Hampshire, against the brigantine Elizabeth, commanded by Peter Ramsay, and her cargo, and Richard Hart, of Portsmouth, in New Hampshire, owner of the said brigantine, and William Jackson and others, of Boston, in the state of Massachusetts bay, owners of sundry goods and merchandise on board of her, having put in their several claims thereto, and the said judge of the court aforesaid, having, on the 21 day of August, in the year of our Lord 1776, decreed and ordered the said brigantine, and so much of her cargo as was claimed to be restored to the respective claimants, and that the claimants recover their legal costs of court, from which decree and sentence the said Joshua Wentworth appealed to Congress.

The committee of Congress, to whom it was referred to hear and determine the said appeal, have diligently inspected the proceedings, and heard the parties by their counsel, and it appearing that on the 1st day of October, in the year of our Lord 1775, General Gage, commander in chief of the British forces, then in Boston, in the state of Massachusetts bay, by his commission to Crean Brush, Esq. directed him to receive into his care, all such goods, chattels, and effects of the inhabitants of that town, some of whom had departed from it, as might be voluntarily delivered into his charge by the owners, or by other persons with whom they were left, giving his receipts for them and to deliver them to the owners, when he should be required; that, on the 10th day of March then following, General Howe, who had succeeded General Gage in the command of the British forces, by his commission to the said Crean Brush, reciting, that as he was informed there were large quantities of goods in Boston, which, if in the possession of the rebels (as he termed the Americans) might enable them to carry on war, and that he had given notice to all loyal inhabitants to remove such goods from thence, and that those who should not remove them, or deliver them to the care of the said Crean Brush, would be considered as abettors of rebels, required him to take into his possession all such goods as answered that description, and give certificates to the owners that he had received them for their use, and would deliver them to the owners, unavoidable accidents excepted, and to seize any such goods, as, upon enquiry, should be found secreted, or left in stores, and to put them on board of the Minerva ship, or brigantine Elizabeth. That, thereupon, the said Crean Brush, assisted by other persons, took into his possession the goods of the claimants, amongst others, and put them into the said brigantine Elizabeth, and other vessels in the harbour of Boston, without the knowledge of some of the owners, and without the consent of all the others, unless it be William Jackson and James Jackson, of whose consent, however, there are no other proofs, than that one of them went with his goods, and watched there on the wharf from whence they were shipped, and that the other was a passenger in the said brigantine Elizabeth, in her voyage towards Halifax. That the said Crean Brush, by certificates under his hand, acknowledged several parcels of the said goods to be in his custody, and engaged to preserve them safely, to make up exact invoices thereof, and, with the approbation of the commander in chief, to return them to the owners. That, on the 29th day of March afterwards the said Peter Ramsay, by orders from Admiral Shuldham, of the British fleet, given about eight days before, went on board the said brigantine Elizabeth, into which some of the claimants' goods had been shifted from the other vessels; and the same day, between the hours of three and four o'clock in the afternoon, sailed with her, under convoy of the British ship of war Niger, for Halifax, in Nova Scotia, and that, on the Tuesday following, the said John Manly, in the Hancock, coming up with the said brigantine Elizabeth, which had, in the mean time, parted from her convoy, fired a broadside at her, which was returned by a volley of small arms; when the said Daniel Waters, in the Lee, and the said John Ayres, in the Lynch, joining the said John Manly, the said Peter Ramsay struck, it being about four or five of the clock in the afternoon, and the said brigantine was seized and carried into Piscataqua river in New Hampshire; whereupon, the committee, after mature deliberation, are of opinion, that the said brigantine Elizabeth is not comprehended in the description of vessels, which, with their cargoes, by the resolutions of Congress of the 25th day of November last, may be forfeited, not being an armed or a transport vessel employed in the present war against the United States, nor carrying provisions, or other necessaries, to the British army or navy, within any of the United Colonies: and that the cases of re-captures, mentioned in the resolution of Congress of the 5th day of December last, adjusting the proportions of salvage, those cases only were intended, in which the vessels and their cargoes remaining in possession of the enemy, might, by the law of nations, be condemned as prize, which is conceived not to be the case of the said brigantine Elizabeth and her cargo; but, that notwithstanding it was the duty of the re-captors to recover the said brigantine and her cargo, and that the owners, who otherwise might, and probably would, have lost their whole property, ought to make a reasonable satisfaction; and that, therefore, the said sentence is erroneous, and ought to be reversed and annulled: That the said brigantine Elizabeth, and such parts of her cargo as were claimed in the said court maritime, be restored to the respective claimants, upon their paying, to the United States, and the recaptors, $\frac{1}{12}$th part of the value thereof, to be determined by the appraisement of appraisers on oath, appointed by the judge of the said court: That the residue of the cargo be sold, and the proceeds, after deducting the like proportion and for the same uses, retained for the persons who shall hereafter prove their right to the same; that William Burk, commander, and the marines and mariners of the Warren, an armed vessel in the service of the United States, who claimed a part of the said brigantine Elizabeth and her cargo, as being joint captors, are not entitled to a share of the salvage, it not appearing that they were present, or in sight, at the time of the recapture: And that the appellants recover against the claimants their costs as well in the said court maritime, as in the prosecution of their appeal here; and that the cause be sent back to the said court maritime, for that court to proceed in carrying this sentence into execution.

Resolved, That Congress agree to the said report.

Resolved, That such part of the twelfth, adjudged in the foregoing report to be paid in lieu of salvage, as belongs to the United States, be released, and given up to the owners of the goods.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed, to consider what is to be done with negroes taken by vessels of war, in the service of the United States:

The members chosen, Mr. [James] Wilson, Mr. R[ichard] H[enry] Lee, and Mr. [Samuel] Huntington.

Commodore Esek Hopkins to Governor Jonathan Trumbull [1]

Sir Newport October 15th 1776 –

I receiv'd yours of the 11th Instant, and can assure you that there is no sort of Shot to be had in this State, as they Sent to Boston and could get but a bare Sufficiency for the New Ships – have Order'd the Hamden out to gain Intelligence – the Columbus is now a Graving – the new Ships and Alfred are ready, all but Men, which we must have three hundred at least for them – and one hundred for the Columbus, before we are able to Engage Ships of equal Force – and it will be with difficulty the Officers can be got willing to go out, without being full Mann'd and I see but little Encouragement of getting them Mann'd in this State.

If you will use your Influence that we may get some Men out of the Army soon, as we wait for nothing else, it will be of great Service. – I have been down here ten days in Order to Enlist Men out of the Forces here, and have not been able to get more than about One hundred and twenty – nor don't see any possibility of getting many more. – Mr [Nathaniel] Shaw [Jr.] will be able to give you any further Information as to the Circumstances of the Ships here – and when the present appearance alters, shall acquaint you. – I am with great Regard Sir [&c.] in Answer to yours of the 21st Ultmo with Respect to the Cannon Foundery att Salisbury in this state; – have to Inform you that this furnace has been in Use for the Casting of pig Iron &c for many Years past, when first set up it was surrounded with large quantitys of wood, Yet by the Land round about being of good soil and much Cleard up for Use and the great Consumption by the furnace it is much Exhausted and now become Very scarce & dear; and we shall soon be Oblidged to goe 8 or 10 miles for Coal –

This Furnace was last the property of one Mr Smith now Absconded & gone to England leaving the Furnace in good Order. This State took it up last spring for the purpose of Casting Cannon. The Ore is extreemly good perhaps no better in America and in great plenty, We have had great Success is Our Opperations & have Cast to the Number of about 120 Cannon from six to 18 pounders about 50 Swivel beside a large quantity of Shot the 12 pounders Wt 23 or 24 hundred they are short & fit only for Ship Cannon. they will bear the highest proof, have all been tried by double quantity of powder & Shot we mean to persue the Casting of Cannon to the Utmost of our power and are in hopes of ariving to 24 pounders, tho it will be expensive & the Cannon turn out dear by reason of the Scarcity of Wood, tho we Imagine they are of the best quality & proof, we find it will by no means answer to build another Stack at that place as the Water will now but just Answer and must be Content to make the best of the Works we now have there, which we shall persue with the greatest Attention there may possibly be some other place not far Distent and where wood is much more plenty which may Answer to Erect works for the largest Cannon And shall make further enquiry and let you know as soon as I am properly Informed –

We have supplied Mr Dean [Barnabas Deane] with the full Compliment of Cannon for the Continental Ship built on Connecticut River[2] am Sir With great Truth and Regard [&c.]

GOVERNOR SIR GUY CARLETON TO LIEUTENANT GENERAL JOHN BURGOYNE [1]

[No.] 198 On Board the Maria off Isle Valcour October
Sir [October 12 to October 15][2]

We found the Rebel fleet Yesterday morning behind the Island of Valcour apparently, and as we hear since from Prisoners, unaprized either of our force or motions. One of their Vessells perceived us only a little before we came abreast of the Island, and our van got to the Southward of it time enough to stop them just as they were making off. They then worked back into the narrow part of the passage between the Island and main, where they anchored in a line. Their principal vessell, the Royal Savage, one of the first endeavouring to get out, in her confusion, upon finding our ships before her, ran upon the south end of the Island, and our Gun boats got possession of her. Upon finding she could not get off she was afterwards set fire to, and she blew up. Her crew except Twenty who were made prisoners, got on shore.

After we had, in this manner, got beyond the enemy and cut them off, the wind which had been favourable to bring us there, – however entirely prevented our being able to bring our whole force to engage them, as we had a narrow passage to work up, Ship by Ship, exposed to the fire of their whole line. The Gun boats and Carleton only got up, and they sustained a very unequal cannonade of several hours, and were obliged to be ordered to fall back, upon our finding that the rest of the fleet could not be brought up to support them, We then Anchored in a line opposite the Rebels within the distance of Cannon shot, expecting in the morning to be able to engage them with our whole fleet, but, to our great mortification we perceived at day break, that they had found means to escape us unobserved by any of our guard boats or cruizers, thus an opportunity of destroying the whole rebel naval force, at one stroke, was lost, first by an impossibility of bringing all our vessels to action, and afterwards by the great diligence used by the enemy in getting away from us.

We have been attempting to get up with part of them, which is still in our sight, this morning, but the wind blowing very strong from the southward we have been obliged to give over the chace for the present: The Enemy however is retarded as well as us.

We have had one Gun boat which was served by the Hessian Artillery, sunk; and about thirty men sailors and Artillery have been killed and wounded.

14th Octor just as I had finished the above, and I could not but be very dissatisfied, the wind sprung up fair and enabled us, after a long chase, Yesterday to get up to the Rebels, and, in our second action, we have been much more successfull; only three of their Vessels, as you will see by the list enclosed having escaped. Their second in command Mr [David] Waterbury struck to us in the Washington Galley, But Arnold run that he was on board of on shore, and set fire to her and several others of his Vessels.

This succes cannot be deemed less than a compleat victory; but considering it was obtained over the kings subjects, that, which in other circumstances ought to be a proper cause of publick rejoicing, is, in these, matter only of great concern; and therefore tho' it may be right to communicate it to the Troops, yet I dare say they think with me, that we should suppress all signs of triumph on the occation.

The Rebels upon the approach of the shattered little remains of their fleet, set fire to all the buildings in and about Crown point, abandoning the place and retired precipitately to Ticonderoga.

The sooner Frasers Brigade with all the matter I wrote about yesterday arrive the better; I shall then be able to see what is to be done. I am &c

Captain Thomas Pringle, R. N., to Philip Stephens[1]

Copy of a Letter from Captain Thomas Pringle, on Board the Maria, off Crown Point, the 15th of October, 1776.

It is with the greatest Pleasure that I embrace this opportunity of congratulating their Lordships upon the Victory compleated the 13th of this Month, by His Majesty's Fleet under my Command, upon Lake Champlain.

Upon the 11th I came up with the Rebel Fleet commanded by Benedict Arnold: They were at Anchor under the Island Valicour, and formed a strong Line, extending from the Island to the West Side of the Continent: The Wind was so unfavourable, that for a considerable Time nothing could be brought into Action with them; but the Gun Boats, the Carleton Schooner, commanded by Mr. [James Richard] Dacres, (who brings their Lordships this) by much Perseverance at last got up to their Assistance; but as none of the other Vessels of the Fleet could then get up, I did not think it by any Means adviseable to continue so partial and unequal a Combat; consequently, with the Approbation of his Excellency General Carleton, who did me the Honor of being on Board the Maria, I called off the Carleton and Gun Boats, and brought the whole Fleet to anchor in a Line as near as possible to the Rebels, that their Retreat might be cut off; which Purpose was however frustrated by the extreme Obscurity of the Night; and in the Morning the Rebels had got a considerable Distance from us up the Lake.

Upon the 13th I again saw Eleven Sail of their Fleet making off to Crown Point, who, after a Chace of seven Hours, I came up with in the Maria, having the Carleton and Inflexible a small Distance a-stern; the rest of the Fleet almost out of Sight. The Action began at Twelve o'Clock and lasted two Hours; at wich Time Arnold, in the Congress Galley, and five Gondolas, ran on Shore, and were directly abandoned and blown up by the Enemy, a Circumstance they were greatly favoured in, by the Wind being off Shore, and the Narrowness of the Lake. The Washington Galley struck during the Action, and the rest made their Escape to Ticonderoga.

The Killed and Wounded in His Majesty's Fleet, including the Artillery in the Gun Boats, do not amount to Forty; but from every Information I have yet got, the Loss of the Enemy must indeed be very considerable.

Many Particulars which their Lordships may wish to know I must at present take the Liberty of referring you to Mr. Dacres for; but I am well convinced his Modesty will not permit him to say how great a Share he had in this Victory, give me Leave to assure you, that during both Actions, nothing could be more pointedly good than his Conduct. I must also do the Justice the Officers and Seamen of this Fleet merit; by saying that every Person under my Command exerted themselves to act up to the Character of British Seamen.

Brigadier General Benedict Arnold to Major General Philip Schuyler [1]

I made no Doubt before this you have recd a Copy of my Letter to Genl Gates of the 12th Inst dated at Schuylers Island advising of an Action between our Fleet and the Enemy the preceding day in which we lost a Schooner and a Gondola. We remained no longer at Schuylers Island than to stop our Leaks and mend the Sails of the Washington. At 2 OClock P. M. the 12th weighed Anchor with a fresh Breeze to the Southward. The Enemy's Fleet at the same time got under Way, our Gondolas made very little way a Head. In the Evening the Wind moderated and we made such Progress that at 6 OClock next Morning we were about off Willsborough 28 Miles from Crown Point. The Enemy's Fleet were very little way above Schuylers Island, the Wind breezed up to the Southward so that we gained very little by beating or rowing, at the same time the Enemy took a fresh Breeze from the N.E. and by the time we had reached split Rock were along Side of us. The Washington and Congress were in a Rear, the rest of our Fleet were a Head except two Gondolas sunk at Schuylers Island. The Washington Galley was in such a shattered Condition and had so many Men killed and wounded she struck to the Enemy after receiving a few Broadsides. we were then attacked in the Congress Galley by a Ship mounting twelve Eighteen Pounders, a Schooner of fourteen Sixes and one of twelve Sixes, two under our Stern and one on our Broadside within Musquet Shot. They kept up an incessant Fire on us for about five Glasses with Round and Grape Shot, which we returned as briskly — The Sails Rigging and Hull of the Congress was shattered and torn in Peices, the first Lieutenant and 3 Men killed, when to prevent her falling into the Enemy's hands, who had seven Sail around me, I ran her ashore in a small Creek ten Miles from Crown Point on the East Side when after saving our small Arms, I set her on Fire with four Gondolas, with whose Crews I reached Crown point thro' the Woods that Evening, and very luckily escaped the Savages who way laid the Road in two Hours after we passed. At 4 OClock Yesterday Morning I reached this place exceedingly fatigued and unwell having been without Sleep or Refreshment for near three days.

Of our whole Fleet we have saved only two Gallies, two small schooners, one Gondola and one Sloop. General Waterbury with One hundred and ten prisoners were returned by Carleton last Night. On Board of the Congress we had twenty odd Men killed and wounded. Our whole loss amounted to Eighty odd. The Enemy's Fleet were last Night three Miles below Crown Point, their Army is doubtless at their Heels, we are busily employed in compleating our Lines [&] Redoubts which I am sorry to say are not so forward as I could wish. We have very few heavy Cannon, but are mounting every piece we have. It is the Opinion of Genl Gates and Sinclair [Arthur St. Clair], that Eight or ten thousand Militia should be immediately sent to our Assistance if they can be spared from below. I am of Opinion the Enemy will attack us with their Fleet and Army at the same time, the former is very formidable, a List of which I am favoured with by Genl Waterbury and have inclosed. The Season is so far advanced, our people are daily growing more healthy. We have about Nine thousand Effectives and if properly supported make no doubt of stopping the Carrier of the Enemy. All your Letters to me of late have miscarried. I am extremely sorry to hear by Genl Gates you are unwell.

I have sent you by Genl Waterbury a small Box containing all my public and private papers and Accounts with a considerable Sum of hard and paper Money, Which beg the favr of your taking Care of. I am Dear Genl [&c.]

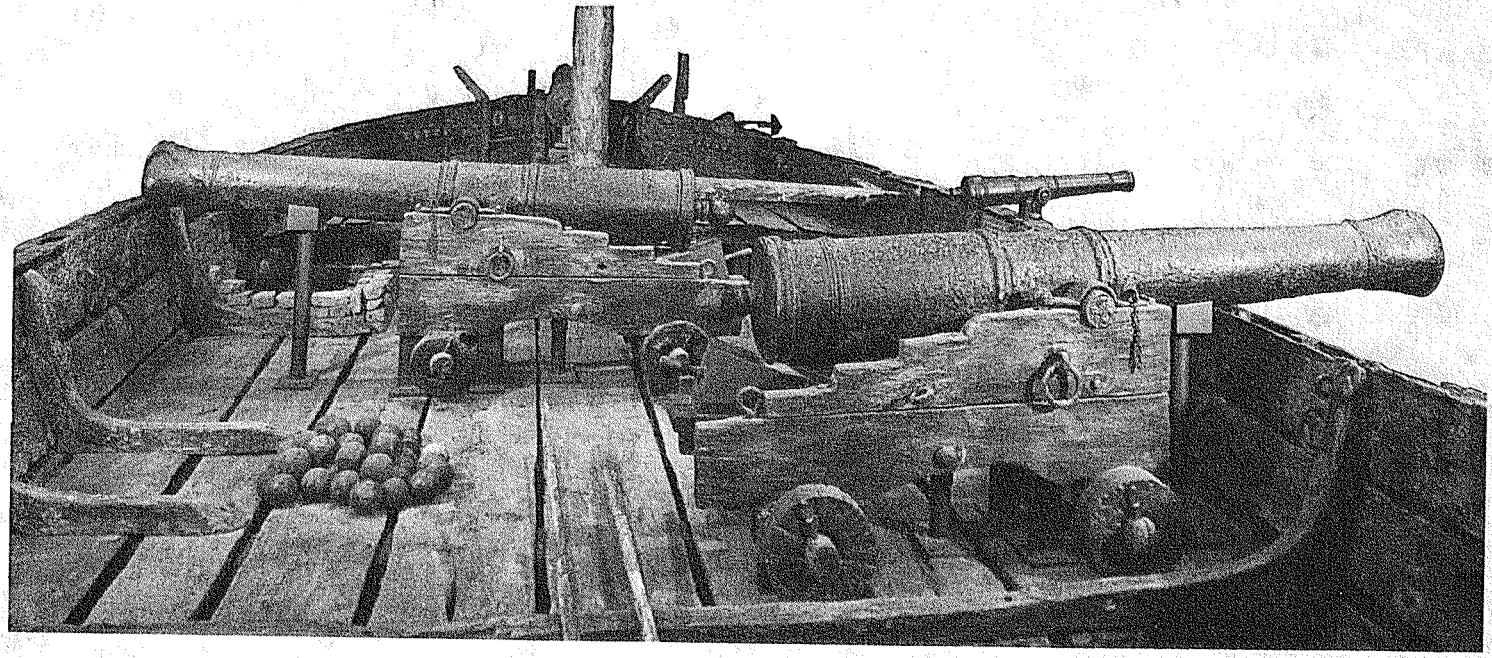
Dear Genl Ticonderoga 15th October 1776 –



You will herewith receive Genl Arnolds Account of the Defeat and almost total Ruin of our Fleet Yesterday Morning. It has pleased providence to preserve Genl Arnold. Few Men ever met with so many hair Breadth Scapes in so short a space of time. Except the Capture of Genl Waterbury and those with him I do not think we shall lose a great many Men. Upwards of 200 with their Officers escaped with Genl Arnold. The Ammunition &ca I so long [illegible] for is much wanted here. I am distressed to the last Degree till it arrives. This Moment your favr from Saratoga of Yesterday Afternoon is put in my Hands. Part of the Lead about three Tons is arrived, and you make me happy in acquainting me the other tons are so near at hand. The Guard you mention and the wise Caution you give shall be carefully attended to. I am in haste [&c.]

Carl[e]ton was with the fleet, which we expect to visit us every hour; for which reason our works go on day and night without any intermission.

Resolved, That a copy of the invoice of the cloths and blankets be sent to General [Thomas] Mifflin, quarter master general, with an order to Messrs. Browns, of Rhode Island, to deliver the whole to his order, and that it be recommended to the said quarter master general, to have the cloths immediately made up for the soldiers, either in Rhode Island, Connecticut, or by the taylors in the army, as may be thought best by General Washington and himself:

That Messrs. Browns be directed to deliver to the continental agent, at Rhode Island, the remaining part of the cargo, with orders to apply the lead, bullets, flints, muskets and powder, to the use of the continental frig-

PENET & PLIARNE TO THE "COMMITEES OF RHODES ISLAND" [1]

Gentlemen Philadelphia 15th 8re [October] 1776

We have Established in france a house destinated only for the Correspondance with the united States. the honorable Continental Congress have been Supplied there already & they will take for the future all the Articles they Shall want for the army & other purposes. we believe Necessary to inform you that it is upon the Encouragement & the assurances we have Receiv'd from the Congress we have Got in Magazines in France a Very Large quantity of Goods & other Articles of Every Kind Suitable to the present Circumstances the States are in.

In Consequence of that, Gentlemen, we flater ourselves you will adress your Vessels to that house & you may depend upon this you will find immediately there Every thing you will want.

but there is an other advantage you Must be acquainted with. the Commitees & the Merchants Meeting with Great Difficulties to send Money to Europe, our house has taken that in Consideration, & you may have bills upon our house & we will take here the Continental Money.

Our house is at Nantz in Britanny, & we have Chosen that port, because it is the best situated for the Business of this Continent. if you send your Cargoes from here to the other ports, Nantz is in the Center & out of the Channel; & after your Capts will have Sold the Cargoes in the other ports, they May Go immediately to Nantz to be Loaded. So Beleave the honorable Congress, & that speculation you will find advantageous because from bordeaux, Rochelle, L'orient & other Ports in one, 2, 3 Days you Get to Nantz and your Capts will not stay there as in other Ports one month to Expect their Loading.

you will find too the Articles Cheaper there, because our Great Consumption with the Continent will Determine our house to Give the Greatest satisfaction to the honorable Congress, the Commitees & the Merchants.

Add to these Reasons, the Market of Nantz is Extremely Good, because there is a very Large River passing through different Cities.

Mr President, Fort Island, Octr 15th, 1776.

I would beg leave to offer my oppinion on a few particulars which Occur, to be necessary for our present safety.

First, That the floating Chevaux du freese's be brought and moored at their proper place, fit for sinking.

Secondly, The boom which at present is in a useless state, to be fix'd to the Piers as intended for service.

Thirdly, As the distance between the Eastmost piere and the west part of the Sunk Chevaux du freeze, admitt large Ships to pass with ease, whether it ought not to be properly secured, as the Chevaux du freese's for that purpose are floating along side the Fort Wharfe.

Fourthly, Having observed a Large Brigg under the care of Mich. Dorsey, to pass through the East Channell with safety, whether it might not be proper to move the Chevaux du freese's prepared at Gloster, to prevent the passing of any vessels at so great a distance from the Fort, which vessels are seldom, if ever, examined by the fleet, and might, through the means of subtile persons, pass Troops to the City undiscover'd, till too late.

Fifthly, As the 18 P'rs on board the Province Ship are too long to be work'd to any degree of advantage for action, if it would not be Expedient imediately to change them for Cannon, more suitable, and the present Cannon on Board to be mounted at Billingsport, to form a defence for, and with the Chevaux du freese's, and to send the six Gunns w'ch lays useless [on]

Mr. Morriss's Wharfe, to suitable places here I have to mount them on, untill they are wanted for other Service. I remain, Sir, [&c.]

"EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM KINGSTON, JAMAICA, DATED OCT. 15." [1]

We are all very quiet at present, and have been so for some time past. Martial law has been suspended about a month; but parochial guards were kept throughout the island, till within this fortnight. The militia is now restored to its former state, and I hope there will be no further occasion for martial law being established here.

A few weeks ago the French frigate L'Hermione, commanded by Mons. Demonteil, Brigadier-General and knight of the order of St. Louis, came in here from St. Nichola Mole in Hispaniola, to demand a small American schooner which had been taken by the Squirrel a few days before. He alledged that the schooner was taken nearer the land than was permitted by treaty between the two courts. The Admiral answered, that Capt. [Stair] Douglas knew his duty, and if he had acted wrong, must answer for it; that he deemed the schooner a lawful prize, and would not deliver her up; but that if there were any differences to be adjusted, they must be settled by the two courts. The French frigate did not remain here 48 hours. It is reported that the admiral further told the captain, that he need not salute his ship when he went away, as he had omitted it when he came in; for that consequently the compliment should not be returned. There have been five or six prizes brought in here within these three weeks.

[Extract] Saratoga Octr 16th 1776

Since the Letter from General Arnold of the 12th Instt which General Washington has doubtless transmitted to you, I have not heard a Word from the Fleet or Tyonderoga.

I am preparing to build Barracks for three Thousand Men at this Place and Stillwater.

If we do not quite lose the Lake this Campaign, it will be necessary to employ Four Hundred Carpenters all Winter in constructing a strong Naval Force; Cordage, Sails, Oakham, and Anchors must be provided somewhere below, and the whole brought up in Winter. Fifty whip Saws will be wanted, and should be sent immediately, they are not to be had in this Quarter.

I wish a Quantity of Crocus, or any coarse Linnen, to be sent up for Sacks for the Soldiers' Bedding & Bolsters, it will be best to have them made up at Philadelphia, large enough for two Men.

A great Quantity of intrenching Tools must be provided, and such a Quantity of Ammunition sent next Winter to Tyonderoga, as will suffice for the Campaign, some should be sent immediately.

Cannon of the largest Size should be Cast in every Quarter, and sent up in Winter.

The Paymaster advises me, that his Chest is reduced to less than One Hundred Thousand Dollars, a Supply should be sent in Time. I am Sir [&c.]

Gentlemen Saratoga Octo 16th 1776

Our Fleet which suffered severely in an engagement on the 12th instant with the Enemy has been still more severely handled in a subsequent [one] — insomuch that the Enemy are left masters of the Lake and are now coming on to attack our Army at Ticonderoga —

In this situation of affairs it is of the utmost importance that the Militia of your State should immediately march to sustain the Army — Such as can most expeditiously come by the way of Albany should do so, and the others take the Route to Skeensborough – Each man should come provided with as much provision and ammunition as possible — The commanding Officer must send me information of his number and the progress in his march from time to time — I shall be either at Fort George or at Skeenesborough, but as I cannot determine which, it will be proper to send expresses to both places – Please to forward Copies of this to Governor Trumbull and to every Committee in your State in a situation of affording assistance, as also to the neighbouring Counties in the State of Connecticut. I must repeat Gentlemen, that it is of great importance that I should be duly furnished with an account of the movement and number of the Militia – I am Gentlemen [&c.]

Sir Amboy October 16. 1776 –

General Green [Nathanael Greene] has informed your Excellency that a party pass'd over last night to Staten Island with a view to attack the Enemy, at the east end near the Watering Place — as we advanced towards Richmond Town information was given, that some Companies of British & Hessian Troops were stationed there — surprising them was therefore the first object, which was effected this morning at break of day — Well disciplined Troops would have taken the whole without the loss of a man — but we only took about twenty prisoners, partly Hessians & English — eight Hessians & nine British, one of those wounded, & besides these two mortally wounded left at Richmond Town — We lost two men in the Action —[2] What we have collected of intelligence from the Prisoners, is enclosed –

Your Instructions of October the 15th I shall immediately set about, observing with the utmost diligence and Punctuallity — Col Griffin received a Wound in the Heel in the Action of this Morning & Lt Col Smith of the flying Camp slightly wounded in the Arm — I shall send the Prisoners on to Philadelphia. JOURNAL OF THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS [1]

[Philadelphia] Wednesday, October 16, 1776

Resolved, That it be recommended to the general court of Massachusetts bay, to give the continental agent the full weight of their influence to make the frigate Hancock ready for sea immediately; that whatever expence shall accrue to the state of Massachusetts bay, either for procuring guns or other stores for fitting the said frigate, shall be reimbursed on demand; and that, in directing the cruise of the said frigate, the Congress will pay all the regard to the protection of the commerce of Massachusetts bay, that the zeal of that state, in the common cause, justly entitles it to.

Whereas sundry prizes have been heretofore taken by the cruisers fitted out by General Washington, at the continental expence, and on continental accounts, and no accounts thereof have yet been rendered by the agents who received and sold the said prizes; and, whereas, a just distribution of such shares of the said prizes as are due to the officers and men, agreeable to the rules and regulations of Congress, ought to be made;

Resolved, That the Marine Committee be empowered to order such distribution of the said prize money amongst the parties interested therein; and that they recover from the said agents the continental share of all the said prizes:

That the present continental agents do account with the Marine Committee, from time to time, for the continental share of all prizes received and sold by them, and that they pay the amount of such prizes to the order of the said committee:

That the said agents make just distribution of the shares in all prizes that appertain to the officers and crews of the continental ships of war, agreeable to the rules and regulations of Congress, as soon after the sales of each prize as possible:

That the Marine Committee apply all the prize money they receive from the agents, to the service of the marine department, and hereafter render accounts thereof to Congress:

That the Marine Committee report, from time to time, all sums of money they received for prizes to the treasury, in order that the same may be charged to their account in the treasury books.

The Board of Treasury reported, that there is due,

To Captain Sion Martindale and Lieutenant Moses Turner, for their pay and rations from the 1st of January to the 14 October, 1776, the sum of 572 76/90 dollars.

Ordered, That the said account be paid.

Sir Providence Octob: 17. 1776

Your Favour requesting us to procure You an Iron Hearth or Cabose for the Ship of War under Your Care[2] also requesting us to inform You whether You could be supplied with 12 lb Shot and what Price we gave the Riggers for Rigging the Warren & Providence we received and it has not been in our Power to reply thereto until now by Reason of Mr Mumford (who is the only Person who undertakes Iron Caboses) being at Warwick and his Workmen at Warren & the great Difficulty in obtaining Bar Iron & Iron Plates; the latter must be plated at Pawtucket — Mr Mumford has agreed to make this Cabose at the same Rate he has ever done only being allowed the Difference in the extraordinary Rise of the Material which was the Way the Naval Committee agreed with him for the two for the Warren & Providence: The Warren's was done first & weigh'd 10½ Cwt for which we paid him 12d per Pound; that for the Providence was done next and weighed 19 Cwt and odd for which we paid him 13½d per lb. The Reason of the latter's weighing so much more than the former was because she had Iron Pots & the Warren a Copper Cook Kettle; but before Mr Mumford can begin upon Your Cabose You must send Answers to the following Questions Do You propose having a Copper Boiler or Iron Pots? If a Copper then the Blacksmith must have the exact Dimensions of its Length, Breadth & Depth from outside to outside; if Iron Pots it will then be best that they be sent to the Smith at Warren if it can be done as the Cabose may be more certainly made to fit them without Loss of Weight; But if they cannot be sent conveniently, the Diameter over the biggest Part of the Pots & also the Height of them as they stand on a Floor: If the Cabose is to stand under the Forecastle it will then be necessary to know the Height from the Deck to the Carlines of the Forecastle that Room may be left for cleaning the Pots &c.

As soon as Your Answer to the foregoing is received we will immediately forward it to Mr Mumford who has promised that no Time shall be lost: But You must expect the Price will be much more than our last cost us owing to the very great Scarcity and Demand for Iron. Any Quantity would sell for Forty eight Pounds per Ton: It is with great Difficulty any can be got —

The Price we gave our Riggers for working on the Continental Ships was from 5/ to 6/ pr Day; but all Labour of every Kind has greatly advanced here since and we think You had better agree with Your Riggers on the best Terms You can. In Regard to the 12 lb Shot we have advised with our Naval Committee & they think they shall be able to supply You with what You may want — You mention having sent Part of the Spars by Capt who is arrived & has lost in the Sound two of the largest of them, he says his Cable broke; we know not how it was but think he was not so careful as he ought to have been or that his Cable was rotten & good for Nothing. This is a very unlucky Affair; we hope better Luck will attend those You have to forward — We are [&c.]

I have written from time to time to the Marine Board and furnished them with Particular Accounts of all my Poceeedings [sic] and I now send Copies of my former letters. — I arrived here 7th Currt — I would not have lost a day without writing to you and to the Board — had not the Commodore Proposed to me to Take Command of an Expidition — with the Alfred, Providence and Hamden to Destroy the Fishery of Newfoundland — but Principally to relieve an Hundred of our fellow Citizens who are detained as Prisoners and Slaves in the Coal Pits of Cape Briton — All my humanity was Awakened and called up to Action by this Laudable Proposal and I have been successfully Employed in refitting and getting the Providence in readiness — but am Under the greatest Apprehension that the Expidition will fall to nothing as the Alfred is greatly Short of Men. — I found her with only about thirty men and we have with much Adoe enlisted Thirty more — but it seems Privateers entice them Away as fast as they receive their Months Pay.

– It is to the last degree distressing to Contemplate the State and Establishment of our Navy. — The common Class of mankind are Actuated by no nobler principle than that of Self Intrest — this and this Only determins all Adventurers in Privateers; the Owners as well as those whom they Employ. And While this is the Case Unless the Private Emolument of individuals in our Navy is made Superiour to that in Privateers it never can become respectable — it never will become formadable. – And without a Respectable Navy — Alas America! — In the Present Critical situation of Affairs human Wisdom can Suggest no more than one infallable expedient. — Enlist the Seamen during Pleasure and give them all the Prizes — What is the Paltry emolument of two thirds of Prizes to the Finances of this Vast Continent! – If so poor a Resourse is essential to its Independency, in sober sadness we are involved in a Woeful Predicament, and our ruin is fast Approching —

– the Situation of America is new in the Annals of Mankind — her Affairs Cry haste — and Speed must Answer them —Triffles therefore ought to be wholly disregarded as being in the Old Vulgar Proverb "Penny Wise and Pound Foolish" — Your Enemies, with the best established and most formadable Navy in the Universe, have found it expedient to Assign all Prizes to the Captors — how much more is such Policy essential to our infant Fleet, but I need Use no Arguments to convince you of the necessity of making the Emoluments of our Navy equal if not Superiour to theirs. — we have had Proof that a Navy may be Officered almost on Any terms — but we are not so sure that those Officers are equal to their Commissions — nor will The Congress ever Obtain such certainty Untill they in their Wisdom See Proper to Appoint a Board of Admiralty compitent to determin impartially the respective Merits and Abilities of their Officers and to Superintend regulate & Pointout all the Motions & Operations of the Navy. —

Govr [Stephen] Hopkins tells me that he Apprehends I am Appointed to the Andrew Doria — She is a good Cruizer and would in my Judgement Answer much better were She mounted with 12 six-pounders than as she is at Present with 14 fours. — An expidition of Importance may be effected this Winter — on the Coast of Africa — with part of the Original Fleet — either the Alfred or Columbus, with the A. Doria and Providence would I am persuaded carry all before them and give a Blow to the English African Trade which would not soon be recovered by not leaving them a Mast Standing on that Coast. – this Expidition would be Attended with no great Expence besides the Ship and Vessels mentioned are Unfit for Service on a Winter Coast – which is not the Case with the New Frigates – the Small Squadron for this Service ought to Sail early that the Prizes may reach our Ports in march or April. – If I do not succeed in manning the Alfred so as to proceed to the Eastward in course of this week the season will be lost – the Coal Fleet will be gone to Hallifax and the Fishermen to Europe. – I will not however remain inactive but Proceed to Cruise in the Sloop near Sandy-Hook. – Three of my Prizes have Arrived here and one or two more to the Eastward. I am &c.

Major General Philip Schuyler to Colonel Elias Dayton [1]

Dear Colonel Saratoga Octr 17th 1776

Our Fleet has been engaged with the Enemy and they have obliged us to quit the Lake with the Loss of the greater part of our Vessels — The Militia is ordered up to support the Communication: but the Tardiness of their Motions gives me great and just Cause to apprehend that the Enemy will interrupt our Supplies — It is therefore of the greatest Moment that you march with all Dispatch to Fort George and only to bring on your Tents.[2] I am Dear Sir [&c.]

Ph: Schuyler.

1. Schuyler Papers, Letters & Orders, 18 April, 1776 – 28 June, 1777, NYPL.
2. Dayton's regiment was stationed at Fort Schuyler, protecting the settlers in the Mohawk Valley.

"Extract of a letter from a Gentleman at Albany, dated October 17, 1776."[1]

You doubtless have heard of the engagement between our fleet on the Lake, and the enemy, on the 11th instant. Our advice left them the 12th, our fleet then at anchor near Schuyler's Island, in a Battered and leaky condition; the enemy just appearing in sight, beating up with a light southerly breeze. Events since have been very unfavourable: Our fleet made but little tarry at anchor, only to stop their leaks &c. and proceeded with all the dispatch their condition would admit of, towards Crown Point. A favourable northerly gale assisted the enemy to run up with the fleet when a second engagement commenced, which lasted five glasses, most of the time in musket shot, very warm and sharp, in which our men conducted with inimitable spirit and bravery, but were obliged to submit to superior strength. In this affair our fleet is almost totally ruined; only one galley escaped, with sloop Enterprise, and two small schooners, and one gondola. — the rest all taken, burnt and destroyed. General Arnold fought as long as possible in the galley Congress, when he was obliged to run her ashore, burn her, and escape by land to Tyconderoga, having lost 20 of his men. General Waterbury in the Washington Galley, fought till he was so shattered that the galley was sinking under him, and was obliged to strike; this is the only vessel that the enemy possessed themselves of. Col. Wigglesworth, in the Trumbull galley is arrived at Ticonderoga. — In both engagements we have lost a large schooner — three galleys burnt and taken, 8 gondola's burnt also; — have remaining a sloop 12 guns, 6 schooners, 8 guns each, 2 galleys 1 gondola.

The enemy's fleet is amazing – one ship 18 twelve pounders, 1 schooner, 14 six pounders, 1 ditto, 12 ditto, 3 large radeaux 6 twenty four pounders – 12 twelve pounders – 4 eight inch howitzers, all brass; 28 gondola's, 1 gun each, twelve, eighteen and twenty-four pounders, 1 eight inch howitzer; our people are all [returned] to Ticonderoga, where they may very soon expect an attack.

[Extract] Camp Nigh Kingsbridge Octr 17th 1776 –

. . . we Expect a general battle here within a few days, As the Enemy have been Landing on frogs Point Ever Since Last Saturday from Long Island, & from the s[h]ipping which came through hell gate on Sunday, Supposed to be About 40 Sail, Part of which has Since returnd – on Monday a Number of boats with cannon & other warlike Stores, on board, were Lost in hell gate – tis supposed the Enemy's Plan is to Strike Across from the Sound, to the North river, & Shut our Army in – they have Advanced up frogs [Throg] Neck About 3 miles from where they first Landed, toward Eastchester – this frogs Neck is An Island at high water, & at Low water they can Cross the marsh in Severall Places – it is about five Miles from the Point where they Landd to Eastchester, where tis Supposed they will come across on to the Main, & it is Eight Miles from Eastchester to the North river, where tis Supposed they Mean to strike Across, & it is about 6 miles from Eastchester to the Bridge – Since they began to Land there, Our troops have been continually marching out, toward the Enemy, 3 Brigades under Command of the Honle Majr Genl [Charles] Lee, 3 under, Majr Genl [John] Sullivan, 3 under command of Majr Genl [William] Heath, & 3 under Genl [Joseph] Spencer, have Already came this Side the bridge, Exclusive of twelve regiments of New draughted men from the Massachusets, & Genl Saltanstalls [Gurdon Saltonstall] brigade of Militia from Connecticut – Genl Lee says we Shall work them if they came out; As the Land is very uneven & commodeous for forts, which our People Are very buisy in building – by Severall deserters we Learnd, that the Enemy have about 16000 men, on frogs Neck, & that Genl Howe, is on their himself, & is determined to carry his Point I believe it will be the greatest battle that has been yet, & tis most Likely a desisive one for this Season. . . .

We are well informed, that the Men of War have left North Carolina, and gone to New York. Previous to their Departure, they burnt the Cruizer, being unfit for Service, and several Prize Vessels. It is more than probable, that there is not at present one British Ship of War on any Part of the American Coast between Pennsylvania and East Florida.

The Owners of Captn [Joseph] Dennis's Sloop have deliver'd two of the Men which Sign'd their Articles, and have given sufficient Security that they will not carry away any of the Men belonging to the Fleet – If you find any Men onboard that do belong to the Fleet take them out and then discharge the Sloop, as there are some of the Owners[2] that are Men of honour & will not do any such thing it will be hard that they should Suffer for one Man who has behaved out of Character – So that upon the whole think it best to let the Sloop and her people go – I am Your Friend &c.

The Montgomery Privateer, belonging to Providence, has taken and sent into this Port, a Schooner from Cape Nichola Mole, bound to Halifax, having on board 9000 Gallons of Molasses and 6000 Wt. of Sugar. The Privateer had been out but 24 Hours when she took this Vessel.

We hear that the Continental Brig Cabot, Capt. Elisha Hinman, has taken seven Prizes, one of which, a Ship, is arrived at Rhode-Island.

COLONEL JOSEPH REED TO GOVERNOR JONATHAN TRUMBULL [1]

Sir

The very critical state of our Army and frequent movements of the Enemy render it almost impossible for the General to write himself without neglecting more important duties. He therefore directs me to answer your letter of the 14th and to say that the Captains of the Galleys from your State have misbehaved invariably from the first moment they came to the time of their departure from hence about a week ago – That the accumulation of business and a hope that they would retrieve their reputation prevented your having an earlier information of their behaviour. They are now under the sentence of a Court Martial for misbehaviour in the first attack made on the Ships in the North River, and on every other occasion since have manifested such want of Spirit and Judgment as to be despised by the whole Army. In the late affair Capt [John] McCleave must be excepted from the general censure, as he managed with prudence and propriety – But Capt [Jehiel] Tinker, [2] with the wind at South and on the Tide of Flood when the Ships could move, left his vessel, though stationed as a guard, to go up to Kingbridge after some cloaths as he pretended. The consequence was, that in the hurry and confusion & long before they were in danger they left the Galley aground, tho' they might have burnt or bilged her – The Enemy

took possession of her in half an hour; and, she with the other left under the like circumstances will probably prove the most formidable Force they can have to oppose us on the River — There was a place of safety provided for the other Galleys which they might have got into as well as McCleave, but they passed it in their hurry — I am Sir by his Excellency's Command [&c.]

Captain Parry will lay before Your Lordship, an Account of the distribution of her Stores, Ammunition, &c. and the Accomodation of her Officers and Company for a Passage to this Port. Journal of Ambrose Serle[1]

Friday 18th. October.

Early this Morning the great Fleet, with the second Division of the Hessians, Waldeckers, & British Recruits on board, appeared in the offing: about Noon, five or six Transports came up to the Town, the rest not being able to pass by the Hook through the contrary Wind. The Active Frigate of 28 Guns, Capt. [Anthony] Hunt, and the Cruizer Sloop of 8, also came into Harbor from the Southward. [2] The Intelligence of this Fleet arriving was good news indeed, and especially as a North West Wind has been expected almost every Day, which might have blown them so far off the Coast, as to have prevented their reaching it again all the Winter. It began to blow very fresh to-day. The Fleet had no sooner come under Land, but the Wind changed from S.E. wch was favorable to the N.W. and came on very strong.

2. This statement is in error regarding the Cruizer which, being no longer seaworthy, was dismantled and destroyed.

[New York] 18th Octr — The Rose of 20 Guns went through Hellgate this Morning without any difficulty, having a fine wind, & favorable tide. The transports with the Hessian brigade, from Staten Island, which have waited so long for a favorable opportunity, went through without any accident, and proceeded to join the Army.

A Signal this morning at Staten Island for a fleet, supposed to be that with the Hessians. In the Evening 7 ships came up to New York, in one of which arrived Major Donkin of The Welch Fusileers, who confirms the account of its being the fleet so long looked for, with about 7000 troops; out 14 weeks, & all arrived safe, under Convoy of The Diamond, Ambuscade, and another Frigate.

CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE TO ALL CONTINENTAL AGENTS[1]

Sir [Philadelphia] October 18th 1776

Herein you will find two Resolves of the Continental Congress[2] of which we have the honor to be members, whereby you'l observe you are ordered to account with us from time to time for the Continental Share of all Prizes received and sold by you as Agent and to pay the amount thereof to our order. In obedience to this Resolve we think proper to lay it down as a Rule, that you State your accounts every three Months crediting therein the Continental Share of every Prize whose accounts can be settled and included within that quarter of a year, and that you add thereto aSchedule containing an exact account of all the prizes that then remain in your care whose accounts are unsettled, and we desire that you will constantly remit us undoubted good bills on this place as you can meet with them which will save the trouble and risque of sending money, in taking drafts prefer those of the Continental Agents, Paymasters & Commissarys to any other provided they are drawn on the President of Congress, this Committee or any other public Board for public Service — Next to these undoubted good private Bills but none others. When neither One or the Other can be met with, inform us and of the sums you have, that we may give particular Orders respecting the Remittance or application thereof.

By the other Resolve you will find yourself under orders of Congress to make a just distribution amongst the officers and men concerned in taking each Prize as soon after the sales as possible agreeable to the Rules and Regulations made by Congress in this respect, and it is our duty to see this punctually complied with as the Service has already suffered by delay — therefore you will always make the said distributions as soon as can be after the Sale and transmit us duplicates of the accounts and your proceedings therein. We shall allow all your just expenditures on account of the Continent to be charged against their share of Prize Money but those charges must be supported by vouchers. We are Sir [&c.]

[Circular] [Philadelphia] October 18th 1776.

Sir We have the honor to inclose herein a Resolve of the Continental Congress [2] of which we are members whereby you will see we are empowered to order a proper and just distribution of all Prizes taken by the Cruizers Genl Washington caused to be fitted out on Continental Account, and also that we are authorized or rather Ordered to receive from the Agents who received and sold the said Prizes, the Continental share thereof, and as we find you have been employed as an Agent in this business, we desire that you will immediately send us an Account of the Prizes that have been put under your care, with Coppies of the decrees of the Court of Admiralty, Inventories of Ships and Cargoes, with Copys of the Accounts Sales properly Authenticated, an Account Current for each Prize wherein you Credit the Neat Proceeds, and charge the share appertaining to the Officers and Crews who were interested in the Capture and also the Continental share agreeable to the Rules and Regulations laid down by Congress and a General Account Current wherein you will credit the Continent for their share in every Prize and charge for all such Remittances as you make to us in consequence of these Orders as well as for any other just charge you have to make against them. We desire that you will remit to this Board whatever moneys you have in hand arising from the Continental share of the Prizes put under your management, and as there are many persons gone from hence to purchase prize goods, you may procure drafts on this place from undoubted safe good men which will save the trouble and risque of sending the money, or you may pay it in to the Continental paymaster at Boston Ebenezer Hancock Esqr and transmit us his draft on the President of Congress, or the Honorable Thomas Cushing Esqr, John Bradford esqr of Boston or John Langdon Esqr of New Hampshire have occasion for money on our account — their drafts on ourselves will be good and the sooner you make these Remittances and render the Accounts the better. We must also enjoin you to make an immediate division and distribution of that share of Prizes that appertains to the Officers and Crews that took them, agreeable to and in strict conformity with the Rules and Regulations of Congress, and that you transmit as soon as can be duplicates of those Accounts as it is our duty to see this business perfected, otherways the maritime service of America will suffer greatly, by the discouragements arising from delays in the payment of Prize money &c. Where any part of the Prizes have been applyed to Continental use, that part must be valued and included at the valuation in the new account of Sales — if applyed to the use of yours or any other State, they must pay the valuation and that be included in the Acct Sales. Expecting your complyance with an answer to this Letter We remain Sir [&c.]

Charles county, the 18th October, 1776.

We, the subscribers, joined three companies of the 26th battalion of militia, under the command of col. [William] Harrison, at Sandy-Point, on Tuesday the 23d July last, early in the morning, in the character of volunteers. About 9 o'clock the ships began to man their tenders and small boats, when col. Harrison ordered the three companies to stand to their arms, and after watching the motions of the enemy a few minutes, gave orders for capt. [Francis] Martin's company, consisting of about 45 men, including officers, to repair to the head of a valley which led down to the river nearly opposite the Roebuck. – We fell in with this company at the head of the valley. – A little while after that came three or four strangers, who were questioned by col. Harrison, and informed him that they had come up the river, were going to Alexandria, and had landed a little below in two small boats: – those we understood to be capt. [Robert] Conway, his lieutenant, and two men: – By this time ten rowboats, two tenders and a gondola were [illegible]ed with men along side of the Roebuck, which lay near 400 yards from the Maryland shore. It was every moment expected the enemy would land and attack us. – col. Harrison told capt. Martin's company that, in case the enemy attempted to land there, he should instantly march down at their head and post them behind the beach, and after admonishing them, begged that if any one felt confused or under any panic, to candidly inform him and turn out of the ranks, on which one of the privates turned out and told him that he did not like to march down the hill. – He was then ordered to give up his gun and ammunition to some other, that would, and col. Harrison delivered his gun to capt. Conway's lieutenant, who said he would march down with us. About ten oclock the enemy's boats, tenders and gondola left the Roebuck, giving three cheers, and contrary to our expectation, went over to Virginia, where they landed and set fire to Mr. Brent's house. – Col. Harrison ordered the company down to the beach in order to show them where he intended to post them, had the enemy attempted, or in case they should attempt a landing at that place – Before the enemy returned from Virginia, we were reinforced with about 120 men under col. [Samuel] Hanson – About 5 or 6 o'clock afternoon, the enemy's small tender, and the gondola, were observed to be manning, and in a few minutes left the Roebuck and directed their course towards the bay where capt. Conway's boats were landed. – Col. Harrison immediately ordered the men to arms, and conceiving the enemy's design was to take off capt. Conway's boats, gave capt. Martin orders to take about 20 of his best armed men, and follow him down to watch the motions of the tender and gondola. – This detachment we joined with two other volunteers – in the whole we think it consisted of 25 persons – We proceeded towards the bay with all haste, and near the head of a valley met with capt. Conway and some of his men. – Capt Conway went down the valley with col. Harrison to shew where his boats lay, and we followed close after in [illegible] and were halted at the mouth of the valley – He told the colonel that one of his boats was drawn over the beach into a marsh, the other, was on the shore staved, which was about 50 yards from us, though we could not see her from the mouth of the valley on account of some bushes, which grew on the beach. – The tender had got in the bay before we reached our post, and lay about 150 yards off. – As soon as we were halted, the tender fired one of her carriage guns, which was presently succeeded by a discharge of grape shot from the gondola; this load grounded within a few paces of us, and many of the shot, with several cannon balls, were picked up the next day – sundry great guns were discharged at us whilst we remained at this post. – The gondola, after she came against the boat, rowed off and on, and, after a short time seemed to be gradually getting more into the bay, as it designed to open the valley and rake it. – We heard capt. Conway say to col. Harrison, that he thought she was endeavouring to rake the valley, and advised him to order a retreat, or words to the same purpose. – The colonel, after taking a view of the gondola, turned about, and in a low tone gave orders for a retreat to the head of the valley, the gondola being within 70 or 80 yards of us at the time. – Five or six of the men who were in the rear retreated some distance beyond the place intended, which we firmly believe proceeded from their not having heard the orders distinctly, as most of them returned immediately to the head of the valley, on being called to by some of the others. – From this place we observed the Roebuck had got under way and fallen down, and began to fire on us; also the tender, our situation being open to them both. The colonel returned to the mouth of the valley, and we and others went different ways to take another view of the gondola, which we found lying quite still, nearly opposite the boat, with her hatches close shut, and nothing visible but her oars and guns, though capt. Conway's lieutenant had just before informed, that her hatches were up and men exposed, which raised our hopes of getting a shoot. – We recollect that, previous to our leaving the mouth of the valley, capt. Conway asked col. Harrison to let the gondola be fired at, to scare her off from the shore, which was refused, as there was no living object to shoot at. – A retreat was then ordered to the main body by col. Harrison, and the detachment directed to scatter as they retreated through the old fields, to observe the flash of the enemy's cannon, and to fall down whenever they saw it. – The fire from the Roebuck, armed schooner, and gondola, grew very warm, and the frequent falling down of the men occasioned a general laughter. – We retreated to a fence at the edge of a wood, and lay behind it until the enemy's fire ceased – then returned to the main body, with which we remained until the ships went down the river, and the troops were discharged.

William Stoddert,

(Copy.) Charles county, October 18, 1776.

Then came Messrs. John Matthews and William Stoddert, gentlemen, and made oath on the holy Evangelists of Almighty God, that the above is a true state of the transactions at Sandy-Point, under col. William Harrison, on the 23d of July last.

Sir, Edenton 18th Octr 1776

Since the Resolve of your Honorable Board came to hand for the King Tamminy to Cruize we have been indefaticable in Our Endeavours to get her Mann'd and rendered fit for Sea, and we have the pleasure to inform you that She is now nearly, or quite complete.

We have lately been informed the Pennsylvania Farmer is gone up to New Bern, to heave down, and will not be ready for some considerable time to proceed on her intended Cruize.

We beg leave to Submit it to your Honl Board whether it might not be best to Alter the Cruizes of the Two Vessells and Order the King Tamminy to take the first Cruize Also to Allow her to Cruize from Lat: 35 to Lat: 30, to leave the distance from the Coast to the discretion of the Captain, and allow Six weeks for the Cruize in place of four.

What induced us to trouble you on this Occasion was this Consideration that by the last of the month of November, in all probability the Jamaica Fleet homeward bound will have crossed these Latitudes, and render the Cruize fruitless to all intents and purposes.

We have no doubt but it will Occur to you, it will be necessary to give the Bearer as much dispatch as possible as the King Tamminy will be ready to go down next Wednesday, We have the Honor to be Most respectfully sir [&c.]

No 26.

My Lord; I am sorry to inform your Lordship that the Cumberland Packet Boat, which was dispatched the 9. of September, after out living a severe Storm at Sea, returned in about three weeks, in distress, and sunk in the Harbour. The amer[i]can male [sic] was sent by Captain [Thomas] Bishop of the Lively to New York. The Captain and Crew with the Guns that were on Board the Packet, are on Board the Betsey Ship Captain Lofthouse, who carries home our annual produce.

I have the honour to acquaint your Lordship that, at the Critical time, when an expedition was planned and commenced against this province, and when depredations were made by the Rebels as far as Saint John River, to secure that Barrier, and the Plantations and Provisions on that River, as there was not at that time any of the Kings Vessels of force in the province, I was, my Lord, under the absolutely [sic] necessity, of commissioning and employing the Sloop Rebeca Captain Mowbray for three Months certain to secure the inland water passage to Saint John River from Georgia.

There are numbers of fugitives from the Neighbouring Provinces, many of whom, without a little assistance have not where withal to support themselves; there are a number of Run away Negros from Georgia, whom I releived the Captains of the Navy of, to whom they fled for protection, and twenty eight Prisoners taken by Lord Dunmore, and sent here to be kept in custody; I have committed them to the Fort untill these unhappy differences terminate.

We the Subscribers Inhabitants of Barrington in the Province of Nova Scotia, Haveing hired and partly Loaded the Schooner Hope with Fish and Liver Oyl bound for Salem or Newbary In the Province of the Massachusetts Bay – Earnestly Pray and Request of you the Honble Congress or those whose business it may be to see to it, To permitt and Suffer the said Loading to be disposed of by Herman Kenney and part of the amount to be Lay'd out in provissions for the Support of us the Subscribers which are Intirely Destitute of any for the Support of them or their Children and it is Impossible to get any Any where, – And a Long Winter Approching God only knows what will become of us; We Look on ourselves as Unhappyly situated as any People in the world; being Settelers from the Massachusetts bay for whose wellfare we Earnestly pray having Fathers Brothers and Children living there; And we have in the Course of these Unhappy Times done every thing in our power to Assist those Unfortunate people that have been Taken and come into this place from Halifax to help them over the bay on their way home. And have not at any Time done any thing Either by Supplys or men to Injure our native place and Country; – In the above Vessell are Three Families with their Effects which have Left this place and gone to the places in your province where they formerly came from, And we the Subscribers dont see but that we must follow them for we don't think we can Live Quietly here for our Imployment is such for the Support of our families Vizt Fishing as you look upon as a Disservice to the great cause you are imbarked in and we cannot but follow it while we are

[No.] 200 Crown Point 20th October 1776

Sir We have defeated the Rebel Fleet upon lake Champlain, three sail only out of 15 having escaped, the rest we have taken or destroyed, upon the news of this event reaching crown point the Rebels posted there, set fire to all the buildings and retired to Ticonderoga. His Majesty's Forces therefore are now in possession of the former place, but I fear the want of time (the severe season approaching very fast) to put it in a proper state of defence, and of materials to put it in a condition to lodge the Troops, provisions and stores, which would be necessary to leave there, will force us back to Canada. I am in hopes however that our appearance on this side the lake will occation a diversion which may be favourable to your opperations.

I have not heard from you since you left Hallifax.

Some Officers of the Regiments serving under your command, not finding opportunity of joining your army at the beginning, I gave them leave to serve with the Troops here; I have now directed them to repair to their respective corps, and think it just to acquaint you, I have been very much satisfied with their conduct during this campaign. WILLING, MORRIS & CO. TO WILLIAM BINGHAM [1]

[Extract] Philadelphia Octr 20th 1776

. . . Your favor of the 24th Septr or rather the Copy of it was handed us yesterday by Capt Lockhart of the Brigt Cornelia & Molly which arrived here safe and we have this day sold the Molasses at Publick Vendue for upwards of 6 P Gal & Mr Harrison & your Limes for 40/ to 50 P bbl they are rather plenty You see it is hard to form just opinions concerning adventures in our present situation, when we wrote You in July there seemed little Chance of getting any thing safe and almost ever since the Coast has been quite clear so that the spirit of enterprize has seized most People & they are making or trying to make Fortunes, their Attempts will probably have the happy effect of procuring us many supplys that we stand much in need of

. . . We are fearful the Farmers General of France will have so many offers for supplying them with Tobacco that instead of expecting to pay prices suited to the risque of Exporting it, they will begin to think it is in their power to engross our whole Crops on their own terms for you cannot conceive how many proposals made to them have come to our knowledge, however when they answer your letter transmit us a Copy and if they leave room for doing any thing you may depend we will back you properly – You desire us to point out the Articles wanted and were to send you patterns but we answer as we did in our former letter that this is not necessary We are in great want of all kinds of European Manufactures especially for Winter Wear nothing can come amiss, Silks are perhaps the least demanded of any thing especially in Winter. French Wines do not sell well unless they are of the very best quality and its best not to meddle with them unless you imported them from France on purpose and coud depend on having the best.

Nails, Glass (Window Glass) as well as Glass Ware is wanted. Some Coarse Hats, Coarse Stockings & Soldier's Shoes wou'd sell well, all kind of West India produce is and will be dear, notwithstanding the great Number of Prizes taken with those Commodities, all sorts of woolen Goods must answer well this whole Winter & every kind Goods fit for warm weather will sell well all the year round; therefore we think you cannot be at a loss. . . . We think our Publick affairs wear a better aspect than when we wrote you last, therefore no need to stop any thing from coming this way. If many Goods are arrived for us from Europe send them forward by the best Conveyances, and advise our T. Morris the Vessells, Masters & value by each. We have now fixed him in the Mercantile line in France during the present troubles and you may keep up a Constant Correspondence with him, perhaps he may soon have it in his power to supply both you & us with all the Goods that will be wanted from thence. We have given orders for a little Vessell to be sent you from Maryland, another from Carolina with Rice & Indigo and shall keep sending and ordering as many as we can. You dont seem to write as if you approved much of Mr Harrison being joined with you in Consignments and Capt. Lockhart says the business of his Vessell was not well attended to or he might have been here some weeks ago, this shoud not happen Vessells now sail at a monstrous Expense and the dispatch ought to be quick. If you cannot attend closely you had better get Mr Harrison or some other to do the business or hire an excellent Clerk to assist you. When any Vessells of our Concern or recommendation arrive we know you will exert yourself to serve them & Comply with the Orders but pray dispatch them for Vessells being scarce delay hinders your own reimbursement. —

The Cornelia & Molly shall go back to you but not on Publick account as we want to throw Funds into your hands indeed we shall make you many Consignments as possible.

We think if you cou'd hire a small fast sailing French Vessell and dispatch her immediately for Carolina Consd to Mr John Dorsius Mercht there with a Cargo of Powder, some linens Checks &c. you will make a Golden Voyage. You may Interest us half or two thirds, there is some British Cruizers on that Coast but if the Vessell is small she may easily escape by lying Hull too every Morning at Day break untill she can see all round her, she will see the Enemy when they cannot see her and by setting their course avoid em. She shoud not cross the Gulph Stream untill in the Latitd of Charles Town & then run right in, dont lose a Moment in executing this Scheme if you do execute it & we hope you will, pray take care to have a trusty faithfull Master, you can order back Rice & Indigo & ship the latter Ordr Mr Thos Morris or his order at any Port you please in France, he will have agents at every Port, therefore you cannot go amiss, but we believe he will fix with Messrs Pliarne Penet & Co at Nantes instead of Mr Schweighauser all the rest as mentioned to you before. Capt. James Robinson the Bearer of this has orders to take in any Goods you have to ship & if you shou'd not have enough to fill him on the Publick Account, you had best put some onboard on your & our account, but if you fill him on Publick Account, then hire if you can some Vessells to sail under his Convoy which you can ballast with Limes & Molasses & put onbd such other Goods as you think proper, indeed We think you cannot do better than to keep Chartering French Vessells to come this way, they can navigate cheaper than our Vessells & consequently can afford to take lower freights & they shall all go back to you with Flour Lumber Tobacco &c. In short when Cargoes arrive either one way or t'other, the Proffits are now so great it is well worth risquing largely for one Arrival will pay for two three or four losses therefore its best to keep doing something constantly. We are Sir [&c.]

[Philadelphia] Octr 20th 1776

. . . in the Evening Post Numb. 273.[2] is this remarkable Extract of a Letter dated Dominica Sept. — viz, Capt Stout of Antigua told us that he had heard, from Taylor & Bell of that Island, that a house, that does the government business there, had poisned ten Cags of Rum, which they shipped in the Creighton, Capt Ross, and directed for General Howe, in hopes that if the Ship Should be taken, the Americans would Send those to the Camp, on Supposing them of an Uncommon good Quality, what a diabolical Project! — He had it from their own mouths! O dreadful! —[3]

Van Bebber & Harrison to the Maryland Council of Safety [1]

Gent St Pierre Mart[ini]que Octo 20. 1776

Our last respects to you were by Capt [John] Martin, who sailed from this port the 11th Currt with a valuable Cargoe – since then your favours of the 12th Sept have come safe to hand p the Molly Capt [Thomas] Conway – His Cargoe, tho' a very proper one, we are sorry to acquaint, has come to a most wretched Market – 57/. p barrl for his Flour & 36/. for his Bread is the most we have been able to obtain, & his Tobacco is yet unsold. – Since disposing of this Flour, a Cargoe of Philadelphia Superfine has been sold for 53/. This fall has been occasioned by the immense Quantities that have arrived & continue to arrive from France on a Supposition that it would be a scarce article here. – We fear there will be no change for the better till towards the middle of Winter & Spring when we imagine it will begin to advance again as in all probability the Exportations from France will cease when it is known how badly their Speculations must turn out. – And plenty as Flour is, we know of nothing that can be sent from Maryland that will turn to a better Acot so surprizingly are we glutted with Tobacco & all kinds of provisions –

We almost despair of supplying you with the large Quantities of Woolens & Salt that you want – they are scarce & command ready Cash – but we shall do our best –

As Vessells with you are difficult to procure & Markets here very low, we fear you cannot easily remit us money sufficient for the extensive Engagements we have & are to enter into – We would therefore beg leave to propose a Method which we think may be employ'd with more Success & facility than any other at present – It is, if possible, to get a Boat or two out from S. Carolina with Indigo – One Pilot Boat ballasted with that Article would yield more Money here than three or four Brigts with Flour & Tobo It is constantly worth from 6/a 12/. p lb according to Quality, & is the only Article of our Exports that can be shippd from hence to France, and the risk of getting it here will be trifling as it may be sent in such small fast sailing Vessells. –

A part of Capt Martin's Tobacco has been sold in Statia a 42/. p C[w]t & yesterday we shipped the remainder for that place.

We hope to dispatch Conway in 8 or 10 days with some Woolens, Muskets, Duck &ca & are &ca

JOURNAL OF H. M. S. Blonde, CAPTAIN PHILEMON POWNOLL[1]

Octor 1776 Moored off Quebec

Monday 21 Fresh Gales and Squally, AM rec'd our Stores from the Lord Howe P M arrived from the Command of the Carleton Armed Schooner on Lake Champlain Lieutt [James Richard] Dacres, with the news of Taking and Destroying 11 Sail of Rebel Armed Vessels on the said Lake

1. PRO, Admiralty 51/118.

CAPTAIN CHARLES DOUGLAS, R. N., TO PHILIP STEPHENS[1]

(Copy) Isis Quebec 21st October 1776

Sir Having for the space of Six Weeks, attended the Naval Equipment for the important Expedition on Lake Champlain, I (on the 4h instant) saw with unspeakable joy the reconstructed Ship alluded to in former Letters now called the Inflexible and commanded by Lieutenant [John] Schank her rebuilder; sail from St Johns twenty Eight Days after her keel was laid, towards the place of rendezvous – taking in her eighteen twelve pounders, beyond the Shoal which is on this side the Isle aux Noix, in her way up.

The prodigies of labor which have been effected, since the Rebels were driven out of Canada in creating, recreating, and equiping a fleet of above thirty fighting Vessels of different Sorts and Sizes, and all carrying Cannon, since the beginning of July, together with the transporting over Land & afterwards drigging up the two rapids of St Terese and St Johns, thirty Long boats, the flat bottom boats, a Gondola weighing about thirty Tons, and above four hundred Battoes, almost exceeds belief. His Excellency the Commander in Chief of the Army and all the other Generals, are of the opinion that the Sailors of His Majesty's Ships and Transports, have (far beyond the usual limits of their duty) Exerted themselves to the utmost, on this great and toilsome Occasion. Nor has a Man of that profession, uttered a single Words expressive of discontent amidst all the hardships they have undergone so truly patriotic are the motives, by which they are actuated. To Crown the whole above two hundred prime Seamen of the Transports, impelled by a due sense of their Country's wrongs did most generously engage themselves, to serve in our armed Vessels, during the Expedition; and Embarked accordingly. such having then been our unremitting toils, I am happy beyond Expression in hereby acquainting my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, that the destruction of almost the whole of the Rebel Fleet, in two several Battles on the 11th and 13th instant is our reward as may appear by a Letter of General Burgoyne's of the 12th Instant, and by the Accounts I am this day honoured with, from General Carleton, of which I send you Copies; as also by a Letter from Captain [Thomas] Pringle of the Lord Howe armed Ship who commands the Officers and Seamen on the Lake, and, who bestows the highest Encomiums on their behaviour in both Engagements The Rebels did by no means believe it possible, for us to get upon Lake Champlain this Year; were much surprized at the first sight of the Van of our force but ran into immediate and utter confusion, the moment a three masted Ship made her appearance being a phenomenon, they never so much as dreamt of. Thus have His Majesty's faithful Subjects here (contrary to a Crude but prevailing idea) by straining every nerve in their Countrys cause outdone them in working, as much as in fighting.

The Ship Inflexible with the Maria and Carleton Schooners, all reconstructions did the whole of the second days business, the flat bottomed Radeau, called the Thunderer, and the Gondola called the Loyal Convert; with the Gun boats, not having been able to keep up with them: the said Gondola was taken from the Rebels, the day the seige of Quebec was raised The loss we have sustained, considering the great superiority of the Insurgents, is very small consisting of between thirty and forty Men, killed and wounded Seamen, Soldiers, artillery men and all eight whereof were slain outwright, and Six wounded on board of the Carleton; as to further particulars, I must refer you to Lieutenant Dacres, who (in justice due to his merit for the part he bore in destroying the Rebel Fleet) I am happy in sending upon this occasion to their Lordships in the Stag Transport as also in thereby complying with the General's desire, who for the same reason, is pleased to honor him with the Conveyance of his Dispatches.

If any further occurrences happen, which may be worthy of their Lordships cognizance, they shall be the subject of some future Letter. In the mean time, being about to prepare an Express for Lord Howe, and recommending all the Gentlemen, according to the herewith inclosed List, who have had the honor of serving His Majesty in this brilliant Expedition, to that of the present notice, or future protection of my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, remain &c

Charles Douglas.

P:S: Presuming that the early knowledge of this great Event, in the Southern parts of Europe, may be of advantage to His Majesty's Service I have written an account thereof to his ambassador at Madrid, by a Ship which is sailed for Barcelona with a fair wind. I hope their Lordships will approve thereof.

Newport Mercury, MONDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1776

Newport, October 21.

Since our last have arrived at safe ports; a transport snow of 250 tons, loaded with provisions for New York, taken by Capt. [Joseph] Jauncey; a bark of about 200 tons, from Jamaica, loaded with sugar, &c. taken by the Cabot, Capt. [Elisha] Hinman; a ship of 370 tons, loaded with fish and lumber from Nova-Scotia for Jamaica, taken by Capt. Job Pearce; a ship of about 300 tons, from Quebec for London, ballast with coal, &c. taken by Capt. [Thomas] Stacey; a schooner from the West Indies for Newfoundland, loaded with rum, &c. taken by Capt. [Abner] Coffin; and several others, but by whom taken we have not learned.[1]

There is much talk, in the French islands, of a speedy rupture between France and England, and it was said that Jamaica was actually besieged.

Capt. Vickary, in [illegible] days from Hispaniola, informs that about a fortnight before he sailed, an English frigate took an American vessel, near that island, and carried her off for Jamaica; and that a French frigate, whose topmasts were then down, got ready and sailed in two hours for Jamaica to demand the American vessel, but had not returned when Capt. Vickary came away; and that no vessel is suffered to wear English colours in any French port; but Continental colours are displayed every Sunday, and much admired.[2]

[Extract] New Haven October 21st 1776

Colo [William] Richmond with his Regiment consisting of 400 men, with 54 Whale Boats arrived some days since at New London. I have ordered him and Lieut Colo [Henry Beekman] Livingston with their men, the Whale Boats and 1200 Tons of small craft to come to me at this place without delay. They are designed for the Long Island expedition with Colo [William] McIntosh at Fairfield. They may be hourly expected — I could wish General Clinton Brigadier General of the Militia in the State of New York might be sent, to take upon him the conduct of this expedition, if he can be spared, and also to be informed whether Your Excellency would think proper to give any different orders respecting it —

[No.] 201 Crown Point 21st of October 1776

Sir I have received your letters of the 8th and 13th Inst relating to the seamen whom you desire to be sent down. orders for which have already been given by me, as Captain [Thomas] Pringle will more particularly inform you of.

I am very sorry to hear you think the Blonde cannot winter here. I was in hopes that if she could not remain in the Cul de sac some other place might be found, such as Chaudiere or St Patricks Hole as the service very much requires her stay; for altho we have defeated the Rebels upon the Lake, and for the present made ourselves masters of it, yet as the advanced season of the year may make our establishing of this post impracticable, and therefore oblige us to fall back into Canada for our winter quarters, the Rebels may probably exert themselves to equip another fleet, and dispute the lake again with us, it is therefore of the utmost importance to His Majesty's Service that the Blonde as well as the other ship and as many seamen as they can bear, remain in the river St Lawrence if it be practicable, in order that we may be prepared to be before the Rebels upon the lake in the Spring.

It has always been intended by me that the victualling ships should be dispatched as fast as possible, having received an order to that effect from the Treasury, which I communicated to you some time past,[2] and gave directions about to the Lieutenant Governor at the same time, if I remember right.

Least I should not have the pleasure of writing to you again before your departure I must again thank you for the many good offices you have done, and the ready assistance you have given to His Majesty's service here, and I wish you a good Voyage and safe arrival in England. I am &c

Collo. [Robert] Livingston made us a Morning Visit and shewed me a Copy of Genl. Arnold's Letter of 12t to General Gates. It was dated at Schuyler Island and informs him of an Engagement on the 11t. off Cumberland Bay at the North End of Lake Champlaine — He lost a Schooner with 60 Men (which was the most considerable of his Vessels) ran on Shore & burnt by the British Forces & had another Vessel sunk. He begs for Boats to meet him and two [sic tow] of his Fleet to Tconderoge in Case the Wind should be southerly & says he has expended ¾th. of his Ammunition This Letter also represents that Naval Strength of Burgoyne to be a Ship of 16 Guns — about 10 or 12 more less considerable besides 15 Gondolas with large Cannon in their Prows. Arnold says the Engagemt. was from half after 12 o'Clock till 5 PM. and that his Opponents first attacked & first withdrew. By a Letter from PRL [Peter R. Livingston] of the 19t. I find that the Convention at Fish kill consider the Fleet of the Provincials as totally destroyed & that the whole Militia are ordered up on the Apprehension that the British Army will be across the Lake in a few Days. He informs me also that [Charles] Lee has repelled an advanced Party of 1500 near West Chester and that a Ship is carried into Providence bound to Quebec laden with 15000 Blankets, Linnen &c. If these Blankets are wanted there this Loss cannot be provided for this Year. Nothing could be more opportune to the Provincials. At this very Juncture private Families were in Expectation of being called upon for a Contribution to cover the naked Soldiers and the Philad: Papers sound an Alarm of the Necessity.

JOURNAL OF AMBROSE SERLE [1]

Monday, 21st. [October]

This Afternoon the Harriot Packet came in from England, after a Passage of 6 Weeks & 5 Days, and brought me long-expected Letters from my dearest Wife & other Friends. The Packet was attacked by a Rebel Privateer so near England as Long. 20°. and lost her Captain and 5 men who were killed in the Engagement. About 9 or 10 were wounded. The Privateer, meeting with a stout Resistance, at last sheered off; and the Packet arrived without further molestation.

New-York Gazette, MONDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1776

New-York, October 21.

On Monday last, the Perseus, Captain Elphinstone, with eleven Sail of Transports, having on board Troops and Provisions, arrived in Port, after a passage of eleven Weeks from Portsmouth. The Perseus took two Rebel Privateers and a trading Vessel with a valuable Cargo, off the Coast, and brought them safe into Port.

On Friday 65 Sail of Vessels, under Convoy of the Diamond and Ambuscade, with the second Division of the Hessians, and 1000 Waldeckers, under the command of the Generals Kniphausen and Schmidtz, and a Number of Recruits for the British Troops, in all about 8000 effective Men, arrived off Sandy-Hook. They sailed from Plymouth Sound the 27th of last July. In the Fleet were several Victualers, and Vessels laden with Draught Horses for the Train, and Baggage of the Army.

The Unicorn Frigate, one of the swiftest sailing Ships in the Fleet parted Company off Nantucket Shoals, in chase of an American Vessel.[1]

The Falcon and Active Frigates, and other Ships, came in from the Southward, in the Course of last week.

ALEXANDER BROWN TO VICE ADMIRAL RICHARD LORD HOWE[1]

May it please Your Lordship,

Upon the thirtieth of July last, the Dinah Brig a Victualler whereof I was Master sailed from St Helens under the Convoy of His Majesty's Ship Perseus; the Brig sailed very heavy upon a Wind in so much She would scarcely steer keeping the Helm for the post part a Lee. I kept Company with the Fleet, until the sixteenth of August, when being far to Leeward, tho' could see the Man of War back & fill his Main-Top sail, & told twenty Sail of Ships to Windward; the Burstwick Brig, a Victualler being to Leeward tack'd and joined me. We made the proper Signal as Leewardmost Ships: Vizt the Main-top Sail clued up with a Jack at the Main-top-mast-Shrouds; the Signal continued out from three until four O'Clock P. M. of the same Day. We kept sight of some of the Fleet 'till dark, having our Starboard Tacks on board, the Wind NWBW, lying SWBW that same Night We lost Sight of the Fleet intirely. I kept Company with the Burstwick & steered to Westward inclining a little Southward as the Winds permitted, and endeavoured to keep to the Westward as much as possible to shorten the distance. Upon the 24th of August I parted from the Burstwick & joined Company again September the first, steering as before as the Winds favoured. Upon the 18th instant at 6 A M saw a strange Ship W N W from me, it being calm & great Sea from the Westward – upon 19th at 1 P M a Breese sprung up from the Southward, the Burstwick being some distance from me to the N W, I steered down to join Company, this Ship did the same. the Wind coming to the Westward, I fell to Leeward of the Burstwick & could not join her, this Ship steered for the Burstwick, I stood to the Northward from them, it was dark, cloudy & variable Weather. at 6 A.M. the Ship gave Chace to me, She appeared to be a Transport, I kept on as before, having the Wind at SWBW, at 9 Do they hailed me & run up along Side, having all Hands at Quarters with lighted Matches & Tompkins out, order'd me on board with my Papers. She mounted 14 Guns formerly 16 with eight Swivels about twenty hands or Men – She proved to be the Nancy of London fitted out by Messrs Muir; Son & Atkinson, sailed from Cork about Six Weeks, was taken Eight Days before,[2] the Master of the Privateer not being able to man both Vessels, sent me and Company on board the Burstwick & set Us at liberty. Upon the 22d instant We joined His Majesty's Ship Diamond & fleet & kept Company 'till our Arrival at this Port.

The above account is as exact and real as I am able to give. I am, with profound respect, Your Lordship's [&c.]

Gentlemen – Philadelphia, 21st October, 1776.

Your letter of the 7th inst. advising that the ships Congress and Montgomery were nearly ready for launching, was received. You will observe the above names are now to be given to those ships. We are, at this distance, at a loss to direct their destination. The marine committee have therefore wrote to the Convention for the State of New-York, now at the Fishkills, requesting that they would give you proper directions relative to the launching and otherwise disposing of those ships with their stores, so as to preserve them in the best manner you can from being destroyed. You are therefore to correspond with the said Convention for that purpose.

Capt. John Hodge: Philadelphia, 21st October, 1776.

Sir — I have received your letter of the 18th instant. In answer thereto relative to the ship Montgomery, we have lately wrote the Convention of the State of New-York leaving it to them to give direction in what manner to dispose of the ships at Poughkeepsie; they are now convened at the Fishkills. If they should find it practicable to get these ships out this year, Congress are disposed to have them fitted and manned with all expedition, but in this you must consult the Convention and superintendents. If there should be a probability of getting the ships out, you should furnish us with a list of such officers as yourself with the gentlemen of the Convention shall recommend.

You may apply to the Treasurer, Mr. Denning, to draw upon me here for what money you may be in want of for your present supplies on account of your sloop freight. I am sir, [&c.]

Last Sunday arrived at Saco a small prize schooner sent in by the Putnam Privateer, John Harmon Commander, having on board 300 bushels of salt and some oyl. Next day arrived another schooner, taken by the same privateer, having on board 375 quintals of green fish, and some oyl; she brings an account of another small vessel taken that is not yet arrived, and one that they took, which was afterwards drove ashore by a frigate. — The vessel lost, but the people got on board the privateer again; the frigate drove the privateer into a harbour, and came to anchor, with intention of keeping her in; but Capt. Harmon got one of his guns ashore on a point of land, and fired on the frigate, when she returned whole broadsides into the woods at them, but did no damage. Capt. Harmon after a few shot was so lucky as to cut away her fore-stay, which obliged her to come to sail, and put to sea.

Sir Boston 22d Octor 1776

I am happy in receiveing the dispatches from the secret Committe by this days post with directions how to conduct relative to the unfortunate Capt [William] Tokely & his New Master Capt [Elijah Freeman] Paine, with pleasure I acquaint you that after an interview with Mr [Samuel] Adams & Colll [William] Whipple concerning this affair, the same evening they left this Town — I saw Capt Tokely & Paine together, & heard what each had to offer — the latter is a man of great volubility, & realy offer'd such Arguments that I my self was not fully satisfied that the Fanny was not bound to London, he charg'd the Capt with the Crime of belonging to England, and that he was only mate of this same Brig some time ago imploy'd in being a victular to the fleet and Army, that the Brig sail'd very heavy, and that the Congress wou'd not have imploy'd a stranger to Command a heavy sailing vessell to go on such an Errand, the honest Capt never let me into the secret that he was not Master when this voyage was plann'd, which your letter inform'd me of — however Sir I was so well satisfied of the integrity of Capt. Tokely that I dispatch'd him to plimouth the 15th Inst after obtaining the mighty boon from Paine to suffer him to repair his vessell and furnish'd him with letters of credit for what he might need, I set out this afternoon for plimouth where Capt Paine happens to be fitting his privateer — I shall most strictly conform to your directions and hope my conduct may meet your approbation[2] — I am Sir with the greatest respects Yours & the Committees [&c.]

COMMODORE ESEK HOPKINS TO CAPTAIN JOHN PAUL JONES[1]

Sir Newport October 22nd 1776 –

You are directed to go onboard the Alfred and take the Command of her and go to Sea with her and the Hamden [Hampden] Captn [Hoysteed] Hacker, who will be directed to keep Company with you, and follow your directions – You will form such Signals, and appoint such Rendezvous, as you think will best answer the end of keeping Company –

You are to Take all british Vessels, and all Vessels bound to any port under the jurisdiction of the King of Great Britain, except Bermudas and New Providence – You are with the Force under your Command, to endeavour all in your power to destroy all the Coal Vessels you may find at, or near the Coal Mines at the Island of Cape Breton, and do all in your power to Relieve a number of our Unfortunate brethern who are Prisoners, and employed in that cruel and hard Service – When that is effected and the Weather will permit, you are to Cruise for Transports, and other Vessels bound to Canada, or go to Newfoundland and destroy as much of the Fishery as you possibly can; if you think the Season not too far advanced. And when you think the Season too Cold for that Station, you may Cruise as long as you well can for Transports bound from Great Britain to Newyork – You may Send any Vessels into Port for Tryal, that you may think are acting detrimental to the Interest of the American States Such Vessels as you may Take, which you think are not worth your while, or may not be Convenient to send into Port, You may destroy (first taking the hands out) –

My advice is when your Cruise is over, that you return in to some Port in New England in order for a Winters Expedition

You will send your Prizes in to such Ports in the United States of America as you judge you can get them in with most Safety – You may if you please send a proper Person in a Prize, if you should take any one fit for that purpose to some Port in France; and there to sell her and Cargo, and purchase some small Armed Vessel, and with the Overplus money Lade onboard her such Goods as may answer best, for the Supply of the Navy or Army; first ballasting her with Sulphur – You giving him Orders for that Purpose – I am with Respect [&c.]

[No.] 203 Crown Point 22nd October 1776

Sir In addition to the memorandums with which I have troubled you, to be communicated to His Majesty's Ministers; I must beg you will represent the necessity of sending out for this service, as early as possible, a Battalion consisting, at least, of three hundred seamen, it being to be wished that the expensive expedient, to which we have been obliged to have recourse this year, of detaining transports on account of their seamen, might be avoided in future, even if it should be in our power to use it; but as there may not be a number sufficient of those ships in the river to furnish us as before, we should in that case be at a loss to man our Vessels again, and it seems most probable that we shall have the same, if not a greater, occation for them next spring, At last it must be necessary to be provided against all which may happen. I find it impossible to remain here.

I wish you a very good Voyage and safe arrival in England, and hope nothing may prevent my having the pleasure of seeing you here again next Campaign. I am &c

[No.] 205 Crown Point 22nd October 1776

Sir I have already said so much to you upon the necessity of having a considerable number of seamen in readiness for the Lake Service, that I can now only repeat, for the reasons before alledged, my request that you will leave as many as possible in Canada; and that particularly the Frigates of which I wrote lately may remain, as they can furnish in the greatest proportion, and our wants will be as great the next campaign as they have been this, it being my intention, in order that our possession of the lake may be put to no hazard, to build another Vessel of equal force to the Inflexible.

Lieutenants Longcroft and Stone being now the only Gentlemen of the Navy, who have not received some mark of His Majesty's favour, for their services in Quebec during last winter and as they are both Officers, with whose merits you are, yourself, well acquainted, I must beg you will remind Lord Sandwich of them on your arrival in England.

JOURNAL OF THE NEW YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY[1]

Tuesday Morning,

[Fishkill] Octor. 22nd, 1776.

Capt. Samuel Tuder one of the superintendents of the Continental frigates building at Poughkeepsie, attending, informed the Committee that the said frigates were by the Honourable the Continental Congress, ordered to be launched as soon as possible, that one if not both of them will be ready to be launched in a few days, but that they are at present destitute of anchors and cables. Capt. Tuder therefore requests that he may be furnished with an order on the person at the landing at Fishkill, for the loan of such anchors, cables and other stores belonging to and taken out of the vessels sunk at Fort Washington, as may be necessarily required in the launching of the said frigates. Thereupon, Ordered, That the person who hath the charge of the anchors, cables and other stores at Fishkill landing, and which were taken from on board the vessels now sunk at Mount Washington, deliver to Capt. Samuel Tudor, or his order, such of the said anchors, cables or other stores as he may require for the use of the Continental frigates building at Poughkeepsie.

Resolved, That Mr. Gilbert Livingston be one of the secret committee directed to be sent down with the utmost despatch to Fort Montgomery, with such parts of the chain as is fixed in the logs, and that Mr. Henry Wisner, Junr. cooperate with him in carrying this measure into execution in the most safe and expeditious manner possible.

Capt. Saml Tudor, one of the superintendents of the building the Continental frigates at Poughkeepsie, informed the Committee of Safety that the said superintendents have lately received a raft of timber for which they are indebted, and daily expect some other rafts of timber for which they are to pay ready money. That the said superintendents have also some other accounts to discharge, are at present destitute of money, and cannot obtain a supply from the Treasurer of the marine committee

Mr. Tudor therefore on behalf of the said superintendents, requested an advance or a loan of £600.

Ordered, That the Treasurer of this State advance to Capt. Samuel Tudor as one of the superintendents, on his receipt, the sum of £600, and charge the same to Continental account.

Resolved, That the Commissioners going to the Court of France be directed to procure from that Court, at the expence of these United States, either by purchase or loan, eight line of battle ships of 74 and 64 guns, well manned, and fitted in every respect for service; That as these ships may be useful in proportion to the quickness with which they reach North America, the Commissioners be directed to expedite this negotiation with all possible diligence.

The Secret Committee reported, that the cargo lately imported into Portsmouth, in the brig Marquis of Kildare, Captain Palmer, consists of the following articles, viz. 5,000 lb of powder, 250 small arms, 100,000 flints, 4,000 yards of small canvass, 4 to 500 jackcoats, 100 knapsacks, 100 leggins, 80 large rugs, 2 bales of woollens, 1 bale of linens, and 10 tons of lead; Whereupon,

Resolved, That the powder, 100 small arms, 2,000 flints, part of the canvass, 80 rugs, and part of the lead, be applied by the continental agent for the use of the continental frigate Raleigh:

That 60,000 flints be sent to General Washington:

That 38,000 flints, 150 small arms, 100 knapsacks, 100 leggins, and 8 tons of lead, be sent to the northern army, under Generals Schuyler and Gates:

That the remainder of the small canvass be made into tents, and sent to the northern army:

That the jackets, if fit for soldiers, be sent to the northern army; if fit for sailors, to be distributed amongst the continental frigates at Portsmouth and Boston:

That two bales of woollens be made up into soldier's cloaths, for the northern army:

That the bale of linens, if fit for soldiers' shirts, or other purposes, for the army, to be made up, and sent to the northern army; if not suitable for public use, to be sold to the best advantage.

Mr. [Thomas] Jefferson having informed Congress that the state of his family will not permit him to accept the honour of going as their Commissioner to France, thereupon,

Resolved, That another be elected in his room.

The ballots being taken,

Arthur Lee Esqr was elected.

Resolved, That the Committee of Secret Correspondence be directed to acquaint him of his appointment, and that his powers and instructions are lodged in Paris. This to be kept secret.

Journal of the Maryland Convention[1]

[Annapolis] Tuesday, October 22, 1776.

A petition from William Richardson,[2] setting forth, that he, at the time of the alarming appearance of a hostile fleet under the direction of lord Dunmore, on the thirteenth of July last, observed a sloop drifting towards the shore within about a mile and a half of his dwelling house, and a barge from the fleet rowing towards her, which soon scuttled the said sloop; that he went off with his own negroes, intending to board her and save every thing on board the said sloop he possibly could; that he accordingly saved and brought away a mainsail, topsail, and gib, a quantity of old iron, thirty-six pair of iron hinges, and fifty-three cow hides; and that all the said articles were sent for and taken away by captain Uriah Forrest; and praying to be authorized to receive a moiety of the said articles procured by him as aforesaid, was read and ordered to lie on the table.

(Copy) Isis off Quebec 23d Octr 1776

Sir In addition to my Letter of the 21st I acquaint you, that I am exerting myself to the utmost in order to get the remaining Transports out of the River, the moment their Men (without whose generous Services, the expedition could not have been carried on) are returned to them, from the Lake; Pilots both here and at Sorel, being kept in readiness for that purpose. Had not the destruction of the Rebel fleet, been so nearly effected, the Triton and Garland must at General Carleton's desire have wintered here, but as matters now happily stand, I hope the former may get away; and the endeavours shall be made to hasten most of her Men down, from Lake Champlain for that purpose — The latter must winter at Quebec at all events with a view to the Service of next Spring, and moreover to take care of the people the other Ships must unavoidably leave behind, on the Lake for the completion of the little, that yet remains to be done. This His Majesty's Ship under my Command being 14 Guns short of her number Vizt Ten 12 and four 6 pounders, short of Stores, having spared of every kind to promote the expedition in question; having her Bottom injured by her passage thro' the Ice, possibly more than we are aware of; but above all the best of her Seamen on the Lake, whose return to her in due time to leave this River where it is impossible for her to Winter is doubtful and moreover having no directions how to act in that respect from our Commander in Chief, I find myself impelled to run her home — which I the less regret, as it affords me the means of providing General Burgoyne with a good conveyance – so soon as it appeared that the important undertaking of destroying the Rebel Fleet on Lake Champlain could not be carried into Execution without the Seamen from the Transports — I, at General Carleton's desire ordered Lieutenant [John] Schank, commanding the Canceaux, to enter as Supernumeraries for Wages and Victuals, on the books of that armed Ship, to the number of 300 Seamen to be discharged by or before the 30th of next Month excepting such of them, as from wounds or disease, should be disabled, in thus Willingly & generously thus exposing themselves in their Country's cause, who are to be treated according to the usage of the Royal Navy in all respects. I am &c

GOVERNOR JONATHAN TRUMBULL TO GOVERNOR NICHOLAS COOKE[1]

Sir New Haven October 23d 1776 —

You will find inclosed Copy of Letter from General —— Gates, from Genl Arnold respecting the Transactions at the Northward, I am further advised that after the Action of the 12th, which General Arnold describes, the Fleet under his Command began to fall down the Lake but had not got far from Schuylers Island when a Northerly Gale favourable to the Enemy pushed them up with our Shattered Fleet, and obliged them to commence a second Engagement which was continued with great Disadvantage on our Side — tho' with great Spirit and Bravery for 5 Glasses, when the Superiour Strength of the Enemy prevailed to the almost total Ruin of our Fleet; — General Arnold in the Congress Galley fought till he could stand no longer, run her on shore, burnt her & escaped — General Waterbury fought the Washington till she was Sinking under him, he was obliged to strike and was made a Prisoner, tho it seems he is returned to Ticonderoga, probably on his Parole, and is expected here soon, Colo Wigglesworth in the Trumbull is got to Ty — and is the only Galley saved, one Galley, not compleated, is safe, our strenght on the Water now Remaining is one Sloop, 12 Guns, Two Schooners, 8 Guns each, Two Galleys & one Gundola — what it was before these Rencounters the inclosed Copy of a Return will shew. – The Enemies Strenght appears larger than at first, it is as follows —

1 Ship		18	12 pounders
1 Schooner		14	6 Ditto
1 Do		12	Do Do
1 Redeaux	6	24	all Brass
	4 — 8 Inch Howitzes

28 Gondolas — 1 Gun each — 12 — 18 — & 24 Pounders, 1, 8 Inch Howitzer. Our People are all Retired to Ticonderoga, where it is their Design, it is said, to force the Enemy to make an Attack on our Works at the French Lines by the Crown Point Road by obliging them to Land below our Army, that they will lay our two remaining Galleys in the Channel, where their Fire will cooperate with the Jersey Redoubt, and the Battery on Mount Independance by this means they hope to prevent their passing higher up than our advanced posts. — I hope for a more full and particular Account from General Waterbury who is soon expected here. —

Colo [William] Richmond came to this Town by Land yesterday, and Waits here for his Regiment to come in the Whale boats, which are hourly expected —

Mr Hazzard will communicate his knowledge from General Washington's Head Quarters — which is the fullest that I have — I am with Esteem and Regard Sir [&c.]

VICE ADMIRAL RICHARD LORD HOWE TO PHILIP STEPHENS[1]

Number 10. Eagle Off New York
Sir, October the 23d 1776.

I take the Opportunity of writing by a Victualling Transport returning to Cork in the Service of the Army, to give their Lordships the earliest Intelligence of the Arrival of the second Division of the Hessian Troops with the Diamond, Ambuscade, and Unicorn, the 18th Instant: Captain [Charles] Fielding having conducted the Transports under his Convoy with so much Prudence and Success as not to have lost a single Ship on the Passage.

The Commanders of the Daphne and Perseus have not been equally happy in their Endeavors. The first arrived on the 3d and the latter on the 16th of this Month. Of the Transports which sailed with the Daphne, the Henry and Ann is still missing; As are also the four Victuallers, the Hayfield, St George, Friendship and George, that came out under the care of the Perseus.[2] The Dinah Victualler, another of the same Convoy, hath been taken as represented in the Relation of the Master enclosed. But no Account has yet been received of the other Victuallers since their Separation.[3] A Copy of the Report has been sent to Captain Elphinstone for his Observations thereon. These I shall have to transmit for their Lordships Information, when he returns from the Cruising Service on which he is now employed.

The different Corps of Troops from the Transports beforementioned, have been landed; The last of the Hessian Reinforcement to-day; at Myers Neck, a Peninsula near New Rochelle, that is deemed the best situated Post for preserving an open Communication with the Fleet, since the last Landing and Movement of the Army to the Eastward of the Rebel Forces assembled on the Side of Kingsbridge, on the 18th Instant.

As from the Nature of the Conveyance it is un[certain] when this Letter may be received, I have confined [my] present Report to the Arrival of the Convoys. I am Sir [&c.]

[New York] 23rd Octr – Some of the Captains of The Navy who attended for the Regulating of the boats and vessels when they went through Hellgate with the Army the Morning of the 12th Instant, have since declared that it was a most hazardous enterprize to go through a Channel of that dangerous nature with such a fleet, and before it was daylight. What made it still more dangerous was, that an unexpected fog came on early in the morning, which prevented them in a great degree, from seeing the boat and buoys which had been previously fixed to mark the proper channel. It was too late when the fog came on to postpone the movement; the troops and everything necessary were embarked and the wind and tide answered exactly; therefore notwithstanding the hazard it could not be delayed. I dare say at the moment the Army began to move the General and Admiral would have compounded for the loss of one or two hundred men. Fortune however favored the bold: – only one boat, having on board an officer and 25 Artillery men and 3 6 prs was sunk. All but 4 men and the guns were saved, which was more than could have been expected. Everything else got safe through that dangerous passage, where at all times, except at high & low water, the tide runs with the utmost rapidity, forming dreadful whirlpools, and at half tide roaring over the masses of Rocks which project into, or rear up their broken heads in the middle of the Channel. In one place if the Stream catches a boat or vessel, it is drawn into a kind of whirlpool or Eddy, where it is carried round several times with great violence, and then if not sucked in, is thrown on the adjacent rocks, and dashed to pieces. One boat with a Detachment of Grenadiers was caught into this place, and after some turns round was thrown upon the shore, but fortunately the men got out safe, and soon after got into another boat and followed the Army. This passage is thought extremely dangerous by those who are best acquainted with it, and who take every advantage of winds, tides, and other circumstances. When I was formerly quartered at New York, I frequently went out as far as Hellgate to see vessels go through, especially when there were any which carried topsails, and the Pilots were generally under much apprehension when they had such vessels under their charge. Those men were in the utmost astonishment to see Ships of War of 44 Guns, Frigates, Transports full of troops, Horses & Waggons, and flat boats with troops and artillery, attempting and accomplishing so difficult an undertaking, with such a trifling loss. To any other nation the obstacles would have seemed insurmountable.

Since the Army went through, I have frequently seen large transports go through Stern foremost, with all sails set and filled, the strength of the tide overcoming the power of the wind upon the sails. Some officers of the Navy say this is the safest way, as the ship has better and more certain Steerage.

Sir Philadelphia October 23d 1776

Since our last to you we are informed that the Galatea a New 20 Gun Ship with the Nautilus of 16 Guns are gone to Cruize of[f] the Capes of Virginia These ships you will endeavour to fall in with and take or destroy in your way to Cape Fear. We are also informed that the Raven of 20 Guns & the Sphynx of 16 – have quitted Georgia and South Carolina but where gone we know not. You may take with you to the Southward both the Rhode Island Frigates as well as the Cabbot if they are ready, and we write to North Carolina to have two fine Brigantines belonging to that State in readiness to join you, they have 16 Guns each and near 100 men. You had best send one of your Fleet into Occracock Inlet for them as they are in there – We understand the sloop Providence Capt Jones has put into Rhode Island, you may add him to your Fleet and then you'l be very Strong, As this Service to the Southward is of much publick importance, we expect from Your Zeal and Attachment to the Interest of the United States, that you proceed on and execute this Service with all possible vigor and despatch. Wishing you health and success we are Sir [&c.]

P. S. We are informed that two British ships of War passed the other day along the Jersey Shore, Steering Southward. We know not whether to Cruize off the mouth of Delaware or to join the Southern Ships. But we deem it highly proper that you provide yourself with a very quick Sailing tender commanded by a Spirited sensible and Skilful man to precede your Fleet and bring you intelligence of the number force and situation of the Enemy's Ships. It might not be amiss for you to remain a short time within the Capes of Virginia until the Tender should reconnoitre & inform you of the State of things at Cape Fear.[2]

CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE TO CAPTAINS JOHN MANLEY, HECTOR MCNEILL AND THOMAS THOMPSON[1]

We expect the Continental frigates Hancock, Boston and Raleigh under your respective commands, are either now ready for the Sea, or shortly will be so. You are hereby directed to act in concert and Cruize together, for the following purposes, and on the following Stations. Your first object must be to inform yourselves in the best manner possible, if any of the British men of war are Cruizing in the bay of Boston or off the Coast of Massachusets, and all such you are to endeavour with your utmost force to take, sink, or destroy. Having effected this service you are to proceed together towards Rhode Island, and there make prize of or destroy any of the enemies Ships of war that may be found Cruizing off the Harbour or Coast of Rhode Island.

The Prizes you make are to be sent into the nearest Port. When you arrive at Rhode Island if Commodore Hopkins should not be already sailed on his Southern expedition, and the two frigates built in that State should not be ready for the Sea, in that case you are to join Commodore Hopkins, and proceed with him on the said expedition producing those orders to him to justify the measure — But if the Rhode Island frigates should be ready for the sea there will be no occasion for you or either of you to go Southward. and you will then proceed taking with you any Continental Vessel that may be at Rhode Island and ready if Commodore Hopkins should be sailed before you come there, and proceed to Cruize against the enemies Ships & Vessels that may be found of[f] the Coast between the Harbour of Newport and the Banks of Newfoundland.

We have no doubt from your zeal and attachment to the cause of America, that you will execute this service with all possible dispatch and vigor, and so bid you heartily farewell. –

Pennsylvania Gazette, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1776

Philadelphia, October 23.

Intelligence received in Congress, October 21st, from the Middle and Northern Departments.

That on the 11th instant, at 8 o'clock in the morning, the enemy's fleet on Lake Champlain, consisting of one ship mounting 16 guns, one snow mounting the same number, one schooner of 14 guns, two of twelve, two sloops, a bomb ketch, and a large vessel, (her force unknown) with fifteen or twenty flat bottomed boats or gondolas, carrying one 12 or 18 pounder in their bows, appeared off Cumberland Head: General Arnold with his forces immediately prepared to receive them – At 11 o'clock the attack began, at half past 12 the engagement became general and very warm; some of the enemy's ships and all their gondolas beat up and rowed within musket shot of our fleet. They continued a very hot fire with round and grape shot till 5 o'clock when they thought proper to retire about six or seven hundred yards distance, and continued there until dark. Gen. Arnold and his troops conducted themselves during this action with great firmness and intrepidity, and made a better resistance than could have been expected against a force so greatly superior — the whole of our killed and wounded amounted to about 60. The Philadelphia gondola and a schooner were lost in the engagement, but all the men were saved. The enemy landed a large number of Indians on Schuyler's Island and on each shore, who kept up an incessant fire, but did little damage. The enemy had to appearance upwards of 1000 men in batteaus prepared for boarding.

The enemy's force being so greatly superior, it was determined in Council to remove to Crown Point, in order to refit and collect our force. At 2 o'clock, P.M. the 12th, our fleet weighed anchor, with a fresh breeze to the southward: the enemy's fleet at the same time got under way: Our gondolas [made] very little way ahead. — In the evening the wind moderated, and we made such progress, that at six o'clock next morning we were about 28 miles from Crown Point. The enemy's fleet was very little above Schuyler's Island, the wind breezed up to the southward, so that we gained very little by beating or rowing; at the same time the enemy took a fresh breeze from the N.E. and, by the time we had reached Split Rock, were along side of us. The Washington and the Congress were in the rear, the rest of our fleet were ahead, except two gondolas sunk at Schuyler's Island. — The Washington galley was in such a shattered condition, and had so many men killed and wounded, that she struck to the enemy after receiving a few broadsides. The Congress was then attacked by a ship mounting 12 eighteen pounders, a schooner of 14 sixes, and one of 12 sixes; two under her stern and one on her broadside, within musket shot: The enemy kept up an incessant fire about five glasses with round and grape shot, which was returned as briskly. The sails, rigging and hull of the Congress were shattered and torn in pieces; when, to prevent her falling into the enemy's hands, Gen. Arnold, who was on board, ran her ashore in a small creek ten miles from Crown Point, where after taking out her small arms she was set on fire, with 4 other gondolas; with whose crews the General reached Crown Point that evening, luckily escaping the savages, who way-laid the road in two hours after he had passed it. — Of our whole fleet we have saved two gallies, two schooners, one gondola, and one sloop.

Gen. Arnold behaved with such intrepidity, that he covered the retreat of the few vessels we saved at the expence of one third of his crew — Our commanders and men behaved most gallantly; some vessels having lost all their officers, fought notwithstanding, and refused to yield but with their lives. The enemy acknowledge our bravery, and confess their loss of men equal to ours.

Our troops are now busily employed in compleating the lines, redoubts, &c. at Crown Point, expecting the enemy to attack them with their fleet and army. But as the season is now far advanced, and our men are daily growing in health, they have the most flattering expectations of maintaining their post against any force the enemy can bring.

N.B. Two of the enemy's gondolas were sunk the first day by our fleet, and one blown up with 60 men.

A schooner, Captain [Alexander] Wilson, bound from Boston for Bourdeaux, was taken about five days after she sailed, by the Perseus man of war, of 20 guns, lately arrived from England; after taking out the master and mate, they put two midshipmen and four sailors on board, to navigate her to New-York, but she ran ashore last week near Sandy-Hook, and was taken possession of by our troops, who saved the cargoe, and it is thought the vessel may be got off. The midshipmen and sailors were made prisoners, and arrived here last Monday night.[1]

SIR GEORGE COLLIER TO CAPTAIN HENRY MOWAT, R. N.[1]

In consequence of Information that several vessels are expected to arrive in the different Ports of New England with Supplies for His Majestys Rebellious Subjects; You are therefore hereby required and directed to proceed immediately to Sea with His Majesty's Ship under your Command, and Cruize between Cape Cod and Monhagen in New England, using your utmost Endeavors to prevent their receiving those Supplies by Seizing the Ships or Vessels charged with them; You are to use every Attention to Protect the Trade of His Majesty's faithful Subjects, and to give them all the Assistance in your Power; to promote which the destruction of the Piratical Privateers of the Rebels is to be one of your principal Objects.

And As by the Capture of several of these Armed Pirates, your Number of Prisoners may become so large, as to be very inconvenient, you are at liberty in that case to send in a Flag of Truce to Marble Head, with a Letter addressed to Mr Nathl Tracey of Newberry Port (who is the Agent for the Exchange of Prisoners on the part of the Rebellious Inhabitants of Massachusetts Bay,) by a discreet Officer, and to demand an equal Exchange in Rank and Number of the Kings faithful Subjects who may at that time be Prisoners with the Rebels; but if there should not be so many then ready to Exchange, the Officer is to procure a written Promise from Mr Nathl Tracey to release an equal Number, if so many should ever fall into their Hands.

And as Lord Viscount Howe has signified a disinclination to distress the unarmed little Fishing Boats on the American Coast, as the doing so, has been the means of driving the Fishermen either, to enter for Privateers, or into the Rebel Army for a Subsistance; I would recommend to you to further his Lordships benevolent Intentions in respect of those People, when you find them, neither from Numbers or Arms, capable of molesting the Property of the faithful Subjects of the Crown.

You are to continue upon this Station so long as your Provisions may last, or 'till further Order, and then return to this Port.

Commodore Esek Hopkins to John Langdon[1]

Sir Newport October 24th 1776 –

Upon the Tryal of Samuel Erlom and Thomas Donehoe for Mutiny onboard the Ship Royal Exchange, it appeared that the Mutiny was encouraged or put on foot by the former Captn of her; in which he Employ'd his Steward to promise them twenty Guineas a Man, and half the Ship and Cargo when they should arrive in England – and on this Intelligence I think it will be right for you, at least to stop his private Adventure, 'till the matter is clear'd up —[2] Sir you are hereby Impowered to act as Agent for the Officers & People belonging to the American Fleet, for all Vessels that may come within your State – I am in behalf of the Officers and People Sir [&c.]

Gentlemen Newport October 24th. 1776 –

Since I wrote you last, Captn Jones in the Providence has arrived here with three Prizes, and one Ship is arrived at Bedford – Inclosed is a Copy of the account of his Cruise that he gave me – The Cabot has sent one Ship in to Providence and yesterday Lieutt [Thomas] Weaver of the Cabot came here from Bedford, where he arrived two days ago in another Prize Ship — he informs me that when he left the Cabot she had taken five Ships and a Brig all from Jamaica — one of them a three decker with upwards of Six-hundd hogsheads onboard –

The Alfred is now mann'd, and under Sailing Orders with the Hamden – Captn Jones of the Providence has the Command of her – Inclosed you have a Copy of the Orders I have given him, and hope they are such as will meet with your approbation – The Reason of my giving Orders to Captn Jones to attempt to destroy the Ships and their Works at the Coal Mines was, that I receiv'd certain Intelligence by a Master of a Vessel directly from there, that there was near twenty Vessels, and one hundred Prisoners employed in that Service; guarded by twenty six Soldiers, the Savage Sloop of War and [George] Dawsons Brig–[2] and one of them generally at Louisburgh – One of the new Ships came down from Providence yesterday, the other got aground, but I expect her down here the first fair Wind. They are nearly fitted every way for the Sea, all but Men, which they have about one hundd and fifty each – Shall now give my whole attention to their Manning –

If you have any particular Service for them, should be glad to receive it. I think they will be ready to Sail as soon as your Orders can reach here; and I hope near mann'd

The Columbus is Clean'd, taking her ballast onboard, Rigging and fitting as fast as possible – The Sloop Providence will haul in to the Wharf to morrow in order to clean Shall get them out as soon as possible, but expect to meet with great difficulty in getting Men – The Privateers being so plenty, and having great Success that the Men look on their Shears better than what they have in the Navy – I am with great Respect Gentlemen [&c.]

[Rivière Sable]

24 [October]. Lieut. Gen. Burgoyne sailed in the Washington prize for St Johns, from when[c]e he was to go by land for Quebec, where a frigate was ready to sail with him to England, as it was then determined the army was to return to winter in Canada, & make their appearance early the following season before Ticonderago, when every thing necessary for the reduction of that fort would be in greater readiness, & the season more favourable for our operations than so late in the year; during which time our fleet would be masters of the Lake, & the severity of the winter too great for them to build any vessels that could obstruct our movements early in the spring; even at that time the cold was very severe, & our tents but a small covering against it.

We hold you in Much esteem and flatter ourselves your Conduct in the Service will always be such as to merit the Continuance of it from Sir [&c.]

COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE TO CAPTAIN LAMBERT WICKES [1]

Sir: Philada October 24th 1776

The Honourable Congress having thought proper to Submit the Ship Reprisal under your command to our direction for the present voyage or Cruize. You are to be governed by the following orders.

The Honble Docter Franklin being appointed by Congress one of their Commissioners for negotiating some publick business at the Court of France. You are to receive him and his Suite on board the Reprisal as passengers whom it is your duty and we dare Say it will be your inclination to treat with the greatest respect and Attention and your best endeavours will not be wanting to make their time onboard the Ship perfectly agreeable. –

When they are on board you are to proceed with the utmost dilligence for the port of Nantes in France where they will land and there you will deliver their baggage &c. It is of more importance that you get Safe and Soon to France than any prizes are that you cou'd take, therefore you are not to delay time on this outward passage for the Sake of Cruizing, but if you are beset with Contrary Winds or during the passage be So circumstanced that Docter Franklin may approve of your Speaking any Vessels you see, do therein as he Shall direct

We understand the Secret Committee have put on board the Reprisal A quantity of Indigo this you must land at Nantes immediately on your arrival and deliver it to their order and they have directed their Agents to Supply you immediately with whatever refreshments or necessarys you may Stand in need of, We deem it Essential to the Success & Safety of your Ship that you Make a very Short Stay in the River of Nantes, it is equally so that you Keep totally Secret where you are bound from thence or what your business, these things premised we take it for granted your Stay will not exceed more than two or three days, and that you will rather dispose people to think you are returning back here again but you are directly to proceed on a Cruize against our Enemies, you have the Resolves of Congress by which you well know who they are, by them you will know what Ships you are authorized to make prize of and the Resolves of Congress must be the Rule of your Conduct. We think you had best proceed directly on the Coast of England up the Chann[el] before they can have any Notice of you, and we judge every day if not every hour you are there will give you opportunity of making prizes; you will Always have some of the French ports at hand either to Send in your prizes or to run into yourself if chased by Superiour force Docter Franklin will make application at the Court of France for the protection of Their ports to the Reprisal and her prizes and we hope he will be Successfull therein. However we propose as follows – Should you take one or two valuable prizes with woolen or Linen goods on board, or Such Cargoes as you know us to be in immediate want of, that you dispatch them immediately under the command of trusty officers and Men for this port. If you Meet other vessels partly loaden with Such goods that you take as many of them on board your own Ship as you conveniently can, and that you Send all the other prizes you take, immediately into Some of the ports of France with orders to apply at Dunkirk to Messrs. P. Stival & Son Merchants – at Havre-de-Grace to Mr. Andrew Limozin Mercht – at Bourdeaux to Messrs. Samuel & J Hans Delap Merchts – at Nantes to Messrs. Pliarne Penet & Co., at any other port to apply to the Commander thereof for protection untill he receives orders from his Court on the Subject, and with these orders will also come instructions from Dr. Franklin, Silas Deane, Esqr. and Dr. [Arthur] Lee or Some of them which he must obey, you may direct all the prize Masters to wait in port for your further orders provided the above Gentlemen write that they will be protected, but if that protection is not granted They must then apply to our Agents for Such Supplies as are Necessary, and push away immediately for this Continent making the first Safe port the[y] Can. We are Convinced you will treat all prisoners with humanity but we think you had best land them in France whenever they are too numerous on board your Ship to prevent giving alarms in England, for you may depend they will have Cruizers out after you Soon as the[y] hear of your being there — we expect therefore you will make but a Short Cruize, especially as every day Must inevitably throw plenty of English vessels in your Way, perhaps off Falmouth you might meet with a Lisbon Packet, and whatever Specie you collect take it onboard and carry it into France, where you may deliver or pay the Same to the order of Doctor Franklin Mr Deane &c. or to Mr. Thos Morris or his order as agent for the Secret Committee of Congress and the Congress will pay here yours and the peoples Shares of Such money, as well as their Shares of any prizes or parts of Prizes that may be Sold there and the Money applyed to publick use. when you are about to quit your Cruize it may be well to Send any prisoners you then have on Shore and make them believe you are coming direct for America, or going round into St. George's channell to Cruize for Bristol Ships just as you think may be most likely to gain Credit, clear your Ship of them and then Run into Bourdeaux, Brest or Nantes, just as may be most convenient. you will find letters from our Commissioners at Paris with Messrs. Delap at Bourdeaux – Messrs. Pliarne Penet & Co at Nantes or Some proper person at Brest, advising you [of] the success of their application and if they tell you the Prizes are to be protected, you can then write to the Prize Masters and either collect and bring them home under your Convoy or order them to proceed separately as you shall then judge best. If protection was not to be given, they will come away of Course, and in that case we think you Should put your Ship in good order, advise the Commissioners and Mr. Thomas Morris that you only wait for their despatches. If you have Room on board the Ship receive any goods Mr. Morris or they may order and when you have received their despatches make the best of your way back to this place or any other port of Safety in these States, bringing with you any prizes you can take by the way. Should the Court of France grant free protection for our Cruizers and prizes in their ports, we think you may do better in Europe than here, respecting which consult with and be governed by the advice of our Said Commissioners at the Court of Paris and if prizes are allowed to be sold there consign all you take to the order of Mr. Thomas Morris, who has correspondants in every port of France and will take care that Justice is done in the Management of them. Your Stay in Europe must depend on the advice of the Commissioners and your Cruizes Should always be quick as you can be soon in and out Keep your ship well Manned fitted and provided, and let Old England See how they like to have an active Enemy at their own Door, they have Sent Fire and Sword to ours. You Know we want Seamen here therefore encourage all you Meet with both at Sea and on Shore to enter our Service and Send or bring as many of them to these States as possible. You must by all opportunitys inform us of your proceedings, and communicate all the usefull or important intelligence that comes to your Knowledge. A Spirited active conduct in this enterprize will recommend you to all America, and you have our best wishes for your Success and honor, being very Sincerely, Sir, [&c.]

The Congress having Committed to our charge and Management their Ship-of-War Called the Reprisal commanded by Lambert Wickes Esq. carrying 16 Six Pounders and about one hundred and twenty men — we have allotted her to carry Doctor Franklin to France and directed Captain Wickes to proceed to the Port of Nantes where the Doctor will land and from thence proceed to Paris, and he will either Carry with him or Send forward this letter by express as to him may then appear best. The Reprisal is a fast Sailing Ship and Capt Wickes has already done honor in Action to the American Flagg, we have therefore ordered him to land at Nantes some Indigo he has onboard, take in refreshments, Stores, provisions, or other Necessarys he May want and immediately to proceed on a Cruize against our Enemies, and we think he will not be long before he Meets with a Sufficient Number of Prizes – we have directed him to Send them into such of the French ports as are most convenient addressing them at Dunkirk to Messrs P Stival & Son, at Havre De Grace to Mr. Andrew Lomozin, at Bourdeaux to Messrs. Samuel & J H[ans] Delap, at Nantes to Messrs. Pliarne Penet & Co. and at any other ports in France to Such persons as you may appoint to receive them, when he finishes his Cruize he will call in at Nantes, Bourdeaux or Brest for your orders and advices which we beg you will have ready for him lodged at those places. In consequence of this plan for the Reprisals Cruize we desire you to make immediate application to the Court of France to grant the protection of their ports to American Men of War and their prizes, Shew them that British Men of War under Sanction of an Act of Parliament are daily capturing American Ships and Cargoes, Show them the Resolves of Congress for Making Reprisals on British and West India property, and that our Continental Men of War and Numerous private Ships of War are most successfully employed in executing those resolutions of the Congress, Shew them the Justice and equity of this proceeding and Surely they cannot, they will not refuse the protection of their ports to American Ships of war, Privateers and their Prizes. If your application on this head is crowned with Success, try an other which it is their Interest to grant, that is to obtain leave to make Sale of those prizes and their Cargoes or any part thereof that may be Suitable for that Country. If you Succeed in this also you must appoint some person to act as judge of the Admiralty, who Should give the Bond prescribed for those Judges to determine in all Casses agreeable to the Rules and Regulations of Congress, and for this purpose we will report to Congress some Resolves vesting you with Authority to make Such appointment and authorizing Such judge to condemn without a Jury as required here. If these Resolves are agreed to by Congress they Shall be immediately transmitted to you. if they are not that plan must drop and the prizes must all proceed for America for condemnation You Can in the mean time consult the Ministry whether they will permit such Courts in France and in the French West-India Islands. If protection is granted to our Cruizers and their prizes you will immediately procure proper orders to be sent to the officers of All their ports on this Subject, and write yourselves to those Houses we have named at the Several ports that the prizes are to remain for Capt Wickes further Orders, also lodge Such orders with proper persons at the other ports in France. On the Contrary if the Prizes are not to be protected in their ports then give immediate notice to all these Houses and proper persons at the other ports, to furnish the Prizes that Captain Wickes of the Reprisal may send into their port with any necessarys the prize Master may judge the[y] Stand in Need of, and to order him to make the best of his way with the Prize to the first Safe port he can make in the United States of America, lodge advice also for Capt Wickes at Bourdeaux, Brest & Nantes, whether his prizes are to be protected in port or not, and whether or not any Sales will be permitted. If they are protected he can take his own time to Collect and bring them home under his own Convoy. If any Sale is permitted he can Sell all perishable Commodities and Vessels unfit for So long a Voyage as to this Coast. If no protection for prizes they will come away by your Orders and Need not Stay for his, and If they deny protection to our Cruizers themselves, he will only remain inport for your advices, and to obtain Such Supplies as may be Necessary. We have recommended Captain Wickes to take on board his own Ship as many valuable Commodities as he can if he is Successful, but Should he be unsuccessfull in Cruizing then Messrs Pliarne Penet & Co. may put Some goods on board when he is coming away. You will readily see the tendancy these measures have, and as their consequences may be very important, So we hope your attention to them will be immediate and constant whilst necessary. Captain Wickes is a worthy Man and as such we recommend him Should he have the Misfortune to be taken or meet with any other misfortune we hope you will adopt measures for his relief. He will treat prisoners with humanity, and we are convinced his conduct will do honour to his appointment. We have the honour to be Gentlemen [&c.]

[Extract]

I will repeat to you what I wrote – The Sum of which was that I had anticipated the Scheme of Trade which you mentioned and had actually embarked in an Adventure by purchasing a large Sloop before I reced your Letter. If ever I am in favor with fortune it will be thro' the Interposition of Friends – I have been happy enough to find those who were disposed to serve me in many Instances – In the present, I have been so fortunate as to find that Disposition to befriend me not baulked by the want of Ability – By the first Week in December I hope to have the pleasure of offering you the Refusal of 3000 Bushells of Salt besides some other trifling Articles. I shall then have some proposals to make with Respect to that Article, Rum, Sugar & dry Goods, that I hope will not be deemed disadvantageous to you.

My best Wishes attend Mrs Page and the little Rogues – I anticipate very much the Happiness of seeing them again. Mrs Pollard's (Bedford)

Compliments to you all — I have a Letter from her for Mrs Page which I will deliver with my own Hands if I do not dine on board the British Fleet before Christmas — But, begging Lord Howe's pardon, I had rather dine in any Man's Kitchen in Virginia on that Day, than on the greatest Delicacies I might have the honor of tasting at his Lordship's Table on board the Eagle.

CONTINENTAL MARINE COMMITTEE TO GOVERNOR JONATHAN TRUMBULL[1]

Sir Philadelphia 25th Octor 1776

The Marine Committee being desirous to get the Continental Frigates to Sea, quickly as possible, request the favor of you, to provide Sixty four Cannon for the use of the Frigate building in New Hampshire, and one of those in the Massachusetts Bay — Fifty two of these Cannon to carry 12 pounds Shot, and 12 of them to carry four pounds Shot — The proof that Congress has already contracted for the Public Cannon to undergo, is, for the first proof, a weight of powder equal to the weight of one shot; on which charge, two shot and three wads — The second proof is, powder equal to two thirds of the weight of one shot, with the same shot and wads as in the first — We wish Sir, that the above mentioned Cannon may undergo similar proof —

Should the Ship building in Connecticut, not be in equal forwardness with the New Hampshire Frigate, we should be well pleased, if the latter were immediately furnished with the Guns that are already provided for the former; adding thereto as many as will make the number of twenty six 12, and six 4 pounders — The Connecticut Frigate may be furnished, we hope, in due time; from the Guns above desired to be provided for the New Hampshire Frigate —

Your well known zeal in the Common Cause gives us perfect confidence that you will do herein what will most contribute to promote and expedite the public service — We are with great esteem Sir [&c.]

"Extract of a Letter from the Secret Committee to Thomas Morris, dated October 25, 1776."[1]

Sir: [Philadelphia, October 25, 1776]

You will receive herewith a copy of our letter of the 16th instant, whereby you are appointed our agent to superintend all our business in Europe. This goes by the Continental ship-of-war called the Reprisal, Lambert Weeks [Wickes], commander.

The value of this indigo is particularly intended to be lodged with your banker in Paris, for the use and subject to the order of Dr. Franklin, Silas Deane, and Arthur Lee, &c.

The Reprisal, Captain Weeks, will make but a short stay at Nantes, as she will immediately proceed on a cruise, and if fortunate, some of the prizes may probably be sent into some of the ports of France. The Commissioners will apply at Court for the liberty and protection of their ports. If this should be granted, it's probable that they may also permit the sale of prizes there, and in such case, the prizes, or such parts of their cargoes as are to be sold in France, will be put under your direction. You must take care that every thing is disposed of to the best advantage, apply the proceeds to the payments we have ordered you to make on account of the publick, and render us very exact accounts of what you credit us in this way, and a particular account of sales of each prize. Should Captain Weeks take any specie, he will pay it to you or the Commissioner, or to their or your order for the same purpose, and you must grant him receipts for the same, expressing that you receive it for the use of the United States of America, and that he is to be repaid by Congress.

[Extract] Camp at White plains Octobr 26th 1776 –

. . . should have wrote you before this had the Enemy continued in our Front at Hearlam, but a sudden manoeuver of theirs, has Occationd us a deal of Trouble, Fateigue, & expence, – The 12th several ships, sloops &c, pass'd Hellsgate and proceeded up the sound to Frogs point where they landed, we had Armies at that time a bove Kings Bridge sufficient to repell the Force then sent, but on the 14th a second Devision follow'd still larger when a reinforcement from our lines at Hearlam became Necessary. Genl Lee arrived just in time to have his hands full, after staying about half an hour at Head Quarters he went up to take the Commd of the Troops on that Quarter, – A few days after a Third Devision passed, and from that time, more or less every day, for several days together till it plainly appeared their intentions was to establish posts in our rear, and cut of[f] a retreat, They previous to this had sent ships up north river, which I at first thought was only intended to cut of[f] our Supplies by water from the back Country, but am now Convinced it was to Facilitate a junction a cross the Neck which at this place is a bout 16 Miles from North River to the sound, we have for these ten days been Constantly in Motion in order to keep the Flank and have now got so situated that they must come to our own ground to do any thing Desicive. . . .
[Endorsement by Page] There are some sentences in this Letter which I think are so much to the credit of G. Lee, Majr Green & Captn Thor[nton] that I think they ought to be published J: P –

My Lord, I am extreamly sorry my exceeding Illness will not permit me the Honor of paying my personal Respects to Your Lordship, I am therefore obliged to send the Lieutenant to wait on You. I beg Leave to acquaint your Lordship I left the Port of Georgia on the 1st Octr last, being reduced to two Weeks short Allowance, & that consisting only of Pork and Flour, & having no Prospect of a Supply; I purposed proceeding to St: Augustine, the same Day I left Georgia I spoke the Lively Capt [Thomas] Bishop and informed him of my having left the Port that Morning for Want of Provisions, he ordered me to follow him to St. Augustine,

Three Days after he supplied me with Three Weeks Provisions at whole Allowance, and ordered me back to my Station, and if I could not get into the Port again I was to cruize & make Tibie [Tybee] Lighthouse once in Twenty four Hours, until I was joined by him; and if any Accident prevented that, in the Course of about Fourteen Days, I was immediately to proceed to the Northward to join your Lordship, for You wanted every Ship on the Coast, and intended taking me to the Northward on his Return from St: Augustine: I got off Georgia Bar, the 11th instant at Six in the Evening, and came to an Anchor, it being too dark to see the Marks to go in; We heard two Guns at Tibie Lighthouse as an Alarm to the Town, a Place where We never saw a Rebel; At Day-Break I intended going in, but at two in the Morning a heavy Gale of Wind came on at NNE, and obliged me to put to Sea, it lasted violently for four Days; on the 15th I fell in with the Lively that had slipt from St. Augustine in the same Gale of Wind, and left Captain Bishop and his Boat's Crew behind; the Lieutenant informed me the Sphynx, Raven & Cherokee were to join your Lordship, and the Otter, Hinchinbrook and St. John Schooner were to remain at St: Augustine and St. Marys; Having but little Provisions & Water on board, that should I attempt to go into St. Augustine and drove to Leeward of the Port, I might be a great While beating up, as the Ship goes so ill, and perhaps obliged to bear up for the West Indies, which would be taking a Ship off the Coast; therefore I thought it best for His Majesty's Service [to] join your Lordship as soon as possible; I herewith inclose the State and Condition of the said Ship. I have the Honor to be My Lord [&c.]

Pennsylvania Salt Works, Tom's River, Oct'r 26th, 1776.

P. S. On Sunday last, the 20 Inst., at day Break, appeared at the mouth of our inlet, four large Frigates, endeavouring to get as close in as possible, which is not more than four miles from me, the[y] drew up in a line right abreast of me, hauled up their courses & laid their Topsails back, in which position the[y] continued till near twelve o'clock; I expected a viset from them, and believe nothing prevented it but its being a very low tide, the flats being very bare, and seeing upwards of thirty of us on the shore, made them afraid to send their boats in, otherwise I think they fully intended it, which had they done, we must have left it to their mercy for want of arms &c., to defend it.

William Whipple to John Langdon[1]

My Dear Sir, Philadelphia 26th Oct 1776

I arrived here the 24th: the [Marine] Committee have not met since my arrival but have mentioned your demand to some of the members, there is no doubt but I shall be in cash to honor your drafts whenever they appear. there is no prospect of cannon from this place, however, I have some hopes from another quarter viz: Connecticut – the circumstances are these – the cannon are made for the Trumbell [Trumbull] in that State and there is no prospect of her being provided with other necessaries – the Committee have wrote to Govr Trumbell [Jonathan Trumbull] to procure cannon for two ships and in the mean time to send those made for the Trumbell to you from the known disposition of that gentlemen to promote the public good I have great hopes you will be supplied from that quarter, orders are gone to Providence to supply you with canvass for a second suit of sails. I don't know but you'll have a wrangle on your hands with the Providence gentry however my boy I'll stand by you as long as I can – the ships here are not so forward as I expected to find them only three of them are launched. The rank of the Captains in the naval service was established before I arrived; I find [Thomas] Thompson is the 6th on the list – had I been here, I certainly would have had him higher – however considering the train after him, I think it pretty well – for want of time must refer you to Col [Josiah] Bartlett for news &c In haste as you see Your affectionate friend [&c.]

Governor Peter Chester to Lord George Germain [1]

(No 20) Pensacola 26th October 1776

. . . We also hear from the same authority[2] that the Rebels have fitted out two Vessels at Charles Town of 18 Guns each which are both put to Sea the one commanded by Clement Lampriere and the other by [Simon] Tufts. They are also fitting out a Vessel at Beaufort in South Carolina & one at Savannah in Georgia of the like force, & it is given out that they are ordered to cruize off Cape St Antonio to intercept any Vessels bound into the Gulph of Mexico and particularly those intended for this place or the River Mississippi laden with Goods & Provisions. I should not be surprized if the Rebels who must be in great distress for Blankets & Clothing should make an effort of this kind especially as their trading Vessels among the French Islands may learn the disposition of Admiral Gayton's Squadron at Jamaica & probably discover that there will be little danger to apprehend from them at Cape Antonio as those ships all cruize to Windward of Jamaica & they will have little to fear from the Ships on the Pensacola Station as We have only the Diligence Sloop of 14 Guns and an Armed Vessel in Lake Port Chartrain [Pontchartrain] for the protection of this Province. The Diligence has been chiefly out cruizing for some time past & is shortly to be relieved by an Armed Brig of ten Guns called the Badger which will be the only Vessel to protect the trade in the Gulph of Mexico.

Should the Rebels succeed in taking any of the Ships bound here, We shall be in a very disagreeable situation on account of Salt provisions for the Troops and will not be able to furnish the Indians with those supplies of Goods and Ammunition that We have promised them, and I am very apprehensive that a Misfortune of this kind might greatly tend to endanger the loss of their Affections.

We have an Account here written by a British Merchant residing at New Orleans to a Gentleman of this place acquainting him that there has a Boat arrived at Orleans which came down the River Mississippi with about 20 Men, that a Pennsylvanian of the Name of Gibson appears to have the Command of them & that they have been very civilly treated by the Governor of Louisiana I since hear from the Mississippi that in passing the Natchez they hoisted the Rebel Colours & that the Boat is returned up the River with a load of Ammunition bound it is imagined up the Ohio but the supposed Leader remains at New Orleans. I hourly expect a Vessel from thence with some People belonging to this Province and if the Report be true and the Spanish Governor has given them any Countenance I shall endeavor to gain the fullest information in my power relating thereto and shall forward the same to your Lordship by the first opportunity.

I have already mentioned to your Lordship that I think it my duty in this critical state of Affairs to communicate every Account relating to the proceedings of the Rebels that has the least Colour of truth, and I frequently lament that it is not in my power to forward more full and authentic Information; however whether this Account be true or not there is great Reason to apprehend if the Rebellion should continue another year that the River Mississippi will be the Channel through which the Rebels will receive very considerable supplies of Ammunition, unless We obtain strict Orders from the Court of Spain to prevent their Subjects from furnishing these Supplies and also keep a sufficient Military force upon the Mississippi to search all Boats whatever carrying Ammunition up the River.

"EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM FORT-LEE, OCTOBER 27, 1776." [1]

This morning about 7 o'clock two frigates moved up the North River,[2] and came to an anchor near Burdett's Ferry, apparently with an intention to stop the ferry-way, and cut off the communication between this place and Fort Washington. The enemy at the same time appeared on Harlem Plain, and Col. [Robert] Magaw, who commands on York Island, ordered the lines to be manned. The ships endeavoured to dislodge them by firing on their flanks, but they fired to very little purpose. The Barbette Battery on the high hill on the left of the Ferry opened on the frigates and fired a considerable time, without doing them any or but very little damage. Upon our ceasing to fire, a gun from Fort No. 1 on York Island began to play on them with great advantage and hulled the one highest up about 20 times. At this time two 18 pounders, which were ordered down this side the river opposite the ships, gave them so warm a salute that they hoisted all sail; the foremost cut her cables and appeared to be in the greatest confusion; she could make no way altho' towed by two boats, till the lower one perceiving her distress, sent two more barges to her assistance, who at length dragged her out of the reach of our fire. It is very probable that many of her men were killed, and she herself extremely damaged; but the weather was so hazy that it was impossible to see any thing distinctly at a distance. The enemy by this time had begun a smart fire on the island with field pieces and mortars; our men returned the compliment. They were out of their lines great part of the day. There were but few discharges of small arms. Our men killed about a dozen Hessians and brought them off. We had one man killed with a shell. This was the account at five o'clock, it is now seven, and firing has just ceased; but nothing extraordinary I believe has happened. We take this day's movement to be only a feint, or at any rate it is little honorable to the red-coats.

[On board H.M.S. Eagle, off New York]

27th [October]. – Early in the morning heard a cannonade up the North River. I went up to see what it was; found the Repulse and Pearl advanced, the former above and the latter in a line with the rebel lines. The rebels brought down one 18-pounder on the York, and three other guns on the Jersey shore. The ships could not fire with any execution at these guns; and as they had answered the intent of their moving up, that of flanking the enemy's lines and scouring the woods, and it now being high water, Captain [Henry] Davis thought it proper to drop the ships down to their former [NewYork] 27th Octr — The Repulse and Pearl Frigates went up the North River with the tide when the troops advanced, in order to flank the Enemy, but the fire from Forts Washington and Constitution obliged them to return to their former stations. Indeed as the Rebels did not abandon their works on their right, their going higher up would have answered no good purpose. The Rebels struck the Ships several times, but they did them no other damage than wounding one man on board the Repulse.

Intelligence Received by Vice Admiral James Young [1]

Sir, (Private)

Tho I have not the honor of being known to you I trust that this letter will not be considered either officious or intrusive To give an account of oneself is certainly awkward; nor would I attempt it on any except the present occasion, I must therefore beg leave to inform you that I left London the place of my residence last June & there had the honour of being known to several high in Office — Before I left England I took leave to mention to Lord George Germaine, that I was confident the Americans carried on Trade with the Danish Islands, & that I should endeavour to find out when here what Vessells had & were trading to those Islands, & that I would transmit any intelligence I might collect to such a quarter as I thought might produce good effects His Lordship did me the favor to approve of what I mentioned — I have brought an introduction (thro Lord Suffolk) to the Governor of the Danish Islands, and shall reside some Months in them to dispose of, or to put two Plantations I have at St Thomas on a better footing — These Circumstances I could wish to avoid mentioning, but I think every person is bound when he gives any intelligence to convey some Acct of himself — I must confess however that whatever intelligence I may give arises in some degree from interested motives, for I have property both real & personal on the continent, which I am persuaded cannot be beneficial to me unless Great Britain reduces the American insurgents to a proper obedience to its Legislative Authority — I hope that this will be presented to you by my Brother who belongs to the Regiment at Antigua; if not there he must be on duty in America —

It has given me pleasure to hear of the number of Captures made by His Majesty's Ships under your Command, but notwithstanding their vigilance several Vessells (generally small) have got in here. I have been but 16 days here, & six Schooners have arrived from the Provinces of North Carolina, Maryland, & Pennsylvania — As to what they bring it is of no consequence, but they all return with a few Articles (& those much wanted by the deluded people on the continent [)] such as Oznabrigs a little powder, Sugar & Rum — As to Powder it is fortunately very scarce, or they would not have met with so scanty a supply — Two days since one of the above Schooners (Packer Master) sailed for America, & amongst other Articles, did with some difficulty procure ten small Casks of Powder; but my astonishment was great to find such a Commerce countenanced by Government here — The Vessell went out under American Colours, saluted the Fort, & had the Complement returned the same as if She had been an English or a Danish Ship — I take it for granted that a similar conduct is observed in the Islands of St Thomas & St John belonging to the Crown of Denmark — This Island is now unquestionably well supplied with Provisions, so that the favourable reception of American Vessells cannot arise from necessity — Two of the six Vessels I have mentioned, are at West-end harbour, the other three at [East]-end, & will all sail in the course of a fortnight. — It is most probable that you have already received similar Accounts; if so, I have troubled you unnecessarily; I think however that I have discharged part of the duty a subject owes to Government: I shall therefore take leave to subscribe myself [(] without making any farther apology) with Respect, Sir [&c.]

[Unsigned]

I go over to St Thomas tomorrow where if I learn any thing shall take leave to trouble you again.

Lieutenant Colonel Henry Beekman Livingston to George Washington[1]

Sr/ New Haven. Octr 28th 1776.

After having with the greatest Impatience waited the Arrival of the Whale Boats and Vessels that were to have been employed in the Long Island Expedition I find myself at Length disappointed, Colonel [William] Mc: Intosh having Marched two of the Regiments that were allotted for the Purpose to Head Quarters so that the Original Plan must of Necessity fall through as the Force we have left is Inadequate to the under[ta]keing. Colonel [William] Richmond's Regiment has only Three Hundred Men, and my Detachment together with Part of Colonel Smith's Regiment that have joined me amount to about two Hundred — The Term of Inlistment for Colonel Richmond's Regiment will be elapsed in ten Days. However we will not be Quite Disappointed but will make an attempt to Disperse the Recruits inlisting for General How on Long Island If our Orders extended to burning the Hay Grain and whatsoever we conceived might be of advantage to the Enemy, I immagine we might Distress them a little But this Governour Trumbull will not Authorise Colonel Richmond (to whome he has given the Command) to Execute. . . . If the weather permits I fancy we shall be to morrow Night on Long Island tho I don't think under the Restrictions laid on us anything of Great Consequence Can be Atchieved. I should have waited Your Excellencies Orders at this Place had I not received Express ones from Governour Trumbull to repair to Long Island . . .

MEMORIAL OF ADAM BABCOCK TO THE GOVERNOR AND COUNCIL OF SAFETY OF CONNECTICUT[1]

The Memorial of Adam Babcock of New Haven in sd State humbly sheweth, — That Your Honrs Memo[riali]st hath suffered great and heavy losses by having a Brigt of upwards of 140 Tons and a Sloop of upwards of 100 Tons burthen, both fine Vessels, together with their Cargoes of Oyl captured by two British Men of War, in the West Indies the Summer passt, as they were returning home from the Coast of Brazill, being solely the Property of Your Memost whereby he is much injured in his Fortune, and being obstructed from carrying on Trade & Business as heretofore, for Reasons well known to Your Honours, and no way left of retrieving those losses but by Reprisals on the Trade of those People, who have thus Despoil'd him of a great part of his property — He therefore humbly prays Your Honours, to grant him leave to purchase at Your Honrs Furnace in Salisbury — Fourteen Cannon — (Vizt) Eight Six pounders and Six Four pounders, and also Twelve Swivel Guns for the purpose of arming and equiping a private Vessel of War, to cruise against the Enemies of the United States of America — And Your Memost as in duty bound shall ever pray —

Gentlemen –

Enclosed we send you an extract from a letter we have just received from the marine committee at Philadelphia. You will see by it we are referred to your Honourable House for directions and advice respecting the launching and securing of the frigates and their stores, which we desire to have as soon as possible. As unless you direct to the contrary, we shall launch the ship Montgomery on Monday [November 4], and the other as soon as possible afterwards. The custom of giving the carpenters a treat at launching, we suppose you would not mean to break through. The master carpenters judge 100 dollars for each ship on that occasion will be reasonable to allow. As we are directed to advise with you, beg your opinion in that matter. We are, gentlemen [&c.]

Augustin Lawrence, Samuel Tuder.

To the Hon. Pierre Van Cortlandt,
President of the Convention at Fishkill.

1. New York Provincial Congress, II, 337–38.
2. The Convention was not in session, and this letter was received by the Committee of Safety. The Committee minutes note: "A Letter from Messrs. Tudor & Lawrence, at Poughkeepsie, dated October 28th, informing when the Ships will be launched." Force, comp.,

American Archives, V, 3, 275. The Journal of the Committee of Safety, October 29, as printed in New York Provincial Congress, I, 692, dates the Tuder-Lawrence letter "Octor. 24th." This is believed to be a typographical error because of the short distance between Poughkeepsie and Fishkill. October 28, the date given by Force, would seem more realistic, and has been used.

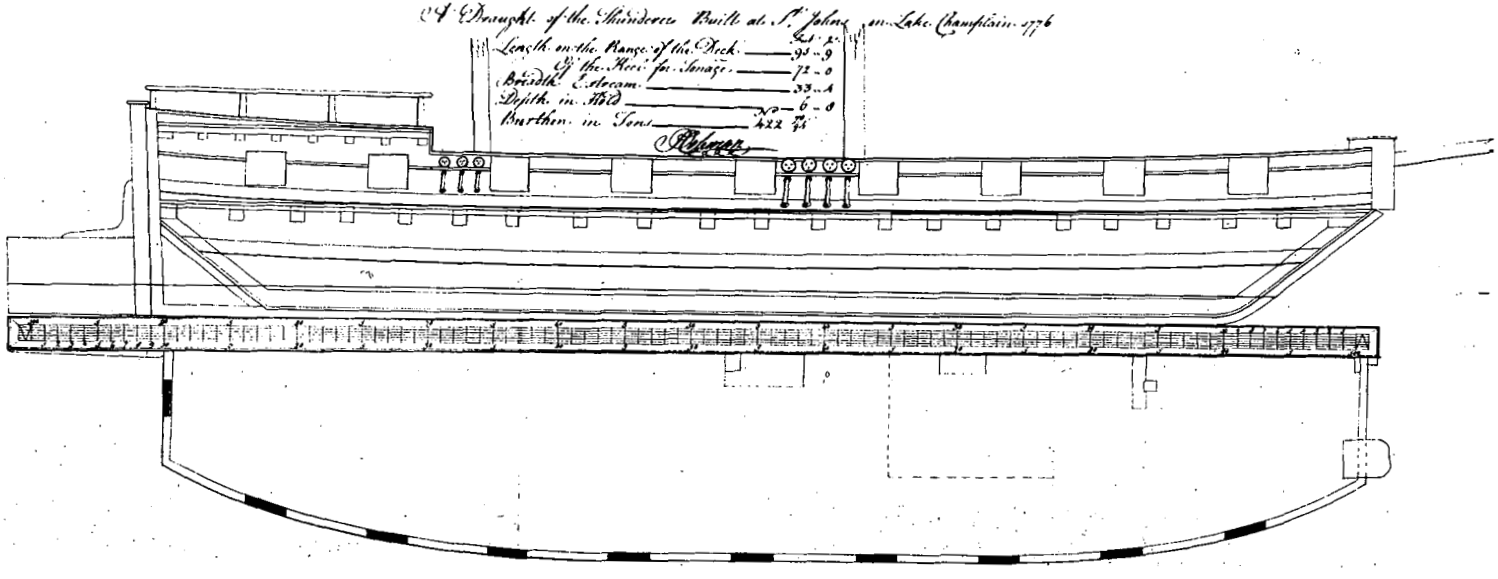
[Manor of Livingston] Monday 28 Octr 1776

I returned Yesterday from a Visit to Mrs [Margaret] Livingston . . . In this Journey I learnt that the British Fleet on the Lake consisted of

1 Ship of 18 – 12 lb
1 Schooner 14– 6 lb	Double fortified	Several double fortified 6 lb 4 – 8 Inch Hawitzers
1 Do. – 12 –6 lb
2 Gondolas 3–12 lb		28 Row Boats from 18 to 12 lb
1 Rideaux 6 – 24 lb	Brass	Several 8 Inch Hawitzers
1 Do. – 12 –12 lb	Brass

The American Fleet consisted of

1 Schooner of 12 – 6 lb	8 Gondolas 3 – 12 – to 4 lb
1 Do – 6 – 4 lb	1 Small Hospital Schooner
3 Row Galleys – 10 18 to 4 lb	1 Sloop – 10 to 4 lb



This List was given to me the 24t. on the Road by a Doctor Thompson of our Neighbourhood just come from Albany who had it from Mr. Walter Livingston, to whom it was furnished by General Waterbury a Prisoner in one of the Vessels lately vanquished and discharged by Govr. Carleton, who after very kind Usages dismissed all the Prisoners upon their Parole not to serve in the American Army till others were restored in their Places – The Prisoners report it as a Speech by Mr. Carlton's that he pitied them as deluded Subjects, but that if he took General Washington, Hancock, Adams and such Characters, he would send them to England to be executed as Traitors. – Whether the Tenderness is to wipe off the Odium of the Affair of the Cedars or in Consequence of Advice or Orders from General Howe is uncertain – Perhaps the Design is to win a Party in the Colonies to desert the Congress upon a Confidence that no others will be Sufferers on the Restoration of the old Governmt; and yet the last Accounts from below are that the Regulars have ravaged the Sea Coast from Frogs Neck to New Rochelle burn't many Houses & plundered the Effects of the Inhabitants –

On Monday Afternoon the Harriot Packet came into Harbour, after a Passage of six Weeks and five Days from Falmouth. She fell in with a Rebel Privateer in Long. 20, and maintained a very smart Engagement for a considerable Time, when the Captain of the Privateer thought proper to sheer off. The Harriot lost her Master and five Men, and had several others wounded. The Mate brought in the Packet without any further Molestation. The Mail on Board left London on the 27th of August.[1]

The Orpheus and Daphne Frigates are gone to sea.

The Ships of War and other Vessels, make near 500 Sail within the Harbour.

Friday being the Anniversary of his Majesty's Accession to the Throne, the Day was celebrated here with every Demonstration of Joy. The Flag Ships hoisted the Royal Standard; and all the Ships in the Harbour gave a Salute of twenty-one Guns each. So noble an Appearance, and so grand a Salute, was never known in this Port before. The two Admirals gave Entertainments, and many loyal Toasts were drank upon the Occasion.

In the Evening the Lark, of 32 Guns, Captain [Richard] Smith, with about twenty Sail of Ships under Convoy, arrived safe in the Harbour from England. Many Recruits were on board.

Dr Sir Eagle [New York] Oct. 28: 1776

The tenor of your letter of yesterday concerning the restraint upon the Landing of more provision & necessaries for the Army, is what I daily expected; And, in that apprehension, was obliged to postpone my request for your return to us, until it was determined by the movements of the Army, what further need there might be for your direction of the arrangements that would be requisite in consequence

It is to be suitably provided in the Naval Department that I must intreat your continuance in the troublesome Service you have hitherto directed, Hoping that your Release will now very soon take place. And I reckon you may daily Expect the Generals request for moving with your suite of Transports nearer to us, preparatory to their Return to this Anchorage.

The Fire in the North River was a[s] our Frigates moved up to co-operate in an advance of the Trops under Lord Percy towards the Enemy's Lines on York Island; But no material Injury was done by it.

When any of the Batteaux can be spared from the Army Services, the attendance of the Transports Men will be useful at their ships.

The ships of War you will of Course direct to attend you Westward as you approach near us, providing only for a stationed Convoy for the Coasting Traders supplying New York with Fuel &c; As far as to the ships off Huntingdon Bay. I am Dr Sir [&c.]

Howe

Captain Charles Fielding, R.N., to Philip Stephens [1]

Sir/ Diamond off New York Oct. 28th 1776

You will be pleas'd to inform their Lordships of my arrival at this place with the Convoy under my orders on the 19th instt and that on the 23d of Sepr the Unicorn chaced & brought to the Fleet the Bost-wick Brig, Alexr Anderson master, loaded with provisions! she had parted company from her Convoy the Perseus, had been taken by a Rebel Privateer, & releas'd they not having men sufficient to Navigate her, & another Vessel they had likewise taken. Also that the Unicorn chaced & took on the 30th of Septr the Wolfe Sloop Jams Freeman master, a Privateer belonging to Boston, with 10 Carriage, & 10 Swivel Guns, and ninety men; [2] both of whom I also brought in. Further you will represent to their Lordships the very bad conduct of John Coghlan Master of the Ship Lovely Mary belonging to Bristol, loaded with ordnance stores; he attempted to leave the Convoy on the night of the 20th of Augst but was fortunately cross'd upon, & brought back by the Unicorn in the morning, who had chaced ahead the day before, & was rejoining the Fleet; he had also broke the seal of his rendezvous; I put a careful midshipman with five men directly onboard him, and took two of his men out.

I cannot well express the trouble I had from the dullness & obstinacy of the Masters of the Dutch Transports, & the great delay from that, & the very heavy sailing of most of their ships; & I must conclude from the bad management of them in general, that the superintendants either had not power to exercise their Authority, or that they were extremely neglectful and inattentive; I must except Mr Blackstone in the Eiken Boom, who for the latter part of the Voyage particularly, kept his Ship in a very good station. Yours of Yesterday with copy of that to you from the marine committe at Philadelphia inclosed, came to hand. We advise you to proceed by all means to lanch the Frigates as soon as you can & then to proceed with the Vessels to the place most safe in Roundout Kill near Esopus Landing. We are sensible of the custom to give a treat to the workmen after lanching nor do we know that the sum of 100 Dollars for each is too much. We would recommend to you to have it properly considered, that you may not be blamed of Extravagance & we of giving a sanction thereto. We are obliged to you for your invitation to see the Lancing but whether any of the Members will be able to attend we know not. There are so few members present that few if any can be spared.

Dear Sir:

Your Express did not call Yesterday or I overlooked him in the Hurry of the Day. If I had seen him I should have informed you that the Cannonade you heard was at Mount Washington and not at this Place — Two Frigates came up and anchored alittle below the Forts to stop the Passage at Bourdet's Ferry, but one of them soon got such a Dose from a Battery of 2 18 Pounders that she was obliged to cut and run having received 26 Shot thro' her Hull. She was towed off by her own Boats and those of her Consort with Pumps constantly going[2] They at the same Time attacked our Lines at Harlem Heights but were repulsed. . . .

[On board H. M. S. Eagle, New York]
Tuesday 29th. October.

We had the Pleasure to hear this Morning, through the Channel of the Rebels themselves, that Genl Carleton had defeated their armed Vessels upon the Lakes, and taken many of them Prisoners; that he was landed at Crown Point, and was advancing towards Ticonderago. It appears likewise that many Indians were with him. There is no doubt, considering the Channel, but this is the Truth, though perhaps not the whole Truth.

In the Evening, Advice was received from Capt. [James] Ferguson of the Brune, that a large armed Flat Boat of the Rebels, full of men, had attempted to make an Incursion within our Lines last Night, that the Brune had fired upon them with great Guns & small Arms, and that this Morning the Brune's People took the Boat, which was greatly shattered, and its Bottom covered 2 full Inches with Blood. Above 60 Shot had passed through its Sides, and 'tis supposed they killed above 50 men. The Cries, Shrieks & Groans of the Rebels, some dying in the Boat, others drowning in the Water, were very shocking and dismal.

Honoured Sir Philadelphia Oct 29 1776

By my worthy Colleague Mr [John] Penn, I do myself the honour to transmit a resolution of the continental Congress which bears immediate relation to the State of North Carolina.[2] The Congress having been informed that the Armed vessels belonging to the Enemy have lately quitted the River of Cape fear, and have proceeded to the Northward, have bestowed their thoughts upon the practicability of fortifying that entrance into your state, and excluding the British Men of War. The importance of such a measure must weigh as powerfully with you as with them, & I am well assured that nothing will be wanting on your part to carry it into Execution with all possible dispatch. As this is the only Port in the State of North Carolina, into which the Enemies can introduce ships of any considerable force, should they be prevented here, we shall have nothing to fear from any forces which they may send against us in the ensuing Winter. The Harbour of Cape fear will furnish a secure receptacle for our own trading Vessels, and those of foreigners who from this Advantage may be induced to prefer ours to the ports of other states. The Privateers of the several states, as well as the Continental armed Vessels will carry any prizes which they make to the Southward into No Carolina when they are apprized of the protection which they and their Captures will receive, and by these means we shall be supplied with the many articles of which we now feel the most pressing necessity.

We are aware of the scarcity of heavy Cannon in your state & have therefore procured a recommendation to you to apply to South Carolina to aid you in that respect. We flatter ourselves that it may produce the effect we wish, as it will be nothing but a reciprocal Civility and what North Carolina is well entitled to for the ready and ample succour afforded to South Carolina when in imminent danger from its Enemies. Our own Guns small as they are may be made useful and I know not how more essentially. The Continental Troops will be employed in this service, & the Expence arising from the hire of negroes to perform the most laborious part of the operation will be considerable, but must appear contemptible when weighed against the publick emolument which will result from it.

You will observe that this is to be executed at the Expence of your own particular state, a recommendation of a similar kind went to South Carolina, in consequence of which they have erected great & very expensive fortifications at their own cost. It becomes Oeconomy in you to bear this Expence yourself, rather than by making it Continental, expose yourself to pay your proportion of the large fortifications which have been or may hereafter be erected in the Eastern States. Your proportion only of the Connecticut forts would amount to as much as the whole of these proposed for your colonial security — In this case therefore It will be political (at least for us) to suffer each state to bear its own burdens.

Should the Convention think it proper to apply to the Continent[al] Congress for the Assistance of an Engineer to execute this proposal, I shall upon being informed thereof immediately take the proper steps to procure one and send him on I am Sir With great Respect to yourself & the Convention [&c.]

Vice Admiral James Young to Philip Stephens[1]

Sir, Antigua 29th October 1776.

Please to acquaint my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty; that pursuant to their Directions of the 20th February last: I have this day Ordered Captain John Chapman, to proceed to the Island of St Christophers, with His Majesty's Sloop Shark, under his Command, to Convoy the Homeward bound Trade from these Islands; from whence he is to Sail the 4th November, with such Merchant Ships and Vessels as are then ready; And as it is said the American Armed Vessels Cruize between the Latitudes of 30° and 35° North, I have thought fit to Direct Captain Chapman to Convoy the Trade as far as the Latitude 38° North, lest they should be intercepted by the Rebels, which I flatter myself will meet with their Lordship's approbation.

The 30th September last, I informed their Lordships, by a Letter addressed to you, (Duplicate of which accompanys this;) that on the 6th and 7th of that month, a Violent Gale of Wind did considerable Damage among the Islands, particularly to the Shipping; and that I was apprehensive His Majesty's Sloop Pomona had met with some Disaster, as She was to have returned to English-harbour the 5th September. Since which, have not had any certain Intelligence concerning her;[2] I am therefore to desire you will be pleased to move their Lordships to send me some other Ship in her stead, as I am much afraid, if She is not gone away to Jamaica some sad Catastrophe has happened to her. — And the Governors and Inhabitants of some of the Islands, having Signified to me They were apprehensive, that from their Defenceless State they may be Visited and Insulted by the American Rebel's Armed Vessels, which these Seas are now much pestered with: I must again Request their Lordships will be pleased to Order a Considerable Re-inforcement to the Squadron on this Station, and thereby better enable me to protect His Majesty's Islands from any such Insult; for which purpose I am of opinion it is extreemly necessary that one Ship, at least, should be Stationed to Cruize off each of the British Islands, besides those employed to prevent the Rebels being Supplyed with Warlike Stores from the Foreign Islands: — A Service in which I greatly miss the Pomona, being the only fast Sailing Vessel of the Squadron.

The 19th Instant the Packet from England, that sailed in the month of August arrived at this Island; but contrary to my expectations, brought me no Public Dispatches; which I presume proceeds from some mistake.

Inclosed is the State and Condition of the Squadron under my Command, which you will be pleased to communicate to their Lordships. – I am sir [&c.]

NARRATIVE OF COLONEL ETHAN ALLEN[1]

[On board H.M.S. Lark, October 12 to October 30, 1776][2]

In a few days after this, the prisoners were ordered to go on board of a man of war, which was bound for New-York; but two of them were not able to go on board, and were left at Halifax; one died, and the other recovered. This was about the 12th of October, and soon after we had got on board, the captain sent for me in particular to come on the quarter deck. I went, not knowing that it was capt. [Richard] Smith, or his ship at that time, and expected to meet the same rigorous usage I had commonly met with, and prepared my mind accordingly; but when I came on deck, the captain met me with his hand, welcomed me to his ship, invited me to dine with him that day, and assured me that I should be treated as a gentleman, and that he had given orders, that I should be treated with respect by the ship's crew. This was so unexpected and sudden a transition, that it drew tears from my eyes, which all the ill usages I had before met with, was not able to produce, nor could I at first hardly speak, but soon recovered myself and expressed my gratitude for so unexpected a favor; and let him know that I felt anxiety of mind in reflecting that his situation and mine was such, that it was not probable that it would ever be in my power to return the favor. Capt Smith replied that he had no reward in view, but only treated me as a gentleman ought to be treated; he said this is a mutable world, and one gentleman never knows but it may be in his power to help another. Soon after I found this to be the same capt. Smith who took my part against gen. [Eyre] Massey; but he never mentioned any thing of it to me, and I thought it impolite in me to interrogate him, as to any disputes which might have arisen between him and the gen. on my account, as I was a prisoner, and that it was at his option to make free with me on that subject, if he pleased; and, if he did not, I might take it for granted that it would be unpleasing for me to query about it, though I had a strong propensity to converse with him on that subject.

I dined with the captain agreeable to his invitation, and oftentimes with the lieutenant, in the gun room, but in general ate and drank with my friend Lovel [James Lovell] and the other gentlemen, who were prisoners with me, where I also slept.

We had a little birth enclosed with canvas, between decks, where we enjoyed ourselves very well, in hopes of an exchange; besides, our friends at Halifax had a little notice of our departure, and supplied us with spirituous liquor, and many articles of provision for the coast. Capt. Burk [William Burke] having been taken prisoner, was added to our company, (he had commanded an American armed vessel)[3] and was generously treated by the captain and all the officers of the ship, as well as myself. We now had in all near thirty prisoners on board, and as we were sailing along the coast, if I recollect right, off Rhode-Island, capt. Burk, with an under officer of the ship, whose name I do not recollect, came to our little birth, proposed to kill capt. Smith and the principal officers of the frigate and take it; adding that there were thirty five thousand pounds sterling in the same, capt. Burk likewise averred that a strong party out of the ship's crew was in conspiracy, and urged me, and the gentleman that was with me, to use our influence with the private prisoners, to execute the design, and take the ship with the cash into one of our own ports.

Upon which I replied, that we had been too well used on board to murder the officers; that I could by no means reconcile it to my conscience, and that in fact it should not be done; and, while I was yet speaking, my friend Lovel confirmed what I had said, and farther pointed out the ungratefulness of such an act; that it did not fall short of murder, and in fine all the gentlemen in the birth opposed capt. Burk and his colleague: But they strenously urged that the conspiracy would be found out, and that it would cost them their lives, provided they did not execute their design. I then interposed spiritedly, and put an end to farther argument on the subject, and told them that they might depend upon it, upon my honor, that I would faithfully guard capt. Smith's life: If they should attempt the assault, I would assist him, for they desired me to remain neuter, and that the same honor that guarded capt. Smith's life, would also guard theirs; and it was agreed by those present not to reveal the conspiracy, to the intent that no man should be put to death, in consequence of what had been projected; and capt. Burk and his colleague went to stifle the matter among their associates. I could not help calling to mind what capt. Smith said to me, when I first came on board; "This is a mutable world, and one gentleman never knows but that it may be in his power to help another." Captain Smith and his officers still behaved with their usual courtesy, and I never heard any more of the conspiracy.

We arrived before New York, and cast anchor the latter part of October[4] where we remained several days, and where capt. Smith informed me, that he had recommended me to adm. Howe and gen. sir Wm. Howe, as a gentleman of honor and veracity, and desired that I might be treated as such. Capt. Burk was then ordered on board a prison-ship in the harbor.

SALEM COMMITTEE TO THE MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL[1]

The Committee of Correspondence, Inspection & Safety of the town of Salem, humbly shew —

That divers of the subjects of the king of Great Britain taken in vessels in his immediate service, & on board merchant vessels, are now resident in this town & in other maritime towns, that their numbers are daily increasing, as prizes are brought in, that the resolves of Congress respecting prisoners of war were passed before the declaration of independence, & determined such only to be prisoners as are taken in arms; that the crews of merchant vessels do now frequently oppose in arms their captors; — that hence arise doubts on the question — Who are prisoners of war? — that this town has not been assigned for the residence of such prisoners, & so this comtee have no authority to controul them; that in the maritime towns they have the earliest intelligence of the transactions of the Americans, — have opportunities of mixing in all companies and in some such towns of daily communicating with many persons, who tho' observant of the laws and the resolves of Congress, are yet justly liable to suspicion as being not well-wishers to America. For these reasons we pray your Honours that some steps may be immediately taken relative to the captives afore mentioned, that shall insure the public safety, & the safety & property of the maritime towns; for we beg leave to add, that we do not think it expedient that captives not disposed to enter on board our vessels of war or merchant vessels should be permitted to reside in such towns, since being compact they are exposed to destruction by fire, and their vessels & boats may easily be cut out of their harbours & run away with; some such instances have already happened; we wonder no more have occurred.

We find by an order of the honble Board, that capt. Leche of the light dragoons, & the chaplain, Mr Lewes, were to have been sent to Boxford, after the Sheriff had taken their parole; and the common dragoons were to have been delivered to the comtees in this county to be set to work:[2] but that order remains unexecuted in every part, and for that reason many people here are uneasy. They are also uneasy because John Consett Peers, lieut of the tender taken by capt. [John] Fisk, still remains in this town, altho' it is some time since he recovered of his wounds.[3] There is the greater reason for this uneasiness with regard to Leche, Lewes and Peers, because neither of them has given the parole ordered by Congress. We therefore pray your honours to give immediate orders relative to these prisoners as well as the former.

Gentlemen

Since my Arrival here in the Providence the 7th Current I have from a Variety of events been altogether Unable to give you any Satisfactory account and for that reason have defered Writing. I now inclose you copies of my letters down 'till the 30th Ulto & You have also inclosed a Short account of my whole Cruise and I have now to Inform you that on the 22d Currt I was directed by the Commr in Chief to take Command of an expidition with the Alfred and Hamden against the Cape Briton Coal-Fleet & Newfoundland Fishery. – had this expidition been begun a Month Sooner great things might have been done – my greatest hope now is that of relieving a number of our fellow Citizens who, being prisoners are compelled to Work in the Coal pits of Cape Briton – If I can Succeed in this I Shall think my pains well bestowed. – You may however rest assured that I will leave no part of any duty Unattempted that may at this Advanced Season and with my small Force appear practicable.

I have left with the Commr in Chief a Complete Muster Roll Comprehending every thing from the day I took Command of the Providence till the Day I left her. – I was ready to sail the 27th but Unfortunately the Hamden ran aground on a Sunken Ledge in the Harbour which knock'd off her False keel and She hath been so Leaky Since that we have concluded her unfit for Sea and have got the Providence ready to proceed in her room. – I hope to Sail to Morrow morning and am with great Esteem [&c.]

[Enclosure]

The American Sloop of War the Providence of Twelve Guns and Seventy Men Sailed from the Delaware the 21st of August 1776 She Cruized between the Latd of 39° and 33° No and went to the Eastward as far as the Longd of 50° West. – having taken three prizes, a whaler and two West Indiamen – and having had a Very narrow Escape from an English Frigate after a Chace of Six hours, part of the time within pistol Shot – on the 14th Septr she bent her Course for Nova-Scotia – and on the 20th had Another Affair with an English Frigate, and, in the course of an Eight hours Chace, Rediculed the Enemy and Answered his Broadside with only a Single Musquit. – altho' the Savage and Dawson's Brig[2] were within a few Leagues Distance, She, next day, went into Canso and took three English Schooners with a Scotch Tories Flag — and, the day following she took Five Sail of Jerseymen in Narrowshock and Four more in Peter de great — And it is remarkable, that tho' they were Ten in number to one of the Providence's Men, they were so Panic-struck that they not only gave up their Ships but even Assisted to Rig and carry them out of their Harbours. — the Providence then proceeded to the Westward — took another Whaler on St George's Bank, and on the 7th of October arrived safe at Rhode Island — having Manned and Sent in Eight Prizes Vizt Six Brigantines, one Ship, and one Sloop, – And Sunk, burnt and destroyed Eight more Vizt Six Schooners, one Ship, and one Brigantine — and finished her Cruize in Six Weeks and five Days.[3]

Alfred [Newport] 30th Octr 1776 —

I Did not conclude my letter 'till I was enabled to give you a Satisfactory Account of the Present Expedition. — I took command here the 22d and finding that we could not Man the Ship and two Vessels without Wasting too much time — I concluded to leave the Providence and Proceed with the Alfred and Hamden — I took the men out of the Providence and her Prizes which Made up my Muster Roll here to 140 or upwards but When I was ready to proceed on the 27th the Hamden was run upon a Sunken ledge which Knocked off her false Keel and she hath Since continued to make so much Water that we concluded her unfit for Sea and therefore have Shifted the men into the Providence. — I am once more in readiness and hope to take my leave of Rhode Island to Morrow Morning. — I am however duely sensible that the Expidition cannot but fall greatly Short of what I might have effected had I been inabled to Proceed a fortnight Sooner. — I hope the A. Doria will be included in the next expidition wherein I am concerned. – If Mr [Joseph] Hewes is in Philadelphia — I

It being necessary for His Majesty's service during the present Rebellion that all possible attention be paid to the navigation of the Lakes, I am commanded to acquaint you that it is the Commander in chiefs directions that you on no account suffer boats, those of Indians excepted, or vessels, to pass upon the Lakes without proper passports, under the hand of the Com-

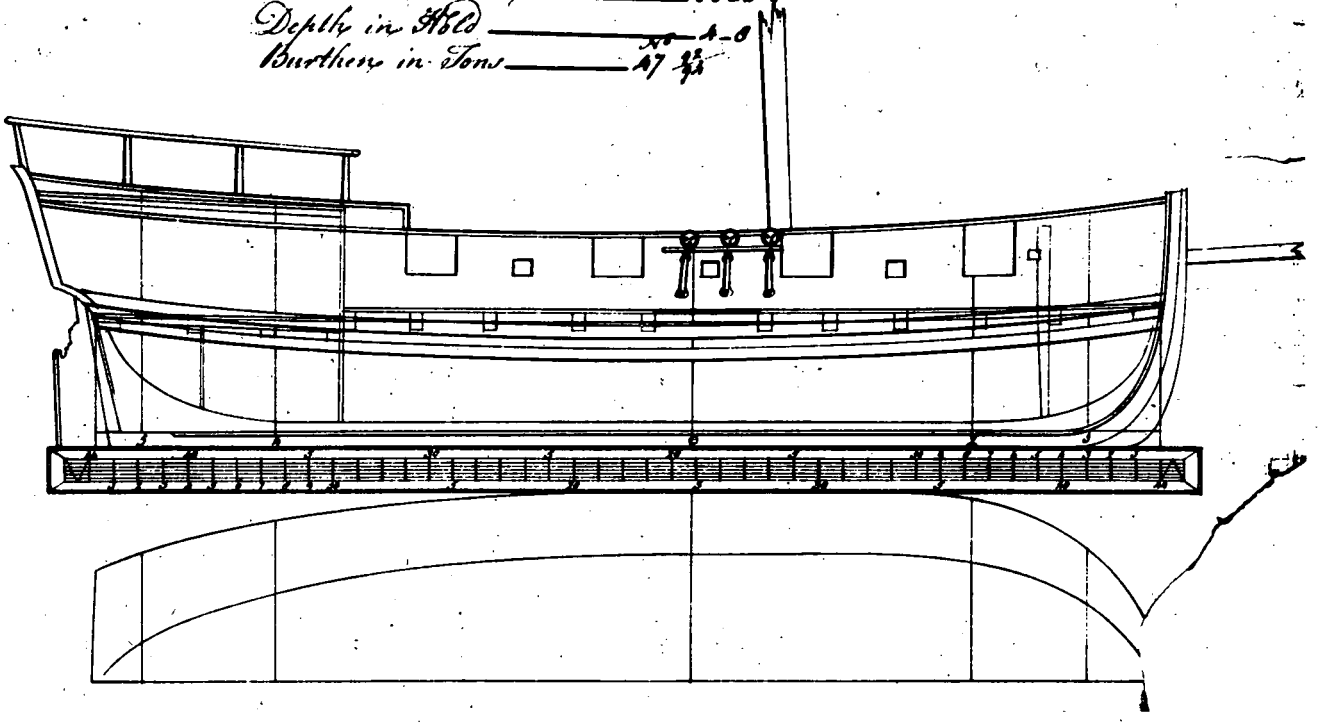
DR. EZRA GREEN TO NATHANIEL COOPER, DOVER, NEW HAMPSHIRE [1]



Dear Sir: Ticonderoga, Oct. 30, 1776.

I must beg your pardon for troubling you with so many of my letters, but I am a good deal at leisure, and so lucky an opportunity of conveyance offers, that I can't let it pass without sending you one line or two. Since my last, our Fleet is destroyed, of which I suppose you have heard, but 5 vessels remaining to us out of 16 sail. The engagement began on Friday morning, October 11th. and held out all day. They surrounded our Fleet, but in the night succeeding the engagement they very narrowly and fortunately made their escape and came up towards Crown Point, but were overtaken and attacked again Sunday morning, within about 25 miles of this place. Our men fought bravely, but the enemy were of so much greater force than we had any suspicion of that our little fleet stood no chance; most of the vessels lost were blown up, sunk, or burnt by our own people, they escaping by land. We lost, killed, about 50; taken prisoners, about 100, which are dismissed on parole. The Indians have done us no damage till very lately they waylaid three men, kill'd one, took the other two prisoners, who are sent back on parole. They were treated very kindly by the Indians as well as by the King's troops who were at the time at Crown Point within 15 miles of this place, where they have been ever since the destruction of our Fleet. We have lately been alarm'd several times. On Monday morning last, there was a proper alarm, occasioned by a number of the enemies boats which hove in sight, and a report from a scouting party that the Enemy were moving on; where the Fleet is now, I can't learn, or what is the reason they don't come on I can't conceive. 'Tis thought they are 10 or 12 thousand strong, including Canadians and Indians. We are in a much better situation now then we were fourteen days ago, and the militia are continually coming in. Our sick are recovering, and it is thought we are as ready for them now as ever we shall be. There has been a vast deal of work done since the fight, and we think ourselves in so good a position that we shall be disappointed if they don't attack us. However, I believe they wait for nothing but a fair wind. In my

[Manor of Livingston] Wednesday 30t [October]

A Visit Yesterday from Mr. Walter Livingston, late Commissary for the Northern Army, & succeeded on his Resignation by one [Elisha] Avery the Son of a New England Innkeeper.

He represents Arnold as having Courage without Conduct, says the American Fleet was destroyed but 36 Miles to the Northward of Crown Point where Carleton now lays with the British Vessels. – That 3 Weeks ago the Provincial Army at Tconderoge according to his Supplies consisted of 13,000 Men, of whom 2,000 may be Non Effectives. That Arnold's Fleet lay behind an Island, & were passed by Carlton's, & by this Negligence might have been cut off & starved. The British Army are momently expected and the Militia halt at Fort Edward till they are called up. They count 1200 Tents now at Crown point and conjecture that the Land Force there may be about 6,000 Men.

Continental Marine Committee to Daniel Tillinghast[1]

Sir [Philadelphia] October 30th 1776. –

As heavy duck is wanted for the New Hampshire frigate which cannot be procured in that State, we desire you will without delay send forward to John Langdon Esq. Eighty Bolts of heavy duck if that quantity belonging to the Continent is in your possession or in the possession of any other person in your State. You will also supply Mr Langdon and Messrs Silas & Barnabus Deane with any Continental Stores that they may apply to you for the use of the Frigates Raleigh and Trumbüll.

Lieutenant [John] McDougal of the Brig Andrea Doria has accounted for the expenditure of £45 you advanced him to defray his travelling expences together with seven of the people belonging to said Brigt from your State to this place, therefore we think proper to direct that you deduct that Sum from the Sales of the prize which they brought in and put under your care.[2] We are Sir [&c.]

Sir [Philadelphia] October 30th 1776.

We have received such intelligence as satisfies us that the enemies Ships and Vessels have all quitted Georgia and the Carolinas, which renders it unnecessary for you to pursue the expeditions formerly directed to these States. But as we have still reason to suppose that the Galatea and Nautilus are Cruizing of[f] the Capes of Virginia, we desire you will proceed thither with all possible dispatch and endeavour to fall in with these Ships and take sink or destroy them. If when you are on that station you shall be informed that any of the enemies ships of war have returned to the Carolinas or Georgia, you are in that case to go in search of them and effectually remove them. Having finished this business you are to return and Cruize for and endeavour to intercept the store and provision Vessels coming from Europe to the enemies army at New York. We expect you will give this committee information by every opportunity of your proceedings, and what success you may meet with in the above enterprizes. We wish you success and are Sir [&c.]

No 27.

By means of the Sloop Rebecca whom I commissioned and stationed on St John River, the inland water passage from Georgia is secured: the Plantations on that River who were greatly alarmed, do now unmolested and free from the apprehensions of danger employ their Negros in providing lumber and naval stores for the West Indies, having raised sufficient provisions for the ensuing Year, a proof of which is, their purchasing new Negros. The state of provisions to the southward is not less favourable: and this town my Lord has it's coast at last well defended, Lord Howe having sent the Lively twenty Gun Ship to order a disposition of Ships so as to protect this Province; and by their means my Lord and by employing transports to be got in this Province, I expect to be able under the orders of General Howe, to make an advantageous diversion of Indians, and Regular Troops into Georgia, should an attack upon the Southern Colonies, in the Course of the Winter be projected.

There has been my Lord a considerable emigration from the rebel Provinces to this Place.

Several have left their Negros, and part of their Property behind, many more would have fled, had it not been for the inconveniences, and danger of loseing their Property, not only by the rebels, but by the Officer[s] of the Navy, who have seized and libeled Vessels in the Court of Admiralty employed in bringing the friends of Government and provisions to this Province, when they had my licence according to the form transmitted me by your Lordship, and it has been with difficulty, that I have been able to secure rice, through that Channel, with which we have been hitherto well supplied, notwithstanding the numbers of Indians and Emigrants black and white to be fed.

In my letter No 16 of 20 June, I had the honour of enclosing to your Lordship a memorial presented by the Emigrant Inhabitants of Georgia respecting relief on that head.[2] I had applied for a naval force for this Province to all the naval Commanders. Lord Howe alone gave it a serious thought, and at a time when his Lordship was deeply engaged in the most important business, he did not overlook business of lesser concern, we are the more obliged to his Lordship for the mark of his attention.

Honored Sir Alfred — Rhode Island 31st Octr 1776 —

I should have sailed from hence this Morning had I not been prevented by a Gale of Wind at S. E. with thick Weather — this is the first leasure time I have had Since my Arrival here in the Providence the 7th Current — And I with pleasure embrace it to acknowledge the Singular Obligations which I lay under to Mr Hewes. – Inclosed you have a short Account of my late Cruise. — When I put in here with the Providence as She had been four Months off the Ground my intention was to Scrub her bottom, repair her Sails and Rigging and proceed to Cruise off Sandy Hook and from thence return to Philada I was prevented from this by the Commodore's proposing to me to take Command of the present Expidition against the Coal Fleet of Cape Briton and Fishery of Newfoundland with the Alfred Hamden and Providence — I was at first induced to belive that this Small Squadron would be got ready in a Week — I got the Providence and Hamden ready within that time — but as I found the Alfred with only thirty Men after Much Application and loss of time to Enlist her Compliment I was Obliged to take all the Men out of the Providence and her prizes which made up my number to about an hundred and Forty — with this Small Force and the Hamden I was ready to proceed the 27th when the Hamden ran upon a Sunken Rock, and was so much damaged as to render her unfit for Immediate Service — this Misfortune obliged me to Shift Captn Hacker and all his Men into the Providence — and is, by a Second loss of time, a material drawback on my prospect of Success. — our Infant Navy is by no means well established nor under proper regulations every thing is to look for and provide when it is Immediatly Wanted — So that the most advantagious Expedition may be lost thro' detention — besides while Self Intrest prevails unless the private Emolument of individuals in our Navy is made equal if not Superiour to that of our Enemies, in these Iron times, we cannot hope to repell their Force —

I am informed, and have reason to beleive it to be too True, that even some of the Gentlemen Appointed to fit out the New Frigates are concerned in Privateers and not only Wink at, but encourage, and Employ deserters from the Navy — What punishment is equal to such Baseness? — and Yet these men pretend to love their Country! — When I address my Sentiments to you with this Freedom I consider you not as a Member of the grand state Counsel of a rising Empire — but as a private Gentleman of disintrested Candour and Penetration a Free Citizen of the World governed by the Noblest of principles the good of Mankind. — and Since Liberty hath chosen America as her last assylum every Effort to protect and Cherish her is Noble and will be rewarded with the thanks of Future Ages — I am encouraged therefore to proceed as I know that you will not missconstrue my meaning —

I have long waited and that Impatiently for the production of Some abler pen — but my expectation is as Wide of the Goal now as at the beginning. — I return to my Subject, the Navy requires to be Newmodeled. — but this cannot be properly done by Gentlemen who are Unconversant in Marine Affairs — their is no Genius Universal — And as the Congress hath such a complication of Business to attend, they will at a period not far distant find it necessary to Appoint Commissionars for each Department. — the Soul of a Navy depends on Such an Appointment. — an Impartial Board of Admiralty compitant to determin the Merits and Abilities of every Officer and to Superintend regulate and direct every outfit and Operation of the Marine Force would Soon give firmness and Stability to our Fleet and make it Formidable even to Great Britain. — in the English Fleet tho' they Impress the Seamen — the Crown gives up to the Captors all they take and even allows them a bounty for Several things with many other Advantages over and above, and can America expect to raise from nothing a Navy able to Repell this powerful Enemy while She holds out scarce a third of the Encouragement? – the Supposition is Absurd. —

The term of Enlistment is now almost expired — and as a new one must follow — the entry ought in my Opinion to be made "during Pleasure" — Give them all they Take and they will agree to the Condition. — thus the Navy will be brought under proper Subordination and will Always be well Manned with Volunteers Under good D[i]ciplin — but this is not likely to be the Case if the Ensueing Enlistment is Made for a limited time. — Both the Army and Fleet have experienced the Evil effects of Such enlistments Already — and will experience worse Consequences if the Mode is not Altered. — Inclosed I send you a Copy of a Comparative State of Wages in our Navy and in English Fifth Rates[2] — It was made out in New Hamshire and sent here by Captn [Joseph] Olney — it is a Matter Howéver that doth not in any Wise concern me. — as I have no Family or dependents and probably never will have any — I am easily provided for and am not in the least uneasy on my own Account, tho' to be sure as a Captn in the Navy Ranks with a Colonel his Appointment ought to enable him to Support that the Southern expidition Spoke of in my last to Mr Morris I mentioned to Govr [Stephen] Hopkins and he hath promised me his Intrest for that Command — it was unsolicited and therefore the greater favor — If I am thought worthy of that Honor I wish the A. Doria could be made one of the Squadron. — I was so far to the Eastward dureing the whole of my late Cruise that I hope an Apology is Unnessary for not Sending Prizes to Your State — I will not neglect it If I am fortunate hereafter — I hope to reach the Continent agen before the Middle of Decr — I have the Honor to be with Perfect Esteem — Sir [&c.]

Rank. — As you will see my letters to Mr Morris I will add nothing more at present.

LIEUTENANT WILLIAM B. ALGER TO NEW YORK PROVINCIAL CONVENTION [1]

Gentlemen – Fort Montgomery, October [31], 1776

Captain [Patrick] Dennis was speaking to me concerning raising a company of marines to enter on board the ship Montgomery, for her safety this winter. I make no doubt but he has acquainted the Convention of the same. I had some encouragement that I should have the birth, as our regiment will soon be disbanded, and our men will be idle. But what small encouragement I have had from Captain Dennis, I have engaged a company of very fine young men, a great part of them sailors and artillery men, who will go through all hardships with me. If you see cause to appoint me in that station, and send me the rate that they must engage under, I shall engage them instantly, as they wait for nothing else. Gentlemen, your compliance to this petition will very much oblige Your humble servant,

Naval and Maritime Medicine During the Revolution

The naval surgeon practiced in an entirely different environment from his colleagues ashore. For months on end he lived and worked with his patients as an integral member of a confining and self-contained community —the ship's company. Deep below the waterline of a wind and storm tossed vessel of war he performed his duties with the limited means at hand, and fought the grim battle of life and death. Besides the skills of his art and science, the naval surgeon had to possess an extra measure of zeal and courage.

At the outset of the Revolution and the beginnings of the war at sea, physicians to care for sick and wounded sailors, as well as surgical instruments and medicines, were in acutely short supply.

Readying for combat on Lake Champlain in August 1776, General Benedict Arnold in a letter to General Gates, expressed his concern about the scarcity of medical services:

> I arriv'd here [Crown Point] at 10 oClock last night much as I left Tyconderoga a little feverish but no ague Yet, a dose Phisick this afternoon I hope will set matters in order. I have applied to Doctr Sparham who (I believe) Cannot be persuaded to go with the Fleet —I don't think it prudent to go without a Surgeon, Lieut [Isaac Budd] Dunn acquaints me, that the Surgeons Mate of Coln. St Clair's Regt has a good Box Medicines & will Incline to go with the Fleet, I wish he could be sent here . . . I Can procure a Case of Capital Instruments for him here,—nothing but the Surgeon & some few articles I have sent a Boat for, prevents our proceeding . . .

Gates responded on 23 August:

> This will be deliver'd to you by Doctor [Stephen] McCrea, whom at the Recommendation of Doctor [Jonathan] Potts, I have ap> pointed First Surgeon to the Fleet under your Command. he has Instruments & Medicines, two things much in request with you. Mr Francis Hagan accompanys Mr M'Crea as his Assistant Surgeon. I cannot procure any Instruments for him here, but wish you could hire Doctor Speram's for the Voyage. You are I am told acquainted with Doctor M'Crea. I am assured his Abillities are their Own Recommendation. . . .[1]

Physicians in America in 1775 did not exceed thirty five hundred and of that number not more than four hundred actually had Doctor of Medicine degrees, primarily from European universities. Approximately fifty of the degree holding physicians were graduates of either of two American medical schools—the College of Philadelphia founded in 1765 (now the University of Pennsylvania Medical School) or King's College established two years later (now Columbia University Medical School). The course of military events compelled both institutions to stop instruction during the Revolution.

Most American physicians acquired the art of healing through an apprenticeship or preceptorial training. Many were well educated in areas other than medicine, and some were self-styled doctors who lacked formal training.

A Continental Congress resolve, 30 September 1776, showed official concern about the professional qualifications of military surgeons:

> That it be recommended to the legislatures of the United States, to appoint gentlemen in their respective states, skilful in physic and surgery, to examine those who offer to serve as surgeons or surgeons' mates in the army and navy; and that no surgeon or mate shall hereafter receive a commission or warrant to act as such, in the army or navy, who shall not produce a certificate from some or one of the examiners so to be appointed, to prove that he is qualified to execute the office:

American surgeons were influenced by European medical scholarship particularly from Scotland and England. Professional books and journals were received from abroad. Diagnosis and treatment must have been profoundly affected by the system of Hermann Boerhaave (1668–1738) and William Cullen's (1710–1790) studies in pathology and nosology. The work of William Cheselden (1688–1752), Albrecht von Haller (1708–1777), Richard Mead (1673–1754), Percivall Pott (1714–1788), William Smellie (1697–1763), Gerhard van Swieten (1700–1772) and Thomas Sydenham (1624–1689) was not unknown to the patriot physicians of the Revolutionary generation.

The naval medical officer ministered to his shipmates whether in the heat of battle or in days of smooth sailing. Routinely, for example, he extracted abscessed teeth or removed growths from the surface of the body. A few hardy surgeons might operate for stones or cataracts, or attempt to patch a damaged skull.

1. See pages 205 and 283.

Theoretically and technically, surgery was not greatly advanced over the sixteenth century. The only major operations performed were amputations. Opening the abdominal cavity or thoracic cage was unknown. The discovery of effective anesthesia remained far in the distance, and the hemostatic forceps was not yet invented. Laudable pus, a whitish inodorous excretion thought to be essential to healing, was expected from every wound, and the physician was scarcely ever disappointed.

Seamen were not required to undergo a physical examination prior to enlistment. However, some attempt was made to sign on the physically fit as illustrated by this instruction promulgated in Maryland:

> The Men enlisted must be able bodied and perfect in all thir Limbs and Sight of Sound Health without Ruptures or other visible Infirmities, above five Feet four Inches and above sixteen and under fifty years of age: and if above forty they must be of robust Constitution.

The reference to "Ruptures" [hernias] is quite understandable when the extreme physical labors demanded of the crew by a ship under sail is envisioned.

"Rules for the Regulation of the Navy of the United Colonies," prepared by John Adams and adopted by Congress on 28 November 1775, provided that in each ship:

> A convenient place shall be set apart for sick or hurt men, to be removed with their hammocks and bedding when the surgeon shall advise the same to be necessary: and some of the crew shall be appointed to attend and serve them and to keep the place clean. The cooper shall make buckets with covers and cradles if necessary for their use.
> All ships furnished with fishing tackle, being in such places where fish is to be had, the Captain is to employ some of the company in fishing, the fish to be distributed daily to such persons as are sick, or upon recovery, if the surgeons recommend it . . .

The same regulations ranked the surgeon's assistant, that is, the Surgeon's Mate, with other "inferior Officers"—second master, cook, armourer, gunsmith, master at arms, and sail maker. A surgeon's pay was set at $21\frac{1}{8}$ dollars per month, and Surgeon's Mate $13\frac{1}{3}$ dollars.

Space provided on board ship as an operating room and battle dressing station was called the cockpit. Falconer's 1771 Marine Dictionary described the cockpit as "the apartments of the surgeon and his mates, being the place where the wounded men are dressed in time of battle, or otherwise. It is situated under the lower-deck." Dark, dismal and a malodorous area below the waterline for protection against battle damage, the cockpit, when not otherwise needed, served as quarters for the surgeon's mates, other mates, some midshipmen and civilian clerks. Their mess table became the operating table during battle.

Most shipboard diseases were caused by confined, often unsanitary, living conditions, and decayed or nonexistent basic foods. These combined made illness and death all too common. A prolonged voyage without a surgeon on board could well have ended in disaster.

British physician James Lind reported on 5,743 seamen received at Haslar Hospital between 1758 and 1760. Of this number, 2,174 were suffering from fevers, 1,146 with scurvy, 360 with consumption, 350 with rheumatism, and 245 with fluxes. These were, according to Lind, the most frequent and fatal diseases in the Royal Navy.

It was James Lind who in his work A Treatise of the Scurvy (1753) gave a lucid description of the disease and established scientifically the value of lemon juice. He undertook a crusade for the general use of lemon or lime juice on board all British men-of-war. However, almost another half century was to pass before his goal was realized.

Sir Gilbert Blane, a surgeon with the British fleet in the West Indies and on the North American station during the Revolution, compiled some illuminating statistics on illness and morbidity.

Year	Seamen	Became Sick	Morbidity Rate
1778	60,000	15,978	27%
1779	70,000	24,226	34%
1780	85,000	32,121	38%
1781	90,000	23,812	26%
1782	100,000	22,909	23%
1783	110,000	13,577	12%

His study on health in the Royal Navy, and that of other English physicians, likely mirrored the conditions which existed in the Continental Navy.

Blane found the principal causes of shipboard illness and death, in all climates, were scurvy and fevers. To these he added dysentery which prevailed primarily, but not exclusively, in tropical latitudes. Likewise, he pointed out that although a very high incidence of scurvy existed among sailors, the disease was not confined to the sea. A victim of scurvy suffered from soft and bleeding gums, his teeth loosened, his breath was foul, and he developed swelling of the arms and legs.

Today we know that typhus fever is an acute specific infectious disease, occurring usually in epidemics, which is transmitted through the bite of an infected body louse or other insect. Blane wrote from on board H.M.S. Sandwich off Antigua in August 1780: "The means of preventing this sort of infection in a ship are chiefly fresh air and cleanliness, shelter from cold and wet, and keeping the ship from being too much crowded." Typhus is characterized by a sudden onset, a high fever of about two weeks duration and a termination by crisis; sudden improvement or decline.

The most adequate coverage of "ship fever" (typhus on shipboard) during the Revolution is presented by Doctor Robert Robertson of the Royal Hospital, Greenwich, England, in his book, Observations on Jail, Hospital or Ship Fever, From the 4th April, 1776, until the 30th April 1789, made in various parts of Europe and America and on the Intermediate Seas.

Robertson concluded that ship fever is "an evil confined to no particular country or climate, but extending its fatal effects as far as we have either society or commerce." He was fully convinced that the jail, the hospital and the ship fever "are essentially one and the same fever; and that they are to be cured by one and the same remedy, bark." The "bark" to which Robertson made reference was Peruvian or Cinchona bark and was excised from a genus of rubiaceous trees, the species of which are native to South America. This bark has the same tonic, antiseptic and fever-reducing properties as the alkaloid quinine which it contains.

Serving in H.M.S. Juno, mostly in American waters, Doctor Robertson employed the following therapy:

> It was not a general rule with me to let blood;—that depending soley on circumstances. A vomit was most commonly given at first; and if the patient was bled, the vomit was given a few hours after, and from xxv. to xi. drops of Essent. Antimon. with refrigerating and diluting drink at night. Next morning an ounce of salts was given, and the essence of antimony repeated in the evening. After those moderate evacuations (which were seldom repeated) I prescribed Cort. Peruv. 3i. or 3iss. every hour, until the patient was out of danger; and afterwards it was given less frequent, and at this time Elix. Vitr. was often joined with it. After I began to give the bark, I did not omit it for any exacerbation of the symptoms.

As he gained experience, Robertson came to rely more on the bark in larger frequent doses, and less on other forms of treatment. His general antipathy to routine bleeding as a therapeutic measure was years in advance of his time.

Bleeding was a standard therapy on land and at sea. James Lind in his Essay on the most effectual means of preserving the health of seamen in the Royal Navy . . . (1779) recommended dilating the external opening of wounds and bleeding the patient profusely and frequently. Then one was to employ "emollient clysters, cooling nitrous drinks, anodynes, most rigid diet consisting solely of thin, diluting drinks, perfect quiet and a proper posture." Lind, however, suggested that bleeding was not suitable in tropical climates and warned against it.

Of the few medical writings produced in America, the most important to the naval surgeon was John Jones' Plain, Concise, Practical Remarks on the Treatment of Wounds and Fractures (New York, 1775). Some of his salient principles may be summarized as follows:

Slight puncture wounds require no therapy; deep and tortuous ones should be incised and enlarged; inflammation is best counteracted by gentle laxatives, soft cataplasms, sudorific anodynes, bleeding and warm baths; opium is an essential adjunct of treatment; gangrene signifies the need of a more nourishing diet, spiritous fomentations and a more intensive use of the bark; abscesses need immediate incision and drainage; all transverse wounds are in need of interrupted suturing with a needle dipped in oil and following this a plaster is applied over the area for two or three days; in gunshot wounds, one should first remove the bullet and secondly control hemorrhage, and a light dressing should then be applied with a retention dressing on top; and all major compound fractures require immediate amputation.

Jones considered cardiac, aortic, cerebellar, medullary and receptaculum chyli wounds as fatal. Chest, abdominal, hepatic, pulmonary, intestinal and renal wounds were categorized as very serious.

The navel surgeon had a practical knowledge of current drug therapy which, as noted previously, favored cathartics, emetics, bark, opium blisters and blood letting. If fortunate, he owned a European pharmacopoeia or a copy of William Brown's Pharmacopoeia Simpliciorum et Efficaciorum [Formulary of Simple and yet Efficacious Remedies]—the first American pharmacopoeia—published in Philadelphia in 1778. Sometimes referred to as the "Lititz Pharmacopoeia," this work was compiled by Doctor Brown, Physician General of the Middle Department of the Continental Army, when stationed at the Army hospital, Lititz, Pennsylvania. Only readily available drugs were included, for the immediate military need would not permit seeking out rare medications.

An inventory taken on board the Continental frigate Raleigh in January 1778 lists the following surgeon's instruments and supplies:

1 Case of Amputating Instruments
2 Spare Silk Tourniquet Ligatures
1 Green Nourse Skin Case containing 4 Lancets
1 other Case containing 6 new Lancets
5 Teeth Instruments
1 Case Pocket Instruments
2 Iron Spatulas

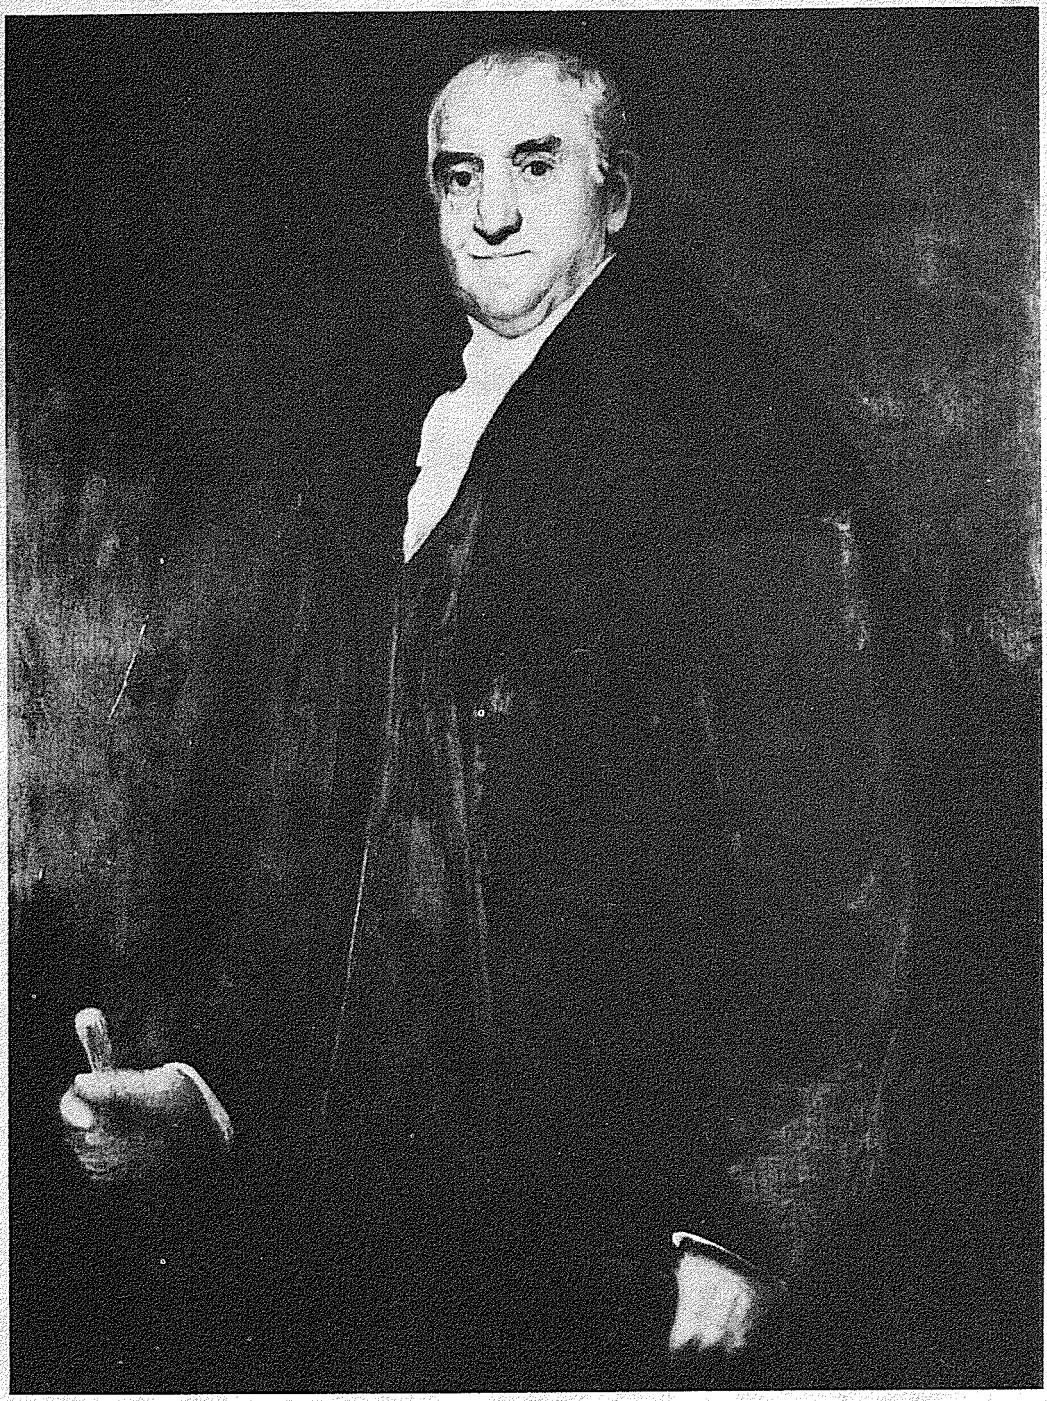
Rum was another therapeutic "refreshment." Cinchona bark—with quinine as its active ingredient—was in such demand that this medication quadrupled in price between June 1776 and September 1777.

Cathartics and purgatives were the drugs most often prescribed. These included botanical preparations such as ipecac, rhubarb, and jalap as well as chemical preparations. Antimony and potassium tartrate were combined to form "tartar emetic" which was favored for effecting a rapid vomiting. When the naval surgeon felt that a narcotic pain reliever was indicated, he favored gum opium. When he desired the counter-irritation effect of blistering plasters, he favored those prepared from cantharides [Spanish flies]. For a variety of medicinal purposes surgeons prescribed mercury in metallic form as well as in certain salt compounds and nitre [saltpeter or potassium nitrate]. Gum camphor was also widely used. A favorite dressing consisted of lint which was absorbent material obtained by picking apart old woven fabrics, but this was in critically scarce supply.



The ledger of the Greenleaf Apothecary in Boston, an interesting document in the holdings of the American Antiquarian Society,[2] reveals the shop was a major supplier of medicines to the Continental Navy, Washington's Fleet, and privateers. This ledger also documents how severe shortages were eased by medicines captured in the cargoes of British prize ships.

"The forming of a seaman," wrote Sir Gilbert Blane, "depends upon a long habit of life, so that if our stock of mariners were exhausted, or diminished, neither treasure nor any other means would repair the loss. In this view, as well as from the peculiar dependence of Britain upon her navy, this order of men is truly inestimable." And, still other words of Sir Gilbert could have reflected the dedication of American and British sea-going surgeons of the Revolution: "I should not repent my labour, could I enjoy the conscious certainty of its having saved the life of one brave and good man."

David Bushnell and the Submarine Turtle

[New York harbor in September 1776 was the scene of an unsuccessful but historic attempt to sink a large British warship (Eagle or Asia) by submarine attack. The ingenious submarine was the invention of David Bushnell, and the operator was Sergeant Ezra Lee; both of Connecticut.

Thomas Jefferson, displaying keen interest in Bushnell's submarine, wrote to Washington from Paris on 17 July 1785 asking the General's recollections on the subject. Washington replied on 26 September of the same year.

In October 1787 Bushnell sent Jefferson a detailed description of the Turtle and his underwater experiments. At the same time, Bushnell sent Ezra Stiles a copy of all material he had prepared for Jefferson.

Sergeant Lee recounted his experience on the night of the submerged attack in a letter to David Humphreys dated 20 February 1815.

These letters have been brought together to form this appendix.]

Sir Paris July 17. 1785.

Permit me to add, what I forgot in my former letter, a request to you to be so kind as to communicate to me what you can recollect of Bushnel's experiments in submarine navigation during the late war, and whether you think his method capable of being used succesfully for the destruction of vessels of war, it's not having been actually used for this purpose by us, who were so peculiarly in want of such an agent seems to prove it did not promise success. George Washington to Thomas Jefferson [1]

[Extract] Mount Vernon 26th Septr. 1785

I am sorry I cannot give you full information respecting Captn. Bushnals projects for the destruction of shipping.—No interesting experiment having been made, and my memory being treacherous, I may, in some measure, be mistaken in what I am about to relate.

Bushnel is a man of great Mechanical powers—fertile of invention—and a master in execution—He came to me in 1776 recommended by Governor Trumbull (now dead) and other respectable characters who were proselites to his plan.—Although I wanted faith myself, I furnished him with money, and other aids to carry it into execution.—He laboured for sometime ineffectually, & though the advocates for his scheme continued sanguine he never did succeed—One accident or another was always intervening.—I then thought, and still think, that it was an effort of genius; but that a combination of too many things were requisite, to expect much success from the enterprise against an enemy, who are always upon guard. —That he had a machine which was so contrived as to carry a man under water at any depth he chose, and for a considerable time & distance, with an apparatus charged with Powder which he could fasten to a ships bottom or side & give fire to in any given time (sufft. for him to retire) by means whereof a ship could be blown up, or sunk, are facts which I believe admit of little doubt—but then, where it was to operate against an enemy, it is no easy matter to get a person hardy enough to encounter the variety of dangers to which he must be exposed. 1 from the novelty 2 from the difficulty of conducting the machine, and governing it under water on acct. of the Currents &ca. 3 the consequent uncertainty of hitting the object of destination, without rising frequently above water for fresh observation, wch., when near the Vessel, would expose the adventurer to a discovery, & almost to certain death—To these causes I always ascribed the non-performance of his plan, as he wanted nothing that I could furnish to secure the success of it.—This to the best of my recollection is a true state of the case—But Humphreys, if I mistake not, being one of the proselites, will be able to give you a more perfect acct. of it than I have done. . . .

David Bushnell to Ezra Stiles [1]

Stamford October 16th 1787.

Sir

Induced by the desire you intimated in your Letter to me, of seeing what I should write to his Excellency Governor Jefferson our Ambassador at Paris, I have together with this, inclosed a Copy of what I have sent to his Excellency. The Original is forwarded by Colonel Humphrys, a Gentleman to whom I am much indebted, who wrote more than once upon the affair, and to whose friendship, I have no doubt, I owe the attention of the Governor to the Subject, and his desire of information, agreeably to what you and Colonel Humphrys wrote long since.

I beg leave to thank you for your advice, and your kind offer to take the charge of forwarding my Letter to his Excellency. I could wish that what I have written should not come to the knowledge of the public, for the same reason, as I have written to the Governor, that I have ever wished to be silent upon the subject. Should what I have written to the Governor miscarry, I wish these might be ready to be forwarded to him, if I should be obliged to make use of them.

If you are desirous of any information which is not contained in this packet, I shall esteem it a favour, if you will give me the opportunity of satisfying you. Should you think proper to write to me or receive anything from His Excellency Governor Jefferson which respects me, I could wish they might be directed to the care of Major John Davenport in Stamford. I am Sir &c.

[Enclosures]

Stamford, In Connecticut Octr. 13th. 1787.

Sir

In the latter part of the year 1785, I received a Letter from Colonel David Humphrys, and soon after, another from Doctor Ezra Stiles, President of Yale College in Connecticut, informing me, that your Excellency desired an account of my Submarine Vessel, and the Experiments which I had made.

At the time I received those Letters, I was seized with a severe illness, which disabled me from writing, & though I attempted it several times, obliged me to desist. Ever since I recovered my health, my situation has been such, that until this time, it has not been in my power to write to your Excellency, upon the Subject.

I shall think myself happy if this, arriving thus late, meet with your Excellency's acceptance, and give you the information you desired; and shall only regret, that I had it not in my power to write, as soon as I received the communications of those Gentlemen.

Doctor Stiles, in his Letter to me, transcribed from yours the following, "If he thought proper to communicate it, I would engage never to disclose it, unless I could find an opportunity of doing it for his Benefit." In answer to this declaration, I shall submit the disclosure of it entirely to your Excellency, to do as you shall think proper; & beg leave to return you my sincere thanks for your generous intentions.

I have ever carefully concealed my Principles & Experiments, as much as the nature of the subject allowed, from all but my chosen Friends, being persuaded that it was the most prudent course, whether the event should prove fortunate or otherwise, although by the concealment I never fostered any great expectations of profit, or even of a compensation for my time & expences; the loss of which has been exceedingly detrimental to me.

With this your Excellency will receive a sketch of the general principles and construction of the Submarine Vessel blended together, as they occur at this time, with many of the Minutiae. I should gladly exhibit everything with the utmost minuteness, but apprehend I have not been sufficiently clear in what I have written, and have a doubt whether I could explain the whole intelligibly, without drawings, which I cannot easily execute or obtain. But should this not be sufficient, & you should wish to have a more minute description of the whole, or of any particular part not sufficiently explained here, I shall be happy to receive your Excellency's commands, and shall obey them, as soon as they come to hand, without any reserve.

As I am desirous this should not fall into improper hands, I could wish, if it were not too great a favour, to hear that this finds a safe conveyance to your Excellency.

In the mean time, with the most respectful sentiments, I am &c.

David Bushnell.

P.S. Should your Excellency think proper to inform me of the safe arrival of this packet, I could wish such information might be directed to the care of Doctor Stiles.

His Excellency Thomas Jefferson Esquire.

"General principles & construction of a Submarine Vessel."

No. 2.

The external shape of the Submarine Vessel bore some resemblance to two upper tortoise shells of equal size, joined together: the place of entrance into the Vessel being represented by the opening, made by the swell of the shells, at the head of the animal. The inside was capable of containing the Operator, and air, sufficient to supply him, thirty minutes, without receiving fresh air. At the bottom, opposite to the entrance, was fixed a quantity of lead for ballast. At one edge, which was directly before the operator, who sat upright, was an oar, for rowing forward or backward. At the other edge, was a rudder for steering. An aperture, at the bottom, with its valve, was designed to admit water for the purpose of descending; & two brass forcing pumps served to eject the water within, when necessary for ascending. At the top, there was likewise an oar, for ascending or descending, or continuing at any particular depth. A Watergage or Barometer, determined the depth of descent, a compass directed the course, & a ventilator within, supplied the Vessel with fresh air, when on the surface.

The entrance into the Vessel was elliptical, and so small, as barely to admit a person. This entrance was surrounded with a broad elliptical iron band, the lower edge of which was let into the wood of which the body of the Vessel was made, in such a manner, as to give its utmost support to the body of the Vessel against the pressure of the water. Above the upper edge of this iron band, there was a brass Crown or cover, resembling a hat with its crown and brim, which shut watertight upon the iron band: the Crown was hung to the iron band with hinges so as to turn over sidewise, when opened: to make it perfectly secure when shut, it might be screwed down upon the band by the operator, or by a person without.

There were in the brass Crown, three round doors, one directly in front, and one on each side, large enough to put the hand through, when open they admitted the fresh air; their shutters were ground perfectly tight into their places, with emery, hung with hinges, & secured in their places when shut. There were likewise several small glass windows in the Crown, for looking through, and for admitting light in the daytime, with covers to secure them. There were two airpipes in the Crown. A ventilator within drew fresh air through one of the airpipes, and discharged it into the lower part of the Vessel; the fresh air introduced by the ventilator, expelled the impure light air through the other airpipe. Both airpipes were so constructed, that they shut themselves whenever the water rose near their tops, so that no water could enter through them, and opened themselves immediately after they rose above the water.

The Vessel was chiefly ballasted with lead, fixed to its bottom: when this was not sufficient, a quantity was placed within, more or less, according to the weight of the operator: its ballast made it so stiff, that there was no danger of oversetting. The Vessel with all its appendages, and the operator, was of sufficient weight to settle it very low in the water. About two hundred pounds of the lead at the bottom for ballast, could be let down forty or fifty feet below the Vessel: this enabled the operator to rise instantly to the surface of the water in case of accident.

When the operator would descend he placed his foot upon the top of a brass valve, depressing it, by which he opened a large aperture in the bottom of the Vessel, through which the water entered at his pleasure. When he had admitted a sufficient quantity, he descended very gradually; if he admitted too much, he ejected as much as was necessary to obtain an equilibrium, by the two brass forcing pumps, which were placed at each hand. Whenever the Vessel leaked or he would ascend to the surface, he also made use of these forcing pumps. When the skilful operator had obtained an equilibrium, he could row upward, or downward, or continue at any particular depth, with an oar, placed near the top of the Vessel, formed upon the principle of the screw, the axis of the oar entering the Vessel: by turning the oar one way he raised the Vessel, by turning it the other way he depressed it.

A glass tube eighteen inches long, and one inch in diameter, standing upright, its upper end closed, and its lower end, which was open, screwed into a brass pipe, through which the external water had a passage into the glass tube, served as a Watergage or Barometer. There was a piece of cork, with phosphorus on it, put into the Watergage: When the Vessel descended, the water rose in the watergage, condensing the air within, and bearing the cork, with its phosphorus, on its surface. By the light of the phosphorus, the ascent of the water in the gage was rendered visible, and the depth of the Vessel under water ascertained by a graduated line.

An oar, formed upon the principle of the screw, was fixed in the forepart of the Vessel, whose axis entered the Vessel, which being turned one way, rowed the Vessel forward, and being turned the other way, rowed it backward: it was made to be turned by hand or foot.

A rudder, hung to the hinder part of the Vessel, commanded it with the greatest ease. The rudder was made very elastick, and might be used for rowing forward. Its tiller was within the Vessel, at the operator's right hand, fixed, at a right angle, on an iron rod, which passed through the side of the Vessel; the rod had a crank on its outside end, which commanded the rudder, by means of a rod extending from the end of the crank to a kind of tiller, fixed upon the left hand of the rudder. Raising & depressing the first mentioned tiller turned the rudder, as the case required.

The internal shape of the Vessel, in every possible section of it, verged towards an ellipsis, as near as the design would allow, but every horizontal section, although elliptical, as near a circle, as could be admitted. The body of the Vessel was made exceedingly strong; and to strengthen it as much as possible, a firm piece of wood was framed, parallel to the conjugate diameter, to prevent the sides from yielding to the great pressure of the incumbent water in a deep immersion. This piece of wood was also a seat for the operator.

Every opening was well secured. The pumps had two sets of valves. The aperture at the bottom, for admitting water was covered with a plate perforated full of holes to receive the water, and prevent anything from choaking the passage, or stopping the valve from shutting. The brass valve might likewise be forced into its place with a screw, if necessary. The airpipes had a kind of hollow sphere, fixed round the top of each, to secure the air pipe-valves from injury; these hollow spheres were perforated full of holes for the passage of the air through the pipes: within the airpipes were shutters to secure them, should any accident happen to the pipes, or the valves on their tops.

Whenever the external apparatus passed through the body of the Vessel, the joints were round and formed by brass pipes, which were driven into the wood of the Vessel; the holes through the pipes were very exactly made, and the iron rods which passed through them were turned in a lathe to fit them; The joints were also kept full of oil to prevent rust and leaking. Particular attention was given to bring every part, necessary for performing the operations, both within and without the Vessel, before the operator, and as convenient as could be devised: so that every thing could be found in the dark, except the watergage, and the compass, which were visible by the light of the phosphorus, and nothing required the operator to turn to the right hand, or the left, to perform anything necessary.

Description of a Magazine & its appendages, designed to be conveyed by the submarine Vessel to the bottom of a Ship.

In the forepart of the brim of the Crown of the Submarine Vessel, was a socket, and an iron tube passing through the socket; the tube stood upright, and could slide up and down in the socket, six inches: at the top of the tube, was a Woodscrew (A) fixed by means of a rod, which passed through the tube, and screwed the Woodscrew fast upon the top of the tube: by pushing the Woodscrew up against the bottom of a Ship, and turning it at the same time, it would enter the planks; driving would answer the same purpose; when the Woodscrew was firmly fixed, it could be cast off by unscrewing the rod, which fastened it upon the top of the tube.

Behind the Submarine Vessel, was a place, above the rudder, for carrying a large Powder Magazine; this was made of two pieces of oak timber, large enough, when hollowed out, to contain one hundred and fifty pounds of Powder, with the apparatus used in firing it, and was secured in its place by a screw, turned by the operator. A strong piece of rope extended from the magazine to the Woodscrew (A) abovementioned, and was fastened to both. When the Woodscrew was fixed, and to be cast off from its tube, the Magazine was to be cast off likewise by unscrewing it, leaving it hanging to the Woodscrew: it was lighter than the water that it might rise up against the object, to which the Woodscrew and itself were fastened.

Within the Magazine, was an apparatus, constructed to run any proposed length of time under twelve hours; when it had run out its time, it unpinioned a strong lock resembling a gun lock, which gave fire to the powder. This apparatus was so pinioned, that it could not possibly move till, by casting off the Magazine from the Vessel, it was set in motion.

The skilful operator could swim so low on the surface of the water, as to approach very near a Ship, in the Night, without fear of being discovered, and might if he chose, approach the stem or stern, above water, with very little danger. He could sink very quick, keep at any depth he pleased, and row a great distance, in any direction he desired, without coming to the surface; & when he rose to the surface, he would soon obtain a fresh supply of air, when, if necessary, he might descend again and pursue his course.

The above Vessel, Magazine &c. were projected in the year 1771, but not completed until the year 1775.

David Bushnell

"Experiments made to prove the nature and use of a Submarine Vessel." No. 3.

The first experiment I made, was with about two ounces of gunpowder, which I exploded four feet under water, to prove to some of the first Personages in Connecticut, that powder would take fire under water.

The second experiment was made with two pounds of powder, inclosed in a wooden bottle, and fixed under a hogshead, with a two inch oak plank between the hogshead and the powder; the hogshead was loaded with stones as deep as it could swim; a wooden pipe descending through the lower head of the hogshead, & through the plank into the powder contained in the bottle, was primed with powder. A match put to the priming exploded the powder, which produced a very great effect, rending the plank into pieces, demolishing the hogshead, and casting the stones and ruins of the hogshead, with a body of water many feet into the air, to the astonishment of the spectators. This experiment was likewise made for the satisfaction of the Gentlemen abovementioned.

I afterwards made many experiments of a similar nature; some of them with large quantities of powder; they all produced very violent explosions, much more than sufficient for any purpose I had in view.

In the first essays with the submarine Vessel, I took care to prove its strength to sustain the great pressures of the incumbent water when sunk deep, before I trusted any person to descend much below the surface: and

I never suffered any person to go under water without having a strong piece of rigging made fast to it, until I found him well acquainted with the operations necessary for his safety. After that I made him descend and continue at particular depths, without rising or sinking, row by the compass, approach a Vessel, go under her, and fix the Woodscrew, mentioned in No 2, and marked A, into her Bottom, &c. until I thought him sufficiently expert to put my design into execution.

I found agreeably to my expectation, that it required many trials to make a person of common ingenuity, a skilful operator. The first I employed was very ingenious and made himself master of the business, but was taken sick in the campaign of 1776 at N. York, before he had an opportunity to make use of his skill, and never recovered his health sufficiently afterwards.

Experiments made with a submarine Vessel.

After various attempts to find an operator to my wish, I sent one, who appeared more expert than the rest, from N. York to a fifty gun Ship lying not far from Governour's Island. He went under the Ship and attempted to fix the Woodscrew into her bottom, but struck as he supposes, a bar of iron, which passes from the rudder hinge and is spiked under the Ship's quarter. Had he moved a few inches, which he might have done without rowing, I have no doubt, but he would have found wood, where he might have fixed the screw; or if the Ship were sheathed with copper, he might easily have pierced it: but, not being well skilled in the management of the Vessel, in attempting to move to another place, he lost the Ship. After seeking her in vain, for sometime, he rowed some distance, and rose to the surface of the water, but found daylight had advanced so far, that he durst not renew the attempt.

He says that he could easily have fastened the Magazine under the Stern of the Ship, above water, as he rowed up to the stern, and touched it, before he descended. Had he fastened it there, the explosion of one hundred and fifty pounds of powder, the quantity contained in the Magazine, must have been fatal to the Ship. In his return from the Ship to N. York, he passed near Governor's Island, and thought he was discovered by the Enemy, on the Island; being in hast to avoid the danger he feared, he cast off the magazine, as he imagined it retarded him, in the swell, which was very considerable. After the Magazine had been cast off, one hour, the time the internal apparatus was set to run, it blew up with great violence.

Afterwards there were two attempts made in Hudson's River above the City, but they effected nothing. One of them was by the aforementioned person. In going toward the Ship, he lost sight of her, and went a great distance beyond her, before he found her; when he arrived, the tide ran so strong, that as he descended under water, for the Ship's bottom, it swept him away. Soon after this, the Enemy went up the river, and pursued the boat, which had the submarine Vessel on board, and sunk it, with their shot. After I recovered the Vessel, I found it impossible, at that time to prosecute the design any farther. I had been in a bad state of health from the beginning of my undertaking, and was now very unwell; the situation of public affairs was such, that I despaired of obtaining the public attention, and the assistance necessary. I was unable to support myself, and the persons I must have employed, had I proceeded. Beside I found it absolutely necessary, that the operators should acquire more skill in the management of the Vessel, before I could expect success; which would have taken up sometime, and made no small additional expence. I therefore gave over the pursuit, for that time, and waited for a more favourable opportunity, which never arrived.

Other Experiments made with a design to fire Shipping.

In the year 1777, I made an attempt, from a Whaleboat, against the Cerberus Frigate, then lying at anchor, between Connecticut River & New London, by drawing a Machine against her side, by means of a line. The Machine was loaded with powder, to be exploded by a gunlock, which was to be unpinioned by an apparatus, to be turned by being brought along the side of the Frigate. This Machine fell in with a schooner, at anchor astern of the Frigate, & concealed from my sight. By some means or other it was fired, and demolished the schooner, and three men, and blew the only one left alive, overboard, who was taken up very much hurt.

After this, I fixed several Keggs under water, charged with powder, to explode upon touching anything, as they floated along with the tide: I set them afloat in the Delaware, above the English shipping at Philadelphia, in December 1777. I was unacquainted with the River, and obliged to depend upon a Gentleman, very imperfectly acquainted with that part of it, as I afterwards found. We went as near the shipping as he durst venture; I believe the darkness of the night greatly deceived him, as it did me. We set them adrift, to fall with the ebb upon the Shipping. Had we been within sixty rods, I believe they must have fallen in with them immediately as I designed; but, as I afterwards found, they were set adrift much too far distant, and did not arrive, until after being detained some time by frost, they advanced in the day time, in a dispersed situation, and under great disadvantage. One of them blew up a boat, with several persons in it, who imprudently handled it too freely, and thus gave the British that alarm, which brought on the battle of the Keggs.

Ezra Lee to David Humphreys [1]

Lyme 20th Feby 1815.

Judge Griswold, & Charles Griswold Esq. both informed me that you wished to have an account of a machine invented by David Bushnell of Say. Brook, at the commencement of our Revolutionary war. In the summer of 1776, he went to New York with it to try the Asia man of war:—his brother being acquainted with the working of the machine, was to try the first experiment with it, but having spent untill the middle of August, he gave out, in consequence of indisposition.—Mr. Bushnell then came to General Parsons (of Lyme) to get some one to go, and learn the ways & mystery of this new machine, and to make a trial of it.

General Parsons, sent for me, & two others, who had given in our names to go in a fire ship if wanted, to see if we would undertake the enterprize:—we agreed to it, but first returned with the machine down Sound, and on our way practised with it in several harbours.— we returned as far back as Say-Brook with Mr Bushnell, where some little alterations were made in it— in the course of which time, (it being 8 or 10 days) the British had got possession of Long Island & Governor's Island—We went back as far as New Rochelle and had it carted over by land to the North River.—

Before I proceed further, I will endeavour to give you some idea of the construction of this machine, turtle or torpedo, as it has since been called.— (1) Its shape was most like a round clam, but longer, and set up on its square side—it was high enough to stand in or sit as you had occasion, with a (2) composition head hanging on hinges.—it had six glasses, inserted in the head, and made water tight, each the size of a half Dollar piece, to admit light—in a clear day, a person might see to read in three fathoms of water— The machine was steered by a rudder having a crooked tiller, which led in by your side, through a water joint.— (3) then sitting on the seat, the navigator rows with one hand, & steers with the other—it had two oars, of about 12 inches in leangth, & 4 or 5 in width, shaped like the arms of a wind-mill, which led also inside through water joints, in front of the person steering, and were worked by means of a wench (or crank) and with hard labour, the machine might be impelled at the rate of 3 nots an hour for a short time —Seven hundred pounds of lead were fixed on the bottom for ballast, and two hundred weight of it was so contrived, as to let it go in case the pumps choaked, so that you could rise at the surface of the water.—It was sunk by letting in water by a spring near the bottom, by placing your foot against which, the water would rush in and when sinking take off your foot & it would cease to come in & you would sink no further, but if you had sunk too far, pump out water untill you got the necessary depth—these pumps forced the water out at the bottom, one being on each side of you as you rowed—A pocket compass was fixed in the side, with a piece of light (4) wood on the north side, thus +, and another on the east side thus —, to steer by while under water—Three round doors were cut in the head, (each 3 inches diameter) to let in fresh air, untill you wished to sink, and then they were shut down & fastened—There was also a glass tube (5) 12 inches long and 1 inch diamater, with a cork in it, with a peice of light wood, fixed to it, and another peice at the bottom of the tube, to tell the depth of discent,—one inch rise of the cork in the tube gave about one fathom water,—It had a screw, that peirced through the top of the machine, with a water joint, which was so very sharp that it would enter wood, with very little force, and this was turned with a wench, or crank, and when entered fast in the bottom of the ship, the screw is then left, and the machine is disengaged, by unscrewing another one inside that held the other. From the screw now fixed on the bottom of the ship, a line—led to & fastened to the mazagine, to prevent its escape either side of the ship—the magazine was directly behind you on the outside, and that was faced from you by unscrewing a screw inside—Inside the magazine was a clock machinery, which immediately sets a going after it is disengaged & a gun lock is fixed to strike fire to the powder, at the set time after the Clock should rundown—The clock might be set to go longer or shorter—20 or 30 minutes was the usual time, to let the navigator escape—This magazine was shaped like an egg, & made of oak dug out in two peices, bound together with bands of iron, corked & paid over with tar so as to be perfectly tight, and the clock was bound so as not to run untill this magazine was unscrewed—

I will now endeavour to give you a short account of my voyage in this machine.—The first night after we got down to NewYork with it, that was favourable, (for the time for a trial, must be, when it is slack water, & calm, as it is unmanagable in a swell or a strong tide) the British Fleet lay a little above Staten Island We set off from the City—the Whale boats towed me as nigh the ships, as they dared to go, and then cast me off—I soon found that it was too early in the tide, as it carried me down by the ships—I however hove about, and rowed for 5 glasses, by the ships' bells, before the tide slacked so that I, could get along side of the man of war, which lay above the transports—The Moon was about 2 hours high, and the daylight about one—when I rowed under the stern of the ship, could see the men on deck, & hear them talk—I then shut down all the doors, sunk down, and came under the bottom of the ship, up with the screw against the bottom but found that it would not enter— (6) I pulled along to try another place, but deviated a little one side, and immediately rode with great velocity, and come above the surface 2 or 3 feet between the ship and the daylight—then sunk again like a porpoise I hove partly about to try again, but on further thought I gave out, knowing, that as soon as it was light the ships boats would be rowing in all directions, and I thought the best generalship, was to retreat, as fast as I could as I had 4 miles to go, before passing Governor's Island.—So I jogg'd on as fast as I could, and my compass being then of no use to me, I was obliged to rise up every few minutes to see that I sailed in the right direction, and for this purpose keeping the machine on the surface of the water, and the doors open—I was much afraid of getting aground on the island as the Tide of the flood set on the north point While on my passage up to the City, my course owing to the above circumstances, was very crooked & zig zag, and the enemy's attention was drawn towards me, from Governors Island—When I was abreast of the fort on the island 3 or 400 men got upon the parapet to observe me,—at leangth a number came down to the shore, shoved off a 12 oar'd barge, with 5 or 6 sitters, and pull'd for me—I eyed them, and when they had got within 50 or 60 yards of me, I let loose the magazine, in hopes, that if they should take me, they would likewise pick up the magazine, and then we should all be blown up together, but as kind Providence would have it, they took fright, and returned to the island, to my infinite joy.—I then weathered the Island, and our people seeing me, came off with a whaleboat, and towed me in—The Magazine after getting a little past the Island, went off with a tremendous explosion, throwing up large bodies of water to an immense height. (7)

Before we had another opportunity to try an experiment our army evacuated Newyork, and we retreated up the North River as far as fort Lee —A Frigate came up and anchored off Bloomingdale. I now made another attempt upon a new plan—my intention was to have gone under the ship's stern, and screwed on the magazine close to the water's edge, but I was discovered by the Watch and was obliged to abondon this scheme, then shutting my doors, I dove under her, but my cork in the tube, (by which I ascertained my depth) got obstructed, and deceived me, and I descended too deep & did not track the ship, and I then left her—Soon after the Frigate came up the river, drove our Crane galley on shore, and sunk our Sloop, from which we escaped to the shore—

I am &c. E. Lee.

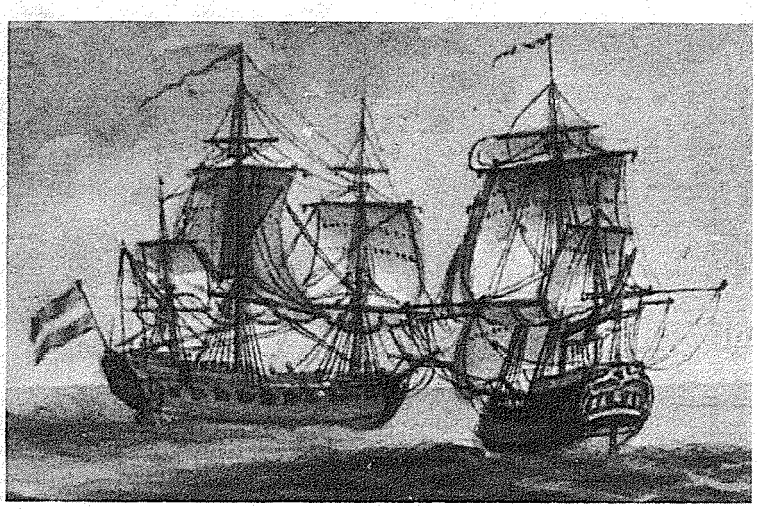
For General David Humphreys—

(1) This machine was built of oak, in the strongest manner possible, corked and tarred, and though its sides were at least six inches thick, the writer of the forgoing, told me that the pressure of the water, against it, at the depth of two fathoms was so great, that it oozed quite through, as mercury will by means of the air pump. Mr. Bushnell's machine was no larger than just to admit one person to navigate:—its extreme leangth was not more than 7. feet.—When lying in the water, in its ordinary state without ballasts, its upper works did not rise more than 6 or 7 inches out of water—

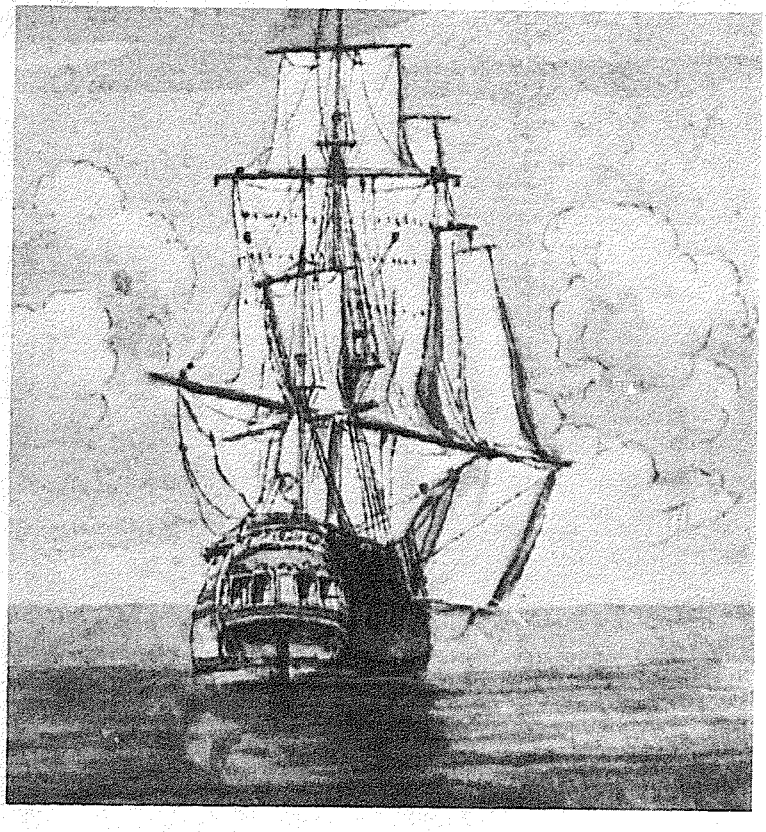
(2) This composition head, means of composition of Metals—something like bell metal, and was fixed on the top of the machine, and which afforded the only admission to the inside—

(3) The steering of this machine was done on the same principles, with ordinary vessels, but the rowing her through the water, was on a very different plan—These oars, were fixed on the end of a shaft like windmill arms, projected out, forward, and turned at right angles with the course of the machine, and upon the same principles that windmill arms are turned, by the wind these oars, when put in motion as the writer describes, draws the machine slowly after it—this moving power is small, and every attendant circumstance, must cooperate with it, to answer the purpose, calm waters & no current—

(4) This light wood is what we sometimes call fox fire, and is the dry wood that shines in the dark:—this was necessary as the points of the compass could not readily be seen without—



(5) The glass tube here mentioned, which was a sort of thermometer, to ascertain the depth of water the machine descended, is the only part that is without explanation—the writer of the forgoing, could not reccollect the principles on which such an effect, was produced, nor the mechanical con-



trivance of it—He only knows that it was so contrived that the cork & light wood rose or fell in the tubes, by the ascent or descent of the machine—

(6) The reason why the screw would not enter, was that the ship's bottom being coppered it would have been difficult under any circumstances to have peirced through it—but on attempting to bore with the auger, the force necessary to be used in pressing against the ships bottom, caused the machine to rebound off. this difficulty defeated the whole.—the screw could not enter the bottom, and of course the magazine could not be kept there in the mode desired—

(7) When the explosion took place, General Putnam was vastly pleased, and cried out in his piculiar way—"God's curse 'em, that'll do it for 'em."[2]

APPENDIX C

"The War in America 1776 Original Manuscript Journal by Admiral Sir George Collier." [1]

[Extract]

[Rather than a journal, Sir George Collier's experiences in H.M.S. Rainbow on the American station seem to be a series of letters, but to whom addressed is not apparent. The opening pages are missing, and then follow three pages describing cod fishing on the Newfoundland Banks.

The missing pages of the Journal may be paraphrased from a volume published in New York in 1835 entitled: A Detail of Some Particular Services Performed in America During the years 1776, 1777, 1778, and 1779. Compiled from Journals and original Papers, Supposed to be Chiefly taken from the Journal kept on board the Ship Rainbow, Commanded by Sir George Collier. The title page further states: "Printed for Ithiel Town From a manuscript obtained by him, while in London, in the summer of 1830." As Town, in his introduction, or "Advertisement," claims that he was presenting "a true copy," it is evident that he had purchased "at a public sale of autographs and manuscripts," some unknown author's monograph prepared from the original Journal.]

[From the Town volume]

The rebellion in America was come to so alarming a height, as threatened the entire loss of that continent to Great Britain, unless the most vigorous and effectual means were used to suppress it. Government, therefore, determined upon sending out a force so considerable, as should at once put an end to the machinations and evil designs of the king's enemies, and restore peace to that distracted country.

To carry this measure into execution, and to avoid sending away so great a number of the national troops, as would be necessary to effect it, a treaty with the Landgrave of Hesse was entered into, for his supplying Great Britain with a stipulated number of men, at a certain rate, whose deficiency by deaths, desertion, or any other cause, was to be supplied occasionally from Hesse; paying the prince for every soldier who should be killed in battle, or die by sickness, from the time of their leaving Germany till their return to it.

In consequence of this agreement, a number of transports, necessary to receive the first division of the Hessian troops, was sent to Stadt, where they accordingly embarked, and arrived at Spithead the beginning of May, 1776.

This first division consisted of 7,800 Hessians, and were commanded by Lieutenant-General De Heister, with some other General officers under him; together with a numerous and well-appointed train of artillery, wagons, field equipage, and every other necessary preparation for taking the field. To these were added 1,000 of the English guards, under Colonel [Edward] Matthews, who, on the arrival of the Hessian troops at Spithead, immediately embarked in transports prepared for them.

Sir George Collier, in the Rainbow of 44 guns, Commodore Hotham, in the Preston of 50 guns, and four other men-of-war were appointed to escort this formidable force to America. The fleet having completed their water and provisions, and the wind admitting of their sailing, they left Spithead about the 20th of May, amounting in all to ninety-two sail, eighty-six of which were transports, and the rest men-of-war.

It was to be lamented that these troops were not ready to sail for America by the beginning of March, as it was the difference to Great Britain of almost a campaign. The easterly winds which prevail from February to the middle of May, would probably have made the passage out a very short one; and besides arriving in health from that cause, they would have been ready to take the field almost as soon as they sailed from Spithead. But by the injudicious protraction of their departure so late, they were subjected to contrary winds and calms, which made the voyage more than double what, in the other case, it would probably have been, and occasioned so powerful a reinforcement to be of very little use that year, by their arriving so late in the campaign.

The incidents of the voyage are little worth mentioning, except that some of the transports, by thick weather and other causes, separated from their convoy; the fogs on the banks of Newfoundland making it very difficult for the fleet to keep together. This disagreeable impediment continued till they arrived off the coast of Nova Scotia, and it was then found, upon coming into clear day light, that about seventeen sail of the convoy were missing.

Before the last War the French Newfoundland Fishery was pretty nearly equal to ours, but since we have taken away so much Country, & pent em up in such Narrow bounds, we have encreasd in the same proportion they have lost; at present from the best Informaiton I can get I apprehend our Fishery is double to that of the French, & that when this unhappy War with America broke out we catchd about 650,000 Quintals, three fourths of which we exported to Spain, Italy, & other Catholic Countries, the produce of which was not less than 300,000 Pounds, clear Profit every Year to England —how it may stand at present I know not but I think, the War must have advantagd rather than have hurt the Fishery of G.B. as the Americans are utterly excluded for the present, from participating in the Advantages arising from it.

We have again struck Soundings, & from the depth of Water & the Nature of the Ground, must have been within 5 or 6 Miles of that very dangerous Island, Sable whereon so many Mercht Ships are lost—the fogs have been for some Days so extremely thick, that it has made a continual Night, & what is more extraordinary have deadend Sounds So much, that the Sound of a Cannon cou'd not be heard 2 Miles off—it is not only unpleasant & uncomfortable but really unsafe to grope out the Road in the Dark in the manner we are forcd to do, especially as we are drawing near Dangers, & a Coast I am totally unacquainted with

Tho' I have taken every Precaut[ion] to preserve the Health of my People, I am concernd to find many Cases have answerd so indifferently—I have now Threescore on the Sick List occasiond by these penetrating Fogs, & there are some of em in great Danger, I hope a few Days more will bring us to Halifax that we may once more see Day light & clear Weather—

I have been seizd with the Fever that has prevaild & was confind a fortnight with a most severe illness; this is the first Time I have venturd out of my Cabin, & am reducd very low; we are at this Moment off the Harbour of Halifax, but from the Intelligence I reced from a Schooner an Hour ago, & wh[ich] I have sent to the Commodore, I imagine He will not go into Port, but proceed in Search of Lord Howe & the General who are gone with the Troops to New York. This will be a grievous Disappt to Many, but I am most sorry on Account of the Sick, who will suffer greatly by being forcd to continue at Sea perhaps a Month longer; but there is no repining when the Kings Service makes the Measure necessary; here it is apparently so, as the going into the Harbor woud occasion a Delay of a Week or 10 Days at least.

The Commodore (as I supposd) has sent me word He means immediately to proceed for New York, & He has made the Signal for the Masters of Merchantmen, to give em directions acc[ordingl]y—We are just joind by the [Carcass] Bomb & 15 Sail of Transports who parted Company at difft Times, [dur]ing the Fog—the Hospital Ship is still missing, & we are apprehensive She is lost upon the Isle of Sable, as she was last seen very near it, & the wind blowing fresh—She will be a considerable Loss to the Fleet, & Governmt perhaps will wish they had not orderd a considerable Sum of Money on board Her, which to the universal Surprize of every body was sent down at Portsmouth, as she has not Men sufficient to work her, & must be ill navigated, & if attckd by a couple of Privateers not calculated to make any Defence—

It is now 5 Weeks since we saild from Halifax, for New York, & have not yet atchievd our Passage nor know I when we shall; Storms Calms & Currents have been our Foes, & drove us I know not where for by the Reckonings we ought to have gained our Port a Fortnight ago—The Troops begin to be Sickly, & the Hessian General peevish & Discontented, yet how vain is Mans Anger against the Elements, & how little will it avail; for my Part without pretending to more Philosophy than my Neighbours, I am certainly tranquil at the unexpected length of the Passage, & my Impatience I feel to get into Port arises from my Concern for the Sick People, & for the Wellfare of my Country who must suffer extremely from this unfortunate Delay.

Indeed I have another very material Reason for wishing to get into some Harbor, & that is to recruit our Water of which we have but a very small Quantity remaining, tho every body has been at a Quart a Man, from the Day we left Halifax

You will wonder to hear that all the Water I have usd at my Table since leaving England has been as limpid & as pure as what Moses procurd

the Child[re]n of Israel from the Rock; we have without a Miracle as excellent a Rill of Water every Day, as the Earth can furnish; not to keep You longer in suspense I have a Still on board by which I procure a certain Quantity of Fresh Water from Salt Water, every Day, from 10 Galls to 30 it is considerable lighter than any other Water in the World & consequently more wholesome, it washes, & Shaves, & has every superior Property to other Water, & I absolutely esteem it the greatest Discovery of the present Age

We are at length arrivd at our Place of Destination & have joind our Friends; a bad Pilot run my Ship aground at the entrance of the River leading to New York, but fortunately the Water was smooth & little Wind, so that we got off without any Damage—I had soon afterwards a Message from Lord Howe to take the Charge of the Men of War & Transports that were left below the Narrows, as Commodore Hotham was gone up to join the Vice Admiral off Staten Island Every Thing breathes the Appearance of War the Number of Transports are incredible I believe there are more than 500 of different kinds, besides the Kings Ships—a Force so formidable woud make the first Power in Europe tremble; Genl Howes army with the Reinforcement we have brot Him, consists of 23 Thousand effective Men, —besides an Artillery more considerable than were ever brought before into the Field—We have various Accounts of the Force of the Rebels, some make em 60 Thousand others not more than half that Number; but let their Force be what it will, it never can stand against veteran Troops commanded by the best Officers in Europe & supported by a respectable Fleet of Thirty Men of War of different Sizes.

I have just been viewing some of the Batterys of the Enemy erected towards the Sea, & which tis imagind the Men of War are to attack; We are too far off to form much Judgmt. about 'em, they are said to be no less than 13 with [sentence unfinished]

Poor old Genl (de Heister) the Com[mande]r of the Hessian Troops is quite Tird & dispirited with the length of his Voyage; He has wrote a letter to the Commodore in wh He says ["]I have been deceivd by false Representations, for I was assurd that the Voyage woud not be longer than 5 or perhaps 6 Weeks; I have been embarkd already no less than 13 Weeks, & yet See no end to it, or a Probability of our landing—I am a poor old Man covered with Wounds & Infirmities, & shall die if I remain out much longer &c &c["] the Commodore begd of me to visit the old Veteran to comfort Him, which I did, having orderd a side of Mutton & some poultry to be put in the Boat, as I understood his fresh Provisions were exhausted—the old General receivd me in the Civilest manner He was capable of & obligd me to swallow repeated Potations of very good Hock to the Healths of our Sovereigns our Friends in Europe &c &c, this joind to the Musick of his Band which He called for exhilerated the old Gentlemans Spirits so much that He entirely forgot his Distresses, & Inconveniences & seemd perfectly Happy; I concluded my Visit rather sooner than I perhaps might have done fearing the Strength of his Hock which He pushed about without intermission.

New York 12 Augt [1776]

We are at length arrivd at this Place with most of the Convoy, but in coming in an unskilful Pilot run my Ship aground upon one of the Sands; there was luckily a very light Breeze of Wind & no Swell so we got off without Damage, & anchord with all the Convoy below the narrows & about 15 or 16 Miles from New York; we are in Sight of Lord Howes Flag, & Admiral Shuldhams, but the Numbers of Transports, Victuallers, &c are not to be counted appearing as thick as Trees in a Forest—the Hyde Packet Boat is just getting under Sail for England, so that I shall close this Letter to forward by Her; the incidents of a Sea Voyage are seldom replete with amusing Matter, & I fear that mine will afford no great Entertainment to You; it will however be a proof of my Remembrance, as I woud also have it of the warm Friendship & Respect with which I shall ever remain &c &c

Letter 7th

By the Hyde Packet I gave You an Acct of my arrival at New York which I hope will reach you I now go on with the narrative of our Proceedings.

Lord Howe having sent me Orders to join Him with the Convoy, I made the Signal for weighing, & in a short Time anchd off Staten Island near the Eagle, on which Ship his Lordships Flag is Flying. Every Thing breathes the Appearance of War, the Transports & Victuallers &c are extremely numerous I suppose (exclusive of the Kings Ships) there are 400 Sail, wh are protected by 33 Sail of Men of War. Genl Howes Army with the Reinforcements He has just receivd are not less than 24,000 Men besides an Artillery more considerable than was ever brought before into the Field. The Force of the Rebels is variously reported some making them 35 Thousand, & others averring they dont exceed 16 Thousand; I presume we shall know more exactly eer long, as the Genl will doubtless immediately, attack Washington, & as our Troops are veterans, & the finest in the World, Victory must declare for us, & if proper measures are pursued the Rebellion will very soon terminate.

The Troops I escorted here remaind the whole Voyage surprisingly Healthy; this was the more extraordinary considering we were 14 Weeks on our Passage—that few of em had ever seen the Sea before, & being Foreigners were naturally dirty, & unusd to the ways of a Ship; the Guards also arrivd with scarce a Man sick.

The Hessians were immediately landed, & formed a small separate Camp upon Staten Island; their Sick at that Time were not more than Thirty but wh was very extraor[dinar]y they had not been a Week on Shore before there was between 7 & 800 Men very ill, with Fevers, Diarrhea, & Scurvy, wh latter did not shew itself during our long Voyage tho' it did immediately on coming ashore.

I see with Indignation & Concern, the Rebel Colors insolently waving on the Batterys of New York, (which is about 6 Miles distant) they seem to have been attentive to their Security from the Number of Works they have constructed; I have just been up the River to reconnoitre them, & I reckon 13 Batterys & redoubts to obstruct our Approach; our People however are in high Spirits, the Ships are entirely cleard for Action, & we wait with Impatience for the Admirals Orders to proceed on the Attack.

I must own that the present Situation of this numerous Fleet is extremely critical as the Rebels have Six Fire Ships now in Sight lying close under the Cannon of the Town; the first dark night when the Wind blows strong down the River, they probably will send them in Flames to burn us, & I forsee if they attempt it the loss of half our Transports & Mercht Ships —who from Terror will cut their Cables, fall aboard of one another, & if not burnt will be wreckd on the Shore.

The Admiral has favord me with the Post of Honor, of lying advancd above all the Shipping & nearest to the Enemy; I therefore never go to Bed during the Night, nor do my Officers or Men; as our Safety (as well as the Fleets) depends on our Vigilance—Lord Howe has also taken the precaution to direct Ten armd Boats belonging to the Men of War to row guard about a Mile above us; this is certainly all that can be done, but it will prove very ineffectual (I am convincd) shoud the Rebels send down their Fire Ships favord by a strong Wind & Tide.

The Bristol of 50 Guns is arrivd this Morning with Sir P. Parker who has his broad Pendant hoisted on board Her; She is returnd from South Carolina where She & some Frigates engagd a Battery belonging to the Rebels, which in my Opinion they had better have let alone—having been very roughly handld, & reced something as like a Defeat as possible—the Main Mast of the Bristol was so much wounded they were obligd to take it out, & she arrivd here, with Jury Main Mast.— a Rebuff at this Time is unlucky, as it raises the Spirits of the Rebels, renders them more insolent, recruits their Forces, & will cause em [to] defend their Batteries with greater obstinancy from finding Ships are not allways victorious agt them.

I have this Morning rejoind the Comr in Chief, & the Phoenix of 44 Guns has taken my advancd Post; his L[ordshi]p communicated to me the intention of embarking the Army to morrow in Flat Boats & landing them in Gravesend Bay on Long Isld.—abreast of the Narrows, (which they are to pass,) there is a Stone House, which the Adml believes the Rebels [have] taken Post in & that they have Cannon mounted there, his Lp therefore has orderd the Rainbow to place herself before it at dawn of Day, in order to silence those Guns before the Army lands; & the same Position will also enfilade the Road allong which the Rebel Troops must march if they mean to oppose the landing.

23d Augt

The Granicus is passd,[2] & 15000 Men are landed on Long Island without a Drop of Blood spilt in opposition; I placd the Rainbow where Lord Howe directed, & the principal Engineer came on board to assist in directing our Fire, & to shew us such Americans as were Friends of Governmt whom we might otherwise possibly mistake for Rebels, & fire upon—the Rebels drew in their out posts, & went off, setting Fire to every Stack of Hay & Corn they coud meet with in their retreat; Genl Howe embarked with the second Division marchd to Utrecht a small Village near the place of Landing & establishd his Head Quarters there; Genl Lord Cornwallis commanded an advanced Post about 3 Miles further on.

At Ten yesterday Morning the Grenadiers & light Infantry consisting of 4000 Men led by Genl Clinton landed, without a Shot being fird at them;

The Detail of what passes on Shore is out of my Line, & I must refer You to the Gazette for the Movements of the Royal Army, except in those places where the Rainbow acted with them—Six Regimts of Hessians were embarkd at Staten Island, & joind Genl Howe—Skirmishes happend as the Troops advancd, who proceeded in 3 Columns allong different Roads led by Genls Clinton Lord Cornwallis & Grant—the latter surprizd a Rebel advancd Post in the Night, by having learnd their Parole & Counter sign; they were all put to Death by the Bayonet, as I observd the next Morning when I went to view the Place.

I must mention a very narrow Escape I had of being taken Prisoner by the Enemy, that very Evening, which being extremely pleasant, tempted me to walk in a pleasant Road which lay by the River side, imagining that Genl Grants Division had gone before; I had only one of my Lieutenants with me, & we saunterd on insensibly a considerable way in Conversation till we came to a large Sloop which being close to the Shore we luckily stoppd to look at; I suppose this might detain us a quarter of an Hour; when looking towards the Sun I observd that it was near setting & Time for us to return, which we did in safety; I learned our Danger afterwards for the Sloop we were looking at was within 50 Yards of an advanced Rebel Post, that was hid from us by a turn of the Road; this escape was not unuseful for I was afterwards more on my Guard, when I went on Shore.

The Rainbow moved upwards towards the Town as the Army advanced.

The Rebels constantly retreat before the Kings Troops, their Numbers upon Long Island are from 8000 to 10000 Men, all which from our great Superiority must be killd or taken Prisoners—many Skirmishes have happend, & the Enemy appear much frightend & disheartend; they abandon all their works as the Royal army advances—if we become Masters of this Body of Rebels (which I think is inevitable) the War is at an End; we have made Prisoners 2 of their Genls one calling himself Ld Stirling & the other Sullivan, besides many inferior Officers & about 1800 privates.

To my inexpressible astonishment & Concern the Rebel army have all escapd across the River to New York! how this has happend is surprizing, for had our Troops followd them close up, they must have thrown down their arms & surrenderd; or had our Ships attackd the Batteries, which we have been in constant Expectation of being orderd to do, not a Man coud have escapd from Long Island,—now, I foresee they will give us Trouble enough, & protract the War, Heaven knows how long—

A perfect Panick seizd them from our Landing & they never dared make a stand any where to look our Troops in the Face, even their Batteries & different works on Long Island were all abandond with the least Defence—we, & some other of the Men of War are now lying just within Random Shot of the Guns of New York—the Army are preparing to cross the East River & when they do so, I suppose we shall make an Attack with the Ships upon the Town—

I know not what Mr Washington & his army are doing, but ours have been totally inactive Since the retreat of the Rebels, which has occasioned universal Dissatisfaction in the Fleet & army—The Enemy have now Time to breathe & to throw up fresh Works to make our approach to the City more difficult—I understand the Ships will not be able to go close to their Batteries from their having placd sharp Stakes pointed with Iron (calld Chevaux de frise) by way of sinking our Ships if they shoud strike against them

6th Sept 1776

Lord Howe having receivd some Accounts that the Rebels meditate an Attack upon our very important Settlement of Halifax, has orderd me to Sail for that place directly, & given me the Command of the Squadron now there; I am therefore preparing to go the first Moment the Winds will permit, for tho we are Lords of the Ocean, we are not so of the Air, & we must patiently wait till Mr Boreas gives us a Passport to proceed.

adieu

Halifax Sept 1776

I found Halifax in perfect Quietness at my Arrival, & nothing worth mentioning occurd in the Passage, except our being very near wreckd on some sunken Rocks called Breakers in a Thick Fog which prevails constantly, in these Seas between April & November.

Mr Arbuthnot who [is] Lieut Govr here, is also Commissioner of the Navy, besides wh' He has a Commission from the Admiralty as Commodore to command the Kings Ships who might arrive in this Harbor—my arrival was therefore disagreeable both to Him & myself as I (tho a junior Officer) came to disposses Him of the Command of the Ships which of all His three Employments he was best pleasd with—Lord Howe had undoubtedly strong Reasons for superceding Mr Arbuthnot, but it was no very agreeable Service for me to execute, & the more as it seemd rather doubtful whether the Commodore woud resign his Command, as I had no particular Commission from his Lordship my Powers being only expressd in my general Orders.

I arrivd before the Town during the Night, & next Morning sent one of my Officers to the Lt Govr & to the Genl with their publick Dispatches I added a private Letter to Mr Arbuthnot letting Him know the disagreeable errand I was come upon of superceding Him—that it was neither sought for, nor desird by me; that as matters then stood, I coud only consider Him as a Captain in the Navy on half pay & as such not eligible to give Orders to those in Commiss[io]n—& as Commissr of the Navy, He coud have no pretensions to it—I added that on future occasions I shoud rejoice to serve under so old & good an Officer as Himself, but to do so in this Case, was impracticable.

I visited the old Gentn soon after who receivd me with Civility but wth apparent Concern; I repeated to Him the purport of my Letter, & added that all the difference He shoud find was having the troublesome part of the Duty taken off his Hands, for that his Wishes woud ever be executed by me if I knew them whilst I had the Honor of commanding at this port. after appearing a short Time like a sulky froward Child, He laid down the Truncheon with as good a Grace as He coud, but seemed much exasperated agt Lord Howe, paying me at the same Time the Comp[limen]t of saying as his Lordship had thot proper to supercede Him no one was more agreeable to Him to commd here than myself.*

Tho' Ld H. did not assign publickly his Reasons for displacing Commodore A. tho they may be guessd at from his not declaring them It was not difficult to judge of—when the Army evacuated Boston, they proceeded under the protection of Vice Adml Shuldham & the Men of War to Halifax where they remaind from March till June & then saild to the Southward—Lord Howe arrivd there the latter end of July, & finding the Fleet & Army gone from thence did not enter the Harbor; Comr Arbuthnot went down to wait on the Admiral, & upon his being askd where the Ships & Troops were gone to, averrd He was ignorant of their destination, neither coud He guess which amazd Ld Howe inconceivably, as no doubt it ought—He askd if Adml S. had left no Orders where the Ships were to join Him, which Mr A. assurd his Lordship He did not—Ld Howe lifted up his Hands & Eyes at this Account.

Some Time afterwards I arrivd there with Com Hotham, & 90 Sail of Transports & Men of War; we forbore to enter the Harbor for the same Reason Ld H did not, but sending up to Com. A for the Place of Rendezvous, He wrote us word He coud neither tell or even form a judg[men]t where they were—Mr H[otham] as well as my self were astonishd at such uncommon proceedings of Adml Shuldham, & upon Consultation judgd it most eligible to proceed with the Fleet to New York, wh[ich] we did, tho still in the Dark whether we shoud meet Friends, or Enemies there

The unriddling this mystery is, that on Ld Howes joining Adml S. at N.Y. He reproachd Him with the very unofficer like Conduct of leaving no place of Rendezvous when He came away from Halifax; Mr Shuldham expressd amazement at the charge, telling his L[ordshi]p, He had left a large Sheet of Paper close written, with Directions to Mr A[rbuthnot] for such Ships of War as might arrive & particularly ordering they shd follow the Fleet to N.Y. that the Words N.Y. & Sandy Hook were expressd in 5 or 6 difft places in that Paper, which He sent to Com. A. by his Secretary the Day before he saild from H[alifax] & that at Breakfast He askd Him if He had receivd them, which the other acknowledgd—it came out in the End that Mr A[rbuthnot] had put this Letter unopend into his Pocket, & never rememberd it, till a considerable Time afterwards that He accidentally pulled it out, & for the first Time read those Orders the ignorance of which might have producd the most pernicious Consequences to the Kings Service

As it will probably be my Destination to remain a considerable Time on this Station, I will give you a slight Description of Halifax, & its Environs—

This place is to the Southward of England being situated in the Latd [blank] Longd [blank] W, & about 2500 Miles from London;—at the entrance of the Harbor is a Light House to warn the approaching Marriner of the Rocks & Dangers which are near it; in proceeding up towards the Town the Harbor narrows to a kind of a River about the breadth of the Thames at Wes[illegible] which terminates about 12 Leags up in a round Bason remarkable for its amazing depth of Water having 80 or 90 F[atho]m in many parts of it, tho that of the Harbor is in general between 6 & 13. about 7 Leags from the Light House stands the Town of Halifax laid out in streight Streets which are intersected by others; the Ground is very irregular, & rises gradually to a ridge of high Hills, on the Summit of wh. is a Wooden block House surrounded by a Battery of 8 Cannon—this Place is calld the Citadel.

The Houses are all built of Wood except one, belonging to the Secretary of the Province, & tho they cut a very indifft appearance from without, there are few of them but have at least one good Room to entertain their Company in the Inhabitants are chiefly composd of People who hold Offices under the Crown; The Officers of the Army composing the Garrison, some of desperate Fortunes who call themselves Merchts (sevl of whom by buying & selling Prize Goods have amassd handsome Sums) & Shopkeepers who likewise assume the Name of Merchts—& Fleece those who deal with them pretty handsomely, to their great Emolument—

The Governors House tho built likewise of Wood is a handsome & very convenient Structure tis in the Centre of the Town, & has a pleasant view of the Harbor, Shipping, & opposite Shores—the lower kind of People were chiefly born in America, & from their Connexions with New England are not very well inclind to his Majs Govt however the number of Troops stationd here keep them in awe & they dare not publickly declare their rebellious Sentiments—many of em carry on a private Correspondence with Boston, & by that means supply the Rebels with Things they most stand in need of: I cant say that I took any great Pains to obstruct their Exportation of Goods from the Opinion that tho they were sent to the Rebels, it was ultimately an Advantage to G. Britain; because if they were not supplyd by us, the Americans woud get the Commoditys they wanted from the French, in any Quantitys, & when a Channel of Trade is once regularly establishd it is not very easily turnd into another Course; this consideration joind to knowing the return for those goods must be in Specie, made me as I observd before take no precaution to prevent their Exporting what they pleasd—

The Kings careening Yard is placd about half a Mile above the Town; there are large convenient arsenals & Store houses built of Stone, which contain the various Articles wanted for the Navy; a good House for the Commis[sione]r Stands in the Center of it.

Provisions are dear tho they are not scarce, meat in the Spring is from a Shillg to 10 Pence a Pound, at the cheapest Time it is Sixpence; Fish is very plentiful from May till October, but after that month they retire into deeper Water. The price of Labor is incredible; Six Shills a Day I have known frequently given for Laborers & for Artificers such as Carpenters or

Bricklayers &c they may make what Demand they please & look upon their Employer besides under an obligation to them for working for Him—

Fuel is another Article extremely dear, which considering the uncleard State of the Country seems at first, surprizing; but the Price of Labor to cut the Trees down & afterwards reduce em to proper sizes for burning, tog[ethe]r with the expence of Carriage makes it come to a great deal of Money especially when the length of the Winters is considerd for the cold Weather begins in October & lasts till the end of May; I have myself seen in that Month a heavy & very severe snow Storm attended with piercing cold—

There is only one Road out of Town which leads to the interior Parts of the Province it is fit for a Carriage as far as the head of the Lake (or Bason before mentiond) which is about 12 Miles the rest of the Way is almost in its rude State & fit only to Travel on Horseback

They have cut down the Wood for 2 or 3 Miles round the Town, but all the rest of the Country is one rude Desart thick crowded as possible with Trees which principally consist of what they call Hemlock, good for few uses & not fit to burn

The Winters are dreary, long, & severely cold but it is not the settld wholesome Cold of Canada & Russia, where when the Frost once sets in the Weather remains settld & clear, & the Sun shines chearfully; on the contrary, at Halifax you seldom have the same Weather for 3 Days together but deep Snows are succeeded by Rains, & those by Frosts so that those who walk out both Men & Women are obligd to have Galoshes over their Shoes, & at the bottom Spikes fix'd on (which they call Creepers) to prevent them from falling on the slippery Ground—

The Quantity of wild Strawberrys Rasberries & Gooseberrys in those Spaces in the woods where there are no Trees is astonishing You cant walk without treading upon the Strawberrys; the Gooseberries are thin rind like our Grapes, & like em in Size; they are better than the Garden ones for Tarts, & for preserving.

There is no venomous Creatures nor Beasts of Prey in the Province but of wild ones there are the Moose, besides the Martin & many sorts of Squirrels & Beaver; Epicures praise highly the Moose's Nose, & the Tail of the Beaver, I have eaten of both, but admire neither—the Moose is a very large Creature of the Ox kind; but infinitely bigger.—

You will conclude me now as settled in the command & that I gave such Orders to the Men of War as appeard necessary; I will therefore spare You the Trouble of reading dull particulars of Ships sailing & Prizes bringing in, wh happend continually tho I reapd no Benefit from it.

But I must relate in as few Words as I can a disagreeable Difference wh happend between Major Genl [Eyre] Massey who commanded the Kings Troops in the Province, & myself, as it made a good deal of Noise, & ended at last in his Recal to England—

This Man was violent in his Temper brutal in his Manners, ignorant, & consequently overbearing, & insolent; He was generally dislikd by the Army, & when Genl Howe went away from hence He was glad to find a pretence to leave Massey behind at Halifax.

For about 2 Months after my Arrival He behaved with that fawning Civility which the low Irish frequently practice & wh is so fulsome & disagreeable, but it was not the Nature of the Animal to be upon good Terms with any body long, & He did not seem inclind to except me out of his general Rule.

To relate every particular of the rise, continuance & termination of our Dispute woud take up more of yr Time to read than I woud employ on so disagreeable a Subject; I will touch upon the Heads, & if hereafter you shd be inclinable to know more I shall present the Sheets to You which contain the full account of that Business—

The outposts of this Garrison are some of them more than 200 Miles distant, & not possible in the Winter to Supply them wth Provisions by Land, it was therefore allways usual to compleat them in July or at latest in August; Genl Masseys Neglect & forgetfulness had made Him omit this most necessary Supply & the Posts found themselves almost without Provisions in the beginning of Novr; Massey alarmed at the Consequences made Application to me for a Man of War to go up the Bay of Fundy upon this occasion—it was a bad & dangerous Service at that advanced Time of Year from the intense Cold Weather, continual Storms, & Tides so rapid that they rose & fell upwards of 70 Feet—I mentiond these difficultys to the Genl but I notwithstanding sent the Man of War—She was blown back & Massey was raving at the distress his Neglect had reducd the out posts to He swore, He cursd & behavd like a frantick Mad Man, blaming the Capt of the Man of War for not arriving at the Port He was bound to, tho Massey knew no more of Sea Matters than a Savage of the Woods—He behavd too with personal rudeness to the Capt When He went to wait upon Him, which the other came to complain of to me, & I mentiond it afterwards in a gentle manner to Massey reminding Him that Sea Officers were only accountable to me for their Conduct—

I took care however his neglect shoud be remedied & his Garrisons supplyd, & we rubbd on a little longer with the appearance of being upon tolerable Terms, however He took occasion to be offended at something or other (I really have forgot what it was) but He sent his Aid de Camp Capt Wade to desire me to meet Him the next Morning with Pistols behind the Citadel Hill—I must with Shame acknowledge his Folly made me so angry that I consented to meet Him, & went at the app[ointe]d Time accompanyd by Capt [Andrew] Barkley—the Genl & Capt Wade joind us as we were going to the Ground the 2 Seconds lamented that so slight a misunderstanding shoud have brot us into the Field, & wishd Matters might proceed no further—I own I saw the Impropriety of it, & the fatal Consequences which must follow from the 2 chief Officers of Navy & Army going out to fight at a Time, when we were surrounded by the Enemies of our Country—I made this Observation to Genl Massey & told Him I flatterd myself from wh[at] He saw That He woud not ascribe the Motive of what I was going to say since I was still ready to give him Satisfaction if He desird it, but that I thought certain Ruin must attend whoever survivd, as his Majy woud certainly never pass over so great an Injury offerd to his Service & must naturally conclude both Parties undeserving to command who coud behave so very improperly I added that I was not in the least Conscious of having given Him Offence, or at least not intended it, & advisd Him to reflect for a few Minutes before He took his Resolution—in saying which I left Him by himself & walkd 20 Yards backward & forward with the 2 Seconds. When I rejoind Him he appeard irresolute & undetermind; I repeated what I had said, & He replyd that He woud not make any Ansr till the Lt Governor had given his Opinion upon it—

We all four accordingly walkd to the Lt Govrs & I let Massey tell [th]e Story his own way, the Govr blamd Him & was rejoicd to have the Termination left to his decision, He instantly obligd us to shake Hands, & promise to remain Friends for the future; this Reconciliation on my part was truly sincere, on Masseys I fear it never was, as the sequel shewd—

It was in about 2 Months after that He took the strange Resolution of turning all the sick Seamen from off Georges Island (abreast of the Town) where the Naval Hospital was under Pretence of fortifying it; had I been as mad as himself I coud by Force have prevented this inhuman Measure from being executed, but a Civil War of this kind woud have been as blameable as new; the poor sick Seamen were accordingly turnd off the Island & carried ashore below the Town in a heavy Rain—some of these unhappy Men were at the point of Death, others with Fevers & various other Disorders; there were amongst them Some whose Wounds were still open & dangerous; Wounds they had receivd in the Service of their Country, fighting like brave Men; their Treatment however from this frantic Madman was the same with the rest, all were indiscriminately forcd into the Boats, & landed in heavy Rain in wh they remaind 24 Hours before any Shelter coud be found by the Surgeons for them.

I was not the only Person who was filld with Indignation upon this occasion the Pity of the whole Town was calld up for the unhappy sufferers, & had I blowd the Coals or seemd to encourage it, I am persuaded Massey woud have been torn Limb from Limb—whatever I felt on this Account I kept it to myself, & endeavord to assuage the Storm that was on the point of bursting from the People. I was not however so tranquil as to take no Steps to prevent a Repetition of these Outrages; I orderd a Man of War to get ready to Sail for New York, in order to lay the Affair before Lord Howe & the General, & request that either this absurd Bedlamite or myself might be recalld—Whilst this Ship was getting ready, an armed Sloop belonging to Massey anchd near the Rainbow, & hoisted a large Pendant, which as She had no right to wear a Mark of Distinction designd only for Men of War, She was sent to, by the Officer who commanded on bd the Rainbow for I was on Shore, to have it down, wh was peremptorily refusd by the Sloop, who pleaded Masseys Orders for not striking it—

Upon my return on bd & being made acquainted with this Insult, I sent one of the Lieuts with Orders positively to strike it, & directed Him also to take with Him the King's Orders in Council to shew the Officer who commanded in the Sloop that what I did was by His Majs Authority; & that He had not the smallest right to wear a Pendant.

The Land Officer who was in the Sloop was of the Race of Wrongheads also, He refusd to read the Kings Order, & declard He woud put to Death any who should attempt to strike the Sloops Pendant—My Orders were peremptory, & they were executed without this Mans Threats being carried into Execution the Pendant was struck, & brot on Bd the Rainbow.

*I must at the Distance of 3 Years add a Note to mention, that notwithstanding these Civil professions, my superceding Him ever rankld in this Mans Heart, & He never forgave me for it; I was long a stranger to this, but Experience at length convinced me of it I must add that the substantial part He has still retained, tho I commanded I mean the Salary of 500 a Year for being Commodore; the labor ostensibleness & expence of that Office was sustained by me, without being allowd a Shilling from Government for it, tho it insuitably cost me treble Appointmts from the Rainbow
