Expect The Unexpected.

The Uncommon Garden is a privately-owned garden designed by Rick Hermanson that has grown from creativity and imagination and blossoms through the hands of sculptors and artists. Unlike any place on earth, this sculptural landscape is truly inspiring with its rock assemblages, water features, detailed mosaic inlays, exquisite collection of Japanese Maples and surprises at every twist and turn of its winding path.

The Uncommon Garden will be open for just one day. Timed tickets are limited. Parking is provided at Timberlyne Shopping Center and shuttle busses leave 15 minutes before each tour begins. For more information, please visit our website. All proceeds benefit The ArtsCenter.

SUMMER DELIGHTS

In case you're curious, the official start of summer is 7:59 p.m. on June 20. By then, however, most of us will have already made the mental leap.

July and August may have full claim to the season, but June is where it flourishes — the perfect combination of bearable weather and relative freedom.

It's reunion season as well, and prime time for cookouts, potlucks, bedeviling eggs and camping out. On pages 8 and 9 in this issue of MILL, we offer up a quick list of some of our favorite afternoon adventures.

Feel free to send in a few of your own to the MILL blog at www.carrborocitizen.com/mill

As an FYI: If this is the first time you've picked up a copy of MILL, or if you're a regular but still trying to figure out when it arrives, please note that we publish each issue on the Thursday closest to the first of the month. That's why this one — the June MILL — is tucked into the last May issue of The Citizen.

In addition to the 5,000 copies we distribute through The Citizen, we also print extra copies of MILL and distribute them at locations in Carrboro, Chapel Hill, Hillsborough and Pittsboro. If your business would like to become a regular distribution point for MILL, please let us know by sending an email to delivery@carrborocitizen.com or calling us direct here at our offices in One Citizen Tower at 942-2100. — KIRK ROSS

MILL WORKS

JIM MASSEY*

Dr. Jim Massey is a retired botanist from UNC and the former curator of the North Carolina Herbarium. On the cover of this month's MILL is a rather exuberant example of elephant garlic photographed last year, just prior to the annual spring sale at Massey's Holly Hill Day Lilly Farm in Haywood. While the garlic's nice, what draws folks by the hundreds out to Holly Hill in early June are the thousands of unique lilies and crinums Massey has so carefully cultivated over the years. Many a garden around here has a Massey original. His farm is a work of art as well, with a unique assortment of garden art and unusual poultry. In addition to the blooms, the big attraction at Holly Hill is Massey's growing collection of folk art, housed in the former Haywood post office, which was moved to the farm a few years ago and refurbished. Directions are on the web at hollyhilldaylilies.com. When you see the giant Elvis, you're at the right place.

Call For Submissions

The Carrboro Citizen is seeking fiction and creative nonfiction works for a new series in MILL, our monthly arts, music and literature magazine. Submissions should be sent in digital format and be roughly 500 words in length. Please include a short biographical note and, if possible, a photo of yourself. Though there is no monetary compensation, a handsome basket of gift certificates and candy will be presented to writers chosen for the series.

Send all works to editor@carrborocitizen.com

Summer stuff

The cooler days of June are perfect for experiencing some of our area's adventures. And with gas prices what they are, this may be the summer of the short-hop adventure. Here are a few of our favorites on the June calendar

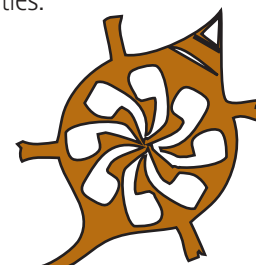

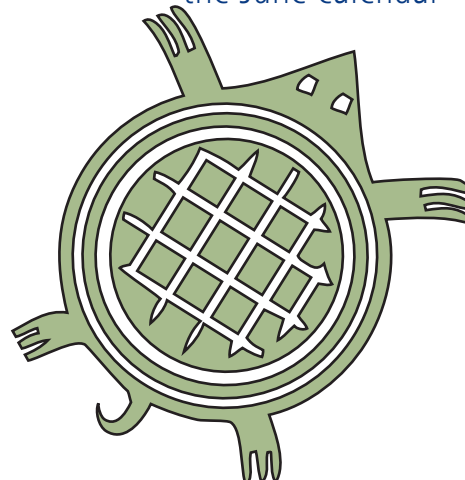

Holly Hill Daylily Farm

The annual daylily sale is the main draw, but Jim Massey has turned his three acres into an art garden. His collection of folk art is housed nearby in the old Haywood post office. The farm is open weekends through June. Times and directions at hollyhilldaylilies.com

Botanical Garden

If you can't get out among the lily pads on Ulake, you can still get up close with them at the water gardens at the North Carolina Botanical Garden. On a warm day, try a walk through the shady, cool mountain habitat. Something about seeing rhododendrons lowers the temperature. Keep your eye out for special programs for kids and families at ncbg.unc.edu. On June 8, for instance, naturalist Bob Palmatier hosts "The Secret Life of Turtles."

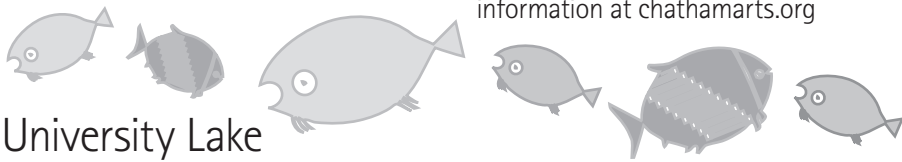

Galumphia acrobatics troupe

Fiesta Latina

For obvious reasons, this would be a good time to contribute to the coffers of the Hispanic Liaison of Chatham County. You can also have a swell time showing your solidarity by heading out to Shakori Hills on June 21 for their annual Fiesta Latina. It's kid friendly and the food alone is worth the trip. But stick around for the music, which can range from Brazilian guitars to Raleigh punk rockers to Norteño. Also returning is Galumphia, a world-famous acrobatics troupe. More information at evhnc.org

University Lake

Last year, the dry grassbeds that were once a thriving part of University Lake were a sad sight from the causeway on Jones Ferry Road. What better way to celebrate the recent rains than with a tour of the refilled reservoir by rowboat? The lake is open Friday through Monday from 6:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Recreation includes boat and electric motor rentals and fishing and a picnic area.

Snow Camp

One of North Carolina's famed outdoor dramas, Sword of Peace recalls the struggles of our area's Cane Creek Quaker community during the Revolutionary War. The production, which relies on volunteers and donations, is now in its 35th season. Opening night this year is June 26. Tickets and information at snowcampdrama.com

Potluck in a Pasture

In addition to being a regular at local farmers' markets, Ayshire Farm founder Bill Dow has been a chief source of fine organic vegetables for local restaurants for decades. He opens up his doors for a potluck dinner in conjunction with Chatham Arts on Sunday, June 29 from 6-8 p.m.

Featured artists include musicians Susan Ketchin and Sarah Shook, mural artist Erick Davis, woodwork artisan Diane Swan and Rambler magazine publishers Dave Korzon and Elizabeth Oliver. More information at chathamarts.org

The cast of the outdoor drama Sword of Peace.

John Howie

Saxapahaw

There may be no better way to take in a band on a Saturday afternoon than from a blanket spread on the grassy hill just up from the old mill in Saxapahaw. Check out the farmers' market and food vendors or take a stroll down to the Haw and skip some stones. Music runs from 6-8 p.m. through the summer. The farmers' market goes from 5-8 p.m.
