What's pollinating black cohosh?

Anne Lindsey - botanical researcher and teacher and co-author, with husband Ritchie Bell, of the second edition of Wild Flowers of North Carolina - has several of us asking that question these days about whatever flower we may be observing.

Anne is making us aware that all those bees and wasps and beetles and ants and butterflies and all the rest are not flying about trying to attack humans. They are way too intent on finding pollen and nectar to survive to bother with us, unless we make motions to interfere with their nests.

When we do stop to think about pollinators, we most likely think of honey bees. As important as honey bees are, they are only a tiny bit of the pollination story. Thousands of native insects are the real pollinators upon which our whole way of life is dependent.

For example, hundreds of species of solitary bees alone go about their lives searching for pollen and nectar, and in doing so help hundreds of plants succeed in making seed to continue a collective vital role making our natural world function.

County votes to put sales tax option on November ballot

BY SUSAN DICKSON Staff Writer

The Orange County Board of Commissioners voted unanimously on Tuesday to put a quarter-cent sales-tax referendum on the November ballot.

The move followed the board's final approval of the county's $175.3 million 2010-11 budget, which included steep cuts to county departments, nonprofit agencies and both school districts.

The budget maintains the current ad valorem-tax rate of 85.8 cents per $100 of valuation and represents a $2.3 million decrease from the $177.6 million 2009-10 budget and an $8.5 million decrease from the 2009-10 amended budget. The budget would also maintain the Chapel Hill-Carrboro City Schools special district-tax rate at 18.84 cents per $100 of valuation.

In the 2007 state budget, the legislature gave counties the option of a quarter-cent sales-tax increase or a 0.4 percent land-transfer tax to help compensate for money taken away from counties when the responsibility for paying for Medicaid was turned over to the state.

Orange County voters overwhelmingly rejected a transfer tax referendum in May 2008.

"Whether we like it or not, we are in a situation where we only have a limited number of revenue sources," County Manager Frank Clifton said. "Without additional revenues, county services are going to deteriorate at a greater rate than they have in the past."

If voters approve the sales-tax increase, the Orange County sales-tax rate, which would apply to all goods and services except food and medicine, will increase from 7.75 to 8 percent. The revenue from the tax increase would not be shared with the state or local municipalities. According to Clifton, the tax could generate $2.3 million annually, though revenues for fiscal year 2010-11 would be minimal.

Board members said they supported putting the sales-tax referendum on the November ballot as an alternative revenue source to property taxes, but said they would postpone a decision on how the money would be allocated if the referendum were approved in order to give the public the chance to weigh in on that decision.

Several board members indicated they would like to see the money go toward economic development.

Board approves spending plan

BY KIRK ROSS Staff Writer

CARRBORO — The Carrboro Board of Aldermen gave final approval Tuesday night to an $18,525,685 annual budget for fiscal year 2010-11. The town's tax rate remains at 58.94 percent per $100 valuation of taxable property.

At the board's second to last meeting before the summer break, Mayor Mark Chilton thanked Town Manager Steve Stewart for avoiding a tax increase given a drop in revenues.

Stewart's plan includes $560,500 in equipment purchases, much of that for replacement of a fire suppression truck and solid waste boom truck. Town employees will get a one-time bonus of $455 for full-time town employees and a pro-rated bonus based on hours for part-time employees. The budget also raises the town's living wage to $11.78 per hour.

In other action Tuesday night, the board voted to delay action on a minor modification to the Balentine Architecturally Integrated Subdivision conditional use permit. Builder M/I Homes is seeking the go-ahead for the 96-unit project off Old N.C. 86. The company wants to build 62 single-family homes and 34 townhomes in an area between Lake Hogan Farms and Orange County's Twin Creeks Park property. Two other phases of the project are also being designed, according to M/I Homes' Jeremy Medlin. Medlin told the board that based on feedback at a previous hearing before the board and further feedback from the town, the company is modifying its plan for the future phases of the project to increase the density and add a small commercial area, likely a small building with a couple of apartments above it.

The Class of 2010

There wasn't a sporting event on the floor of the Smith Center on Saturday; but throughout the day, the place did echo with plenty of cheering.

Graduation exercises for all three high schools in the Chapel Hill-Carrboro school district started at 9 a.m. with Pomp and Circumstance, quickly followed by the East Chapel Hill High School choral ensemble's gospel-tinged version of Let It Be. Other highlights included Principal Eileen Tully's musings on life and the slip-'n'-slide constructed on the school lawn as a senior prank. She encouraged graduates to take life slowly and appreciate all of its quirks.

At Chapel Hill High School's early afternoon commencement, new Principal Jesse Dingle told graduates how proud he was to be their principal. He praised their competitive spirit, but encouraged humility.

"Envy is not competitiveness," he said.

In the late afternoon, the occasional roll of thunder punctuated the smaller, but equally enthusiastic ceremony for Carrboro High School's second graduation exercise.

Carrboro Principal Kelly Batten said that while last year's class will be remembered for a lot of firsts, the Class of 2010 also should be remembered for its key roll in the school's early history, including the formation of student tutoring and recycling programs.

nated in The Goddess Suite, performed by women in praise of women.

"I feel like I tapped into some inspiration flowing through me," Crossen said. "It was a gift to me, but it came through collaboration." The debut was in the Forest Theater, with other performances around the Triangle during 1986 and '87.

"We shall work for change, we shall work for peace."

Her only child, a son named Jesse, was 4 when she conceived and first delivered the suite. She continued a life of serving her community through song and projects and through the Haw River Assembly, where she provides creekside environmental education programs. Then last October, a challenge was posed to Crossen - to revive The Goddess Suite.

SPOTLIGHT: TRKfest

The third annual TRKfest will be held Saturday, June 26, from 2 to 11 p.m. at Piedmont Biofuels in Pittsboro.

TRKfest began as a one-day music festival and fundraiser for the Trekky Records Collective in 2008. Although it was initially intended to be a one-time event, the festival has become an annual institution.

The event will feature live performances by Vibrant Free, Ezekiel Graves, Yardwork, Ryan Gustafson, Butterflies, Veelee, Mount Moriah, Midtown Dickens, Embarrassing Fruits, Hammer No More the Fingers, Lost in the Trees and Megafaun.

Other activities include local arts and crafts, the Pants-off Dance-off, a coffee sack race, a Cool Kids yoga session, a musical chairs cakewalk, free haircuts, local food and more. Participants are welcome to bring chairs and blankets.

Admission is a $10 suggested donation. Piedmont Biofuels is located at 220 Lorax Lane in Pittsboro.

Briefs

Tyson, Rev. Barber arrested at sit-in

Author and Chapel Hill resident Timothy Tyson along with North Carolina NAACP head Rev. William Barber and two others were arrested after a sit-in protest at a Wake County board of education meeting Tuesday in Raleigh.

Tyson told the Citizen he is concerned by the boards recent actions saying their policies could reverse years of efforts following the end of segregated schools.

"I was raised in a Christian tradition where love is something you do, not just something you feel. The conservative anti-diversity coalition on the school board is acting in a way that is destructive to our public schools," Tyson said... "We've seen this type of politics for a long time, and we're not going to sit idly by and let a coalition of the cynical and self-serving and misguided destroy the public schools in North Carolina and all we've accomplished here.

Cable Channel 265 moves to 180

Starting on June 16, viewers wanting to watch the Orange County government on digital cable will have to switch to channel 180. The change is part of Time Warner's recent channel realignment. Monthly meetings of the board of county commissioners held in Chapel Hill will be broadcast live, while those taking place in Hillsborough will be played the following day. All meetings will be re-broadcast daily at noon and 7 p.m.

Public library approaches milestone

Chapel Hill's Public Library is fast approaching a milestone – one million items checked out in a year. The library expects to reach the mark on either June 18 or 19, and plans to celebrate. Visitors on Friday and Saturday will all receive "Thanks a Million!" pencils and will be entered into a drawing for prizes such as an eReader, an MP3 player and a $30 dollar gift card toward purchase of books.

"Each and every patron has led us to this new record," said Maggie Hite, the library's head of circulation. "We plan to thank everyone."

Hillsborough police drop accreditation

The Hillsborough Police Department has withdrawn from the Commission on Accreditation of Law Enforcement Agencies, a nonprofit organization that works with law enforcement agencies to uphold record keeping and documentation standards. Department officials say the decision was based on the department's incomplete documentation of compliance with the commission's standards and said they dropped their participation because they would not have been ready for an onsite inspection by the agency in August.

UNC to hold information meeting

UNC is encouraging local residents to attend a public information meeting concerning the permitting process required by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the planned development of Carolina North. The university expects to submit an application to the corps later in the year. UNC cites wetlands as their primary concerns about the project. The meeting will be Monday at 5 p.m. in the theater room at the Seymour Senior Center on Homestead Road. Another public meeting will be held following the submission of the application.

OWASA Approves rate increase

The OWASA board of directors approved a rate increase averaging 9.25 percent last week. The hike raises rates $6.95 for customers using 5,000 gallons of service per month.

The OWASA board cited declining water sales and a need to replace out-of-date infrastructure as factors in the decision. The increase is expected to cover a 1.7 percent net budget increase for 2011, which includes money for the resumption of water-testing programs suspended as a result of budget limitations in 2010. Next year's budget also sets aside $9.7 million to pay off bonds issued to fund now-completed capital projects.

That project won't be ready for submission to the town for review until late summer or early fall, Medlin said.

Jay Bryan, who lives across Old N.C. 86 from the project, asked the board to consider sending it to the Northern Transition Advisory Committee for review. Bryan said he was concerned about the location of a proposed entrance for the development as well as its future phases.

Board members said future phases of the project would be reviewed by the advisory committee and delayed taking action on the first two phases of the plan until its next meeting on June 22.

Also at Tuesday's meeting, the board of aldermen:

- received a report from Friends of Bolin Creek on the group's conservation and restoration project;
- received an update on the Bolin Creek Greenway plans;
- heard an update on Safe Routes to School plans for Carrboro and McDougle elementary schools;
- set the date for reopening a public hearing on plans for Smith Level Road for September 7;
- approved a resolution declining an offer from OWASA to purchase 73 acres of OWASA-owned land off Jones Ferry Road and Old Greensboro Highway;
- authorized the town manager to move ahead with the design of the Wilson Park multi-use path;
- amended the contract for use of the Century Center to include an anti-discrimination clause; and
- appointed filmmaker Richard Jaimeyfield, a resident of the Hillsborough Road neighborhood, to the town planning board.

Builder wants fees lowered

Builder Cam Hill said he's finally found sound tenants for the Cleo Sterling building on N.C. 54, but wants to see the town lower its fees before he proceeds with upfit plans.

Hill, speaking at a Carrboro Board of Aldermen meeting Tuesday night, said he's been frustrated over the years because the town's building code would require either sprinklers or an expensive division of the building before its use could be changed from manufacturing.

With a manufacturing tenant lined up, he wants to go ahead with dividing and renovating the space, but says the town is asking for exorbitant fees for the building permits. Under one renovation plan, the town's fee would represent 60 percent of the cost of the job, he said.

He asked the board to reduce the fee, citing its interest in economic development.

Board member Dan Coleman said he agreed that the fees should be looked at.

"It's our top priority to have economic development in Carrboro," he said, "and here it is standing right in front of us."

Board members agreed to review Hill's request for lowering the fee at their June 22 meeting.

"We shall find our wisdom in the dreams we weave."

The request came from perhaps the only person who could have helped Crossen find her way to agreement – Hope Wilder, her daughter-in-law. Crossen took the request with her as she spent her 60th birthday on a solo campout on the family land, where Jesse and Hope now also have a home. She remembered the "spirit of love, inclusion and connectedness with people and community" during the previous performances, while concentrating on staying centered within herself, her mission for this period of her life.

Wilder, 25, on a break from teaching as a result of Lyme disease, agreed to co-produce. "I had no idea what I was getting into," she said. But the rewards – the reception by women willing to participate, the chance to witness the melding of talents and further consecration of the love of her mother-in-law – have overshadowed the work involved.

"Athena, help us weave a new dream."

"Hope is an amazing human being and she's going to be standing on my shoulders," Crossen said. "She's been a wonderful partner in this."

Each of the four performances will be a fundraiser for local nonprofits representing traits or needs of the seven goddesses profiled in the work. The 30-plus women involved range in age from 11 to near 70. There are singers, a keyboardist, flautists, percussionists, a cellist and dance interpreters, all conducted by Sheila Fleming.

There have been pre-show parties, and groups of women have gathered their children and friends to attend.

"We opened the door to people we didn't know," Crossen said, "and our kind of people showed up. I'm very open to the ripple effect; I've no idea where it's going to go."

"I think we have to diversify our revenues," Commissioner Bernadette Pelissier said, adding that she would like to see the county dedicate at least some of the revenues to economic development.

Commissioner Mike Nelson said that while he was "not a big fan" of the sales tax, he would be willing to put the option on the ballot to let the voters decide.

"The vicious cycle that we're in is that we don't have good strong economic development here," he said.

Aaron Nelson, president of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Chamber of Commerce, said he had spoken with a number of retailers who did not support the sales-tax increase, though they would have supported when the option was first presented two years ago.

"This is a slightly different economic time, and I do think it will take a concerted effort to get the voters to vote for it," he said. "It is only with the promise to dedicate the funds to economic development that you could earn our board's support."

Board members mentioned economic development, debt service, schools and libraries as things they would like to fund with the sales-tax revenues.

Who is responsible for plumes of oil in the gulf? Fingers are pointed
 BY ELISE GIDDINGS
 GULF OF MEXICO - As plumes of toxic fish-killing oil continue to spread throughout the gulf, scientists are rushing to determine what effect the spill will have on wildlife, food, and tourism.
 One Chapel Hill woman was heard saying, "The real blame lies with ourselves. All of us who drive cars regularly are rooting with our dollars for the big oil companies. We are like drug addicts. Disasters like this wouldn't happen without our faithful support."
 A recent solution has surfaced to this problem. It is a new form of transportation that is clean, low impact, and oil free. "My human-electric hybrid bike is the way that I starve the big oil beast every day – and I've lost weight and saved money in the process," says the woman.
 Human-hybrid electric bikes can be plugged in to the wall to charge up for under ten cents per day. They can carry the rider effortlessly more than 30 miles on a charge, so the rider arrives clean, refreshed, and smiling ear to ear. Carrboro bike store Cycle 9, located at 601 W Main St, is presently offering $100 off any Ecobike electric bike and a free helmet as part of the "Kick Big Oil In The Butt" sale. They can be contacted for more information at 919-636-5909 or on the web at www.cycle9.com.

Tour features longleaf pines

Central Carolina Community College will host an educational tour of longleaf pine stands in Chatham County on June 26 from 9 a.m. to noon.

Learn about the disappearing longleaf pine ecosystem, the important role the tree plays, efforts underway to restore the ecosystem and how you can help. Mark Bost of the N.C. Division of Forest Resources will guide the tour.

The tour is part of CCCC's series of guided fieldtrips this summer aimed at promoting the college's new ecotourism program.

The tour is free and open to the public. Register by contacting Central Carolina Community College's continuing education office at 542-6495, ext. 8044.

The tour will start at the Jordan Lake Educational State Forest at 2832 Big Woods Road. For a map of the area, visit ncesf.org/images/jlesf/jlesfidirmap.gif

Club Nova completes renovations

The Club Nova Community Project will hold a ribbon cutting to celebrate recent renovations to the clubhouse today (Thursday) at 2 p.m.

Club Nova is a nonprofit mental health support-group organization. It is one of only 400 clubhouses around the world that help adults with mental illness.

More than 80 volunteers worked to renovate Club Nova by refurbishing the clubhouse, landscaping the lot and putting a six-panel community mural on the exterior wall of the adjacent thrift shop.

The clubhouse is located at 103-D W. Main St. For more information, call 968-6682.

RENA presents Garbage, film discussion

The Rogers Eubanks Neighborhood Association (RENA) will show the film Garbage! The Revolution Starts At Home on Saturday at 531 Raleigh Road.

The film follows an average family as they keep every scrap of garbage for three months, then follows where that garbage travels around the world.

There will be a spaghetti dinner, with both vegetarian and meat options, at 6 p.m., followed by the film at 7 and a discussion at 8:30.

SERVICE FORESTER SARA THOMPSON

The suggested donation is $10 for adults and $5 for children. All proceeds go to RENA.

Cookout to support local food

The HOPE Gardens Festival will be held Sunday from 4 to 8 p.m. at 2200 Homestead Road.

The festival is a fundraising cookout to support local food, music and community. HOPE Gardens, a joint project of the Chapel Hill Parks and Recreation Department and the Homeless Outreach Poverty Eradication committee, is a community garden and education center that also serves as a transitional-employment program for homeless participants.

Dinner is $7 for adults and $3 for children. To buy tickets in advance or to make a donation, visit changingthepresent.org/gift/29622/support\_hope\_garden

Volunteers needed for Eno River Festival

The Eno River Association is looking for volunteers for this year's Eno River Festival, July 3-5.

The festival features a variety of activities, all with an environmental or cultural connection to the river. Volunteers who work one shift will get a free ticket for that day's festival.

To sign up, contact Germane at germane@hawriver.org

Concert and movie series starts June 24

The Locally Grown summer series of free live concerts and movies kicks off with Southern Culture on the Skids with The Moaners on June 24 at 7 p.m. on top of the Wallace Parking Deck at 150 E. Rosemary St.

This summer's lineup includes nationally known but locally based music acts as well as documentary and feature films by local writers and directors. The events will feature a beer garden with local beer and a selection of wines and food from some of Franklin Street's restaurants.

For more information, visit locally-grown.com or call 967-9440

Festfall applications

The Chapel Hill Parks and Recreation Department is accepting applications from artists and vendors for the 38th annual Festfall, to be held Oct. 3 from 1 to 6 p.m. on West Franklin Street.

The community celebration gives attendees a chance to explore the local art scene and support artists. Cash prizes will be awarded to the most outstanding artists.

The fee to host a booth at Festfall is $100 for Orange County residents and $120 for non-residents. Applications must be postmarked by July 30. For more information or an application, visit townofchapelhill.org/festfall or contact Chela Tu at 968-2829 or ctu@townofchapelhill.org

Homeownership fair

Chatham Habitat for Humanity will host a homeownership fair at the First Missionary Baptist Church on June 24 from 6 to 8 p.m. to provide resources for families in Chatham County who aspire to own their own homes.

Staff members will be at the fair to give advice and answer questions. The event is free, and there will be dinner and door prizes.

The church is located at 914 Martin Luther King Blvd. in Siler City.

For more information, call 542-0794 or go to chathamhabitat.org/ownahome

Fiber Art

Marni Goldshlag will hold an exhibit and reception, "Fiber Art," at the Pacifica Soft Art Gallery on June 27 from 4 to 6 p.m.

Goldshlag uses translucent layers of fabric to create the image of paintings. She will give a talk at 5 p.m.

The gallery is at 119 Viburnum Way, at the end of Hanna Street.

The Frog Prince

Rags to Riches Theatre for Young Audiences will perform The Frog Prince at The ArtsCenter on June 26 at 11 a.m.

The show is interactive and intended for preschoolers through third-graders.

Rags to Riches is a Durham-based group that travels to theaters around the state. Many of the shows involve audience participation.

Tickets are $7 and free for children under the age of 2.

Reserve tickets by calling The ArtsCenter's box office at 929-2787 or visiting artscenterlive.org

Special-needs registry

The Orange County Department of Social Services is updating its section of the Disaster Special Needs Registry and accepting applications in preparation for hurricane season.

The registry is a confidential database used to provide help to people in need of assistance in case of a hurricane or ice storm.

For more information, call 254-2884.

SPOTLIGHT: HOG DAY

Hillsborough Hog Day returns to River Park off East Margaret Lane in downtown Hillsborough for this year's annual event, Friday, June 18, and Saturday, June 19.

Thirty-five teams from all over the state will slow cook hams and pork shoulders. Hog Day 2010 will include the first Hog Day Invitational, in which last year's top cooks compete for the People's Choice award. Five-dollar sample flights of the top five barbecues and $4 sandwiches will be available for purchase. In addition, the Eno River Farmers' Market will host a potato salad, cole slaw and side-dish contest. Contestants will prepare four quarts of a homemade cold vegetable side dish for judging.

Children's activities include a bounce house, pony rides and a small petting zoo. The event also will feature corn toss games, remote racecars, a hog-calling contest and an antique-car show. Performers will provide live music throughout Hog Day and attendees are welcome to bring blankets or chairs for the event's festival-style seating.

This year's Hog Day also will include the event's first beer garden, coordinated by Durham's Fullsteam Brewery.

Hog Day kicks off Friday with events 6 to 9 p.m. On Saturday, the festivities start at 9 a.m. and run until 6 p.m. The event is free and open to the public, but leave pets at home. For more information, visit hog-days.com

Cycling event to benefit Chatham Habitat for Humanity

Chatham Habitat for Humanity will hold the first annual Chatham 3RingCycle Event starting at 8:30 a.m. on June 26 at the Central Carolina Community College campus in Pittsboro.

The event will feature 30-, 60- and 100-mile bike rides on scenic roads throughout rural Chatham County. Proceeds will benefit Chatham Habitat for Humanity.

Registration is $30 and $35 starting at 7 a.m. the day of the event. To pre-register, visit active.com.

For more information and a printable registration form, visit chathamhabitat.org/3RingCycle. To volunteer at the event or become a sponsor, contact Gaby Fornari at 542-0794, ext. 223 or gabyfornari@chathamhabitat.org

Calling all artists

The Hillsborough Arts Council seeks submissions for a Miniature Art Exhibition in all media.

Artists who live in or have studios in Orange, Alamance, Chatham, Durham or Wake counties are eligible. Original works of art of any media should not exceed 6 by 6 by 6 inches and must be of material stable enough to withstand handling and exhibiting, suitably framed and prepared for installation.

Work must be received by June 19 for the June 23-July 23 show. For more information, visit hillsboroughartscouncil.org

CitizenCryptoquote By Martin Brody

For example, YAPHCYAPLM is WORDSWORTH. One letter stands for another. In this sample, A is used for the two O's, Y for the two W's, etc. Apostrophes, punctuation, the length and formation of the words are all hints.

PETS OF THE WEEK

PAWS4EVER —

Turtle

Turtle is a 3-year-old black-and-brown boxer/American bulldog. Turtle is a great lady who is still adjusting to things here at p4e. She is shy when she first meets you, but once she comes out of her shell, watch out, she is a ball of energy! She loves playing with all the other dogs and gets along great with all her doggie buddies. She met some kitties and was very nervous around them; they made weird noises at her and she just laid on the floor wanting to get out of the kitty area. She appears to be house trained. She would do great in a home with an active couple or family. There are more pictures coming soon; we have a couple, but they are on the blurry side. Contact Paws4Ever, 6311 Nicks Road, Mebane, or call 304-2300. You can also go online at paws4ever.org

ORANGE COUNTY ANIMAL SERVICES —

Every now and then a dog comes along that will steal your heart in an instant, and Smiley, a 2-year-old pit mix, is definitely one of those! This adorably shy girl spreads a nervous but happy grin across her entire face when you first approach her kennel, and you can't help but smile in return! Her gentle and submissive disposition makes her immediately charming, and her sweet cuddly personality seals the deal. You will immediately fall in love with Smiley, and she is definitely worth it! She will be an outstanding companion to a very lucky new family. Visit her at Orange County Animal Services, 1601 Eubanks Road in Chapel Hill. You can also see her and other adoptable animals online at co.orange.nc.us/animalservices/adoption.asp

Holding the line

This being the wind-up of budget season, there's been a lot of talk about the tax system, tax rates and taxes in general, including some well-founded criticism.

One presumption is that by not increasing taxes this year, the towns and the county are treading water – balancing declining revenues with cuts in either operations or ambitions.

In Chapel Hill, that meant a potential delay in the long-term goal of adding to the public library, until the council's approval last week of a bond sale in September to pay for the new addition.

In Carrboro, the past couple of years have involved further delays to long-sought capital projects – improvements to parks and sidewalks and major road repairs.

Both towns held hiring to a minimum and this year offered only minimal pay increases.

The county, a creature much more at the mercy of Raleigh, has had to take more drastic steps, as it was hit with the double whammy of flagging revenues and an increase in debt burden and new operating costs for recently opened facilities.

The results in all three cases may seem like treading water; but if you're a teacher who's lost a job, a social worker with an impossible case load or a town employee trying to make ends meet, it's more of a sinking feeling.

There is some thought that a turnaround is happening, but it is doubtful that will change the game plan anytime soon. The backlog of what's been put off is long and includes a lot of deferred maintenance. It also will be a while before even critically important departments are staffed up again and deficiencies in areas like emergency services are addressed fully.

And we're going to keep talking taxes. In addition to this fall's legislative and local races, which will no doubt feature plenty of revenue discussions, the ballot also includes a referendum for a proposed hike in the county's sales tax. This should spur another discussion of the fairness of sales taxes, the residential tax burden, the need for more commercial space and at least a few thousand utterances of the phrases "buy local" and "retail leakage."

A Century Ago

We just received notice of another 100th anniversary. They seem to be piling up. Board of aldermen member Jacquie Gist drew our attention to this phenomenon a couple months back, expressing her curiosity over all the foundings that took place a century or so back.

With Carrboro's 100th just around the corner, and several local churches and institutions at or near the same mark, it's evident that something was going on back then.

So, what was it? We know some of you have the history bug and are digging around in the local archives for various treasures of the past. If any of you have some thoughts as to what it was that spurred this cascade of centennials, please send us a missive with your findings to editor@carrborocitizen.com

More than Shelter

SHARON COULTER-JAMES

The Inter-Faith Council for Social Service (IFC) is proposing to build a transitional housing facility on Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard in Chapel Hill that will help men who are experiencing homelessness to change the course of their lives. The Orange County Partnership to End Homelessness supports these plans and believes that the facility will make a significant contribution in helping to prevent and end homelessness in our community.

IFC has provided many valuable services and programs to Orange County citizens for decades, including the Community House emergency shelter that has operated in the old municipal building in Chapel Hill since 1985. IFC's need to open a new transitional housing facility is twofold: first, the Town of Chapel Hill wants to use the Old Municipal Building to satisfy other public needs; and secondly, the IFC program has simply outgrown the space. Walking through the building on any given day confirms that the residents and staff are living and working in cramped quarters. There is no outdoor space such as a yard or garden, and the indoor space is much too small to accommodate the housing, kitchen, clinic, office and other spaces for services that are required.

IFC's new facility will be a 52-bed transitional housing program for homeless men—similar to IFC's HomeStart program for women and children—providing long-term housing and a continuum of services to residents. The goal of the new facility is to promote the independence and self-reliance of its residents by providing them with a safe and stable living environment as well as a broad range of services to help them obtain employment and permanent housing.

The experience of IFC and similar organizations teaches that emergency shelters get people off of the streets, but transitional housing transforms lives. Each resident of the new facility will develop a set of individualized goals and obtain the services they need to achieve them. Residents who are able to work will receive assistance with education, job training and job searches and those who are disabled will be referred to appropriate service providers. Social workers will help the men apply for affordable or subsidized housing. Residents will clean and maintain the building, work in the community gardens and help enforce house policies. Senior residents will help mentor new ar-community. Without them, homeless men and women have little opportunity to start their lives anew.

An example of a successful program similar to the one proposed by the IFC is located in Charlotte. In 2002, plans for McCreesh Place—an apartment complex for disabled men living in the city's shelters—were unveiled amidst strong neighborhood opposition. Eight years later, many of those neighbors are pleased to support an expansion of McCreesh Place and are, in fact, participating in its groundbreaking ceremony. They have found that the formerly homeless men are good neighbors who volunteer for trash pickups at nearby parks and pass out community association newsletters, and the facility is an asset to the neighborhood that hosts community association meetings and is home for the Neighborhood Watch.

The Partnership to End Homelessness believes that IFC's new transitional housing facility will be a good neighbor an asset to the community, and will help men overcome their personal challenges for finding jobs and permanent housing. We consider the IFC to be an essential partner in our work to prevent and end homelessness in Orange County and look forward to strengthening our collaboration with them to achieve these goals.

Budget déjà vu

CHRIS FITZSIMON

In case you missed the news about the state budget negotiations between the House and Senate late last week, here is a quick summary.

The House budget spends more on public schools and less on the university system than the Senate plan, and that prompted UNC President Erskine Bowles to warn at Friday's board of governors' meeting of impending doom for UNC if the House budget was adopted. Then came news that budget writers had somehow found $83 million to lessen the need to slash the university budget and Bowles said he was encouraged by the development.

If all that sounds familiar, it should. It's almost exactly the same thing that happened last June and the June before that. The House passes a budget that makes deeper cuts to UNC and fewer reductions to public schools and human services than the Senate proposes and university officials go ballistic and the final budget makes fewer cuts to UNC.

That doesn't always mean less funding for K-12 education or mental health, but it might this year. The reports about the $83 million quoted a spokesman for House Speaker Joe Hackney saying the new money came from shifting funds from other budget areas, including health and human services.

There are plenty of reasons that the UNC budget dance always seems to end the same way. Erskine Bowles is a powerful voice in the legislative building and he has a receptive audience, especially in the Senate.

New investments in UNC have long been a priority of Senate President Pro Tem Marc Basnight and other Senate leaders. Then there is Citizens for Higher Education, a political action committee of wealthy donors to UNC-CH that has become one of the biggest contributors to legislators' campaigns and employs two and provides North Carolina incalculable benefits in a wide variety of areas, including research, economic development and a world-class education for North Carolina students.

The question every year is not should the state continue to strongly support the public university system – it is why does it seem that UNC is always the top priority in years when lawmakers cannot muster the political courage to find revenue to make equally important investments or stave off devastating reductions in other areas like the criminal justice system, the human-services safety net and even public education and community colleges.

None of that is the university system's fault and none of it means that the university should get less funding, though the booster club subsidy is indefensible.

But there ought to be a way to at least have a fairer debate about budget priorities and it's not likely parents of children with a disability are forming a powerful PAC anytime soon.

That means it's up to lawmakers to make sure they listen just as carefully to the state's most vulnerable people and educators at all levels as they do the folks with access to the tickets at mid-court of the basketball games.

Resolution

[Editor's note: The following resolution was passed last month by the Carrboro Board of Aldermen in response to the efforts of Rep. Paul Stam of Apex to get local governments to drop abortion coverage from their health care plans.]

A RESOLUTION AFFIRMING THE RIGHT TO REPRODUCTIVE HEALTH CARE AND REJECTING REP. PAUL STAM'S INTRUSION INTO MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS REGARDING THIS MATTER

WHEREAS, the Carrboro Board of Aldermen supports all efforts to afford equal protection under the law to Carrboro citizens regardless of race, religion, gender, disability, sexual orientation, identity or expression; and

WHEREAS, the Carrboro Board of Aldermen affirms protecting women's reproductive rights which are protected under United States law but remain under assault by forces which oppose gender equity; and

WHEREAS, a woman's right to choose whether to bear a child is protected under the constitutional right to privacy, as held by the United States Supreme Court; and

WHEREAS, it is a woman's right to have access to and be knowledgeable about affordable contraceptives and the ability to have a safe, legal abortion if she so chooses; and

WHEREAS, the Carrboro Board of Aldermen affirms that women have the right to control their own bodies and health care, including contraception and reproductive issues; and

WHEREAS, the Carrboro Board of Aldermen affirms that issues regarding reproductive rights and health are confidential and should be made by a woman in consultation with her doctor, not by a legislative body; and

WHEREAS, N.C. Rep. Paul Stam has falsely asserted that the 1981 case of Stam v. State of North Carolina stands for the proposition that "including elective abortion is beyond the statutory authority of city government," and has misconstrued the court's holding, pronouncing that "any North Carolina county ... must refuse to fund medically unnecessary abortions under the precedent of Stam v. State;" and

WHEREAS, in fact, the holding in Stam v. State of North Carolina dealt with the narrow question of whether medically unnecessary abortions should be covered under certain social service programs.

NOW, THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED BY THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN OF THE TOWN OF CARRBORO:

Section 1. The Board of Aldermen rejects this intrusive suggestion of N.C. Rep. Paul Stam, relying on a misinterpretation of the holding of Stam v. North Carolina and other hypotheses, that municipalities "must refuse to fund medically unnecessary abortions."

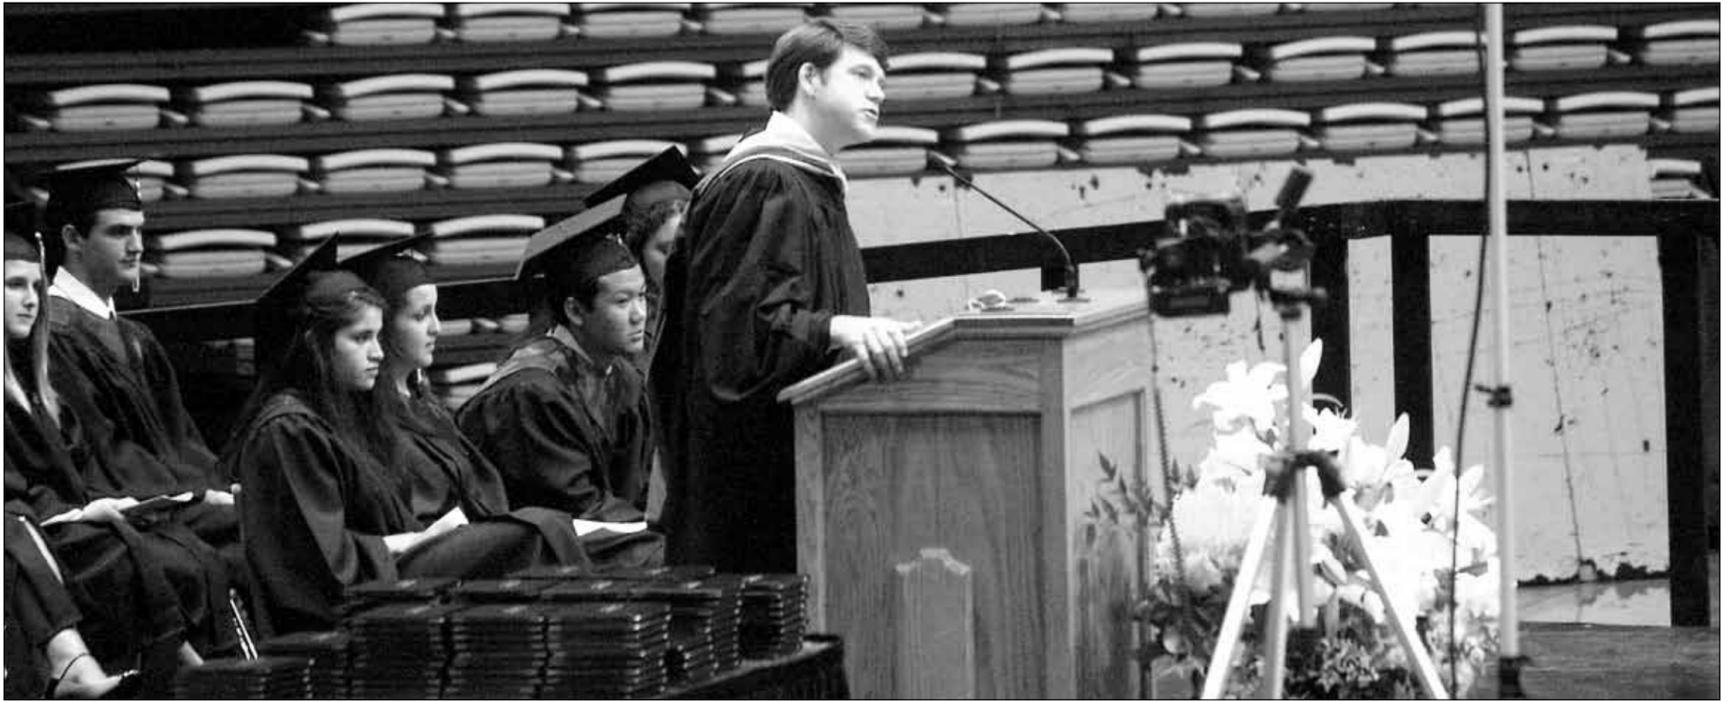

Section 2. The Board of Aldermen continues to support a woman's constitutional right to privacy, pursuant to the law of the land as articulated by our United States Supreme Court.

Section 3. The Board of Aldermen resolves that the Town of Carrboro will endeavor to provide Town employees with health insurance coverage that covers the full range of reproductive services.

OBITUARY

Jennifer Murphy

Jennifer Craddock Murphy, 28, died on Jun 10, 2010 at the North Carolina Cancer Hospital, Chapel Hill, N.C. Jennifer was born on April 11, 1982 in Greenville, Ky. She attended Pawnee High School in Pawnee, Ill. and graduated in 2005 from Campbell University in North Carolina, earning her Bachelor of Science degree in psychology. Jennifer went on to manage Tartan Place Apartments in Fayetteville, N.C. until her diagnosis with leukemia. Jennifer was loved by the many people she touched during her life. Her zest for life and free spirit brought joy to those around her. Jennifer's determination and strength during her fight against leukemia inspired many. She will be sadly missed most of all by her loving husband, Sgt. 1st Class Sean Murphy, and adoring children, Colin (3) and Rylan (1). Jennifer is also survived by her mother, Mary Beth Busby; father and step-mother, Mack and Betty Craddock; sister, Stephanie Busby; and dear friend Emily Commean. Flowering stems of cohosh can rise 6 or more feet above the broad dissected leaves.

When I discovered black cohosh, Cimicifuga racemosa, coming into flower in the dark forest above the Eno River outside Hillsborough last week, I immediately became curious about what insects it needed to succeed. I didn't linger long enough to make a scientific inquiry, but I was impressed with the antics of several big bumblebees hurriedly scurrying over the white flowering stems.

Along the flowering stem, clusters of showy white stamens (the male parts) surround the single tiny pistil (the female part) in the center of the flowers. Though other flying insects were visiting, none seemed to romp so aggressively over all the flowers as the bumblebees. I'll give them credit for any pollination going on.

Black cohosh is an impressive summer wildflower of rich woodlands in the Piedmont and mountain regions. Candelabra-like flowering stems can reach higher than six feet. Sometimes you will see them stretching out for the light from dark forested roadsides. The much-dissected compound leaves can be a foot and a half or more wide, seeming to hover above the ground. I was surprised to find bumblebees in such dark environments.

Like so many of our native wildflowers, the black cohosh has a rich medicinal heritage. One described use of the herb was healing snakebite, thus the common name, black snakeroot. And like many an herb, the roots, soaked in moonshine, were used for rheumatism.

But don't just look at the plant and flowers, remember to consider the pollinators and reflect how our very existence relies on them.

Pollinator Week

Be a part of pollinator week and plan to attend the fourth annual celebration of National Pollinator Week on June 26 from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. on the Lawn at Chatham Mills in Pittsboro. You'll learn about honey bees and the diversity of native pollinators working over the Pollinator Garden and there are educational activities for the kids.

The Rec, 1956

Once upon a time, in a decade long ago, there was this funky old teen center, smack-dab in the middle of the 100 block of Franklin Street, that served as the social heartbeat, safe haven and Happy Times hangout for Chapel Hill high schoolers. Sitting modestly beside the tall-steepled University Methodist Church, the aged high-raftered building appeared to have been a converted sanctuary. The place we called simply "the Rec" was cavernous, drafty and hard to heat – and we loved it. Every weekend, Chapel Hill High School teens gravitated there for social interaction, ping-pong, sock-hops and life mentoring. When the University Methodist Church razed the Rec in '57 to build a new fellowship hall, Chapel Hill teens of the '50s lost their home away from home.
