

JAPANESE WAR CRIMES AND RELATED TOPICS: A GUIDE TO RECORDS AT THE NATIONAL ARCHIVES

Compiled by Greg Bradsher

ABOUT THE FINDING AID

Think of archives as vast mountain ranges of records with the archivists guiding the expeditions. Explorations on familiar, well-trodden paths produce new perspectives when examined with fresh eyes and imagination.

—William Cunliffe, Senior Archivist, NARA

THIS FINDING AID will help researchers interested in Japanese war crimes, war criminals, and war crimes trials to navigate the vast holdings of the U.S. National Archives and Records Administration at College Park (NARA). It will also be useful to anyone interested in military, intelligence, political, diplomatic, economic, financial, social, and cultural activities in the Far East during 1931-1951, as well as to those searching for information regarding Allied prisoners of war; the organization, functions, and activities of American and Allied agencies; and the Japanese occupation of countries and the American occupation of Japan. While not aimed at researchers interested in the strategic and tactical military and naval history of the war in the Far East, this finding aid may nevertheless be useful to those with such interests, if only to identify record groups and series of records that may bear on those topics.

This finding aid covers records from over twenty record groups and includes materials declassified under the Japanese Imperial Government Disclosure Act of 2000 (P.L. 106-567) as well as records that were never classified and those declassified before the passage of the Disclosure Act. Because the process of identifying, declassifying, accessioning, and processing of records under the Act is taking place as this finding is being compiled, late-arriving records may not be identified in this finding aid. Researchers should consult the IWG Web site (<http://www.archives.gov/iwg/>) for a complete and up-to-date list of records declassified under the Japanese Imperial Government Disclosure Act.

Federal agencies involved in the identification and declassification of relevant classified records ascertained that there were relatively few pertinent records that were still classified. Most relevant records were either never classified or were declassified decades before the Act and were already in NARA's custody.

While this finding aid's coverage is broad, it is not comprehensive. Researchers may find other relevant series of records within the record groups mentioned or not mentioned. Researchers are encouraged to use other finding aids and consult with NARA staff to locate records of interest. In addition, the National Archives at College Park holds non-textual records (such as still photographs and motion pictures) that researchers may want to examine. Other NARA facilities hold many records and donated material related to World War II, including records related to the subjects covered in this finding aid. This is particularly true of the Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Harry S. Truman, and the Dwight D.

Eisenhower Presidential Libraries, and the Center for Legislative Archives. Researchers should contact these facilities directly.

STRUCTURE OF THE FINDING AID

The finding aid is arranged by record group number and is subdivided by record series. The records within each record group are generally arranged to reflect the hierarchy of the agency to which they belong. Figure 1 is a sample page from the finding aid. It shows the first page of a record group and indicates the type of information researchers are likely to find on it.

Please note the header at the top of the page. The header contains two important pieces of information that are crucial to navigating the finding aid. First, the header contains the record group number → RECORDS OF THE OFFICE OF THE JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL (NAVY)

RECORD GROUP 125 ← record group name

The Office of the Judge Advocate General was directed by the Judge Advocate General of the Navy. During the war, the position was held successively by Rear Admirals Walter B. Woodson and Thomas L. Gatch. The office provided staff to the War Crimes Office (see RG 153) to investigate and assemble evidence on enemy atrocities against service personnel and other United States citizens and to arrange for the prosecution of war criminals.

The U.S. Navy had jurisdiction over trials in the Marianas Islands, the Marshall and Gilbert Islands, Palau Islands, Bonin Islands, and the Caroline Islands after Japan surrendered. From 1945 through 1949, the U.S. Navy conducted 47 trials of 123 accused Japanese war criminals on the islands of Guam and Kwajalein. Trials were held for the mistreatment of prisoners of war and for the executions of captured Allied airmen (including beheading and cannibalism). Accused collaborators were also tried.

The trials resulted in 113 convictions. There were 30 death sentences and 10 executions, all for murder convictions. The navy conducted executions or sent convicted war criminals to Sugamo Prison in Tokyo to serve their sentences. Some accused and convicted war criminals chose suicide rather than face trial, imprisonment, or execution.

Box and folder lists are available for most if not all of these series. Researchers should also ascertain if the locations for these series of records are current before requesting them.

series in the upper left-hand corner. The header also contains the name and number of the last entry that appears on the page. The header reflects the general hierarchy or general subject/geographic area covered by the records and provides a quick orientation to the records described on that particular page.

At the beginning of each record group, you will find the complete name of the record group followed by the record group number. Most record groups begin with a brief administrative history of the agency or office, with particular emphasis on the World War II period. The record group number and name are repeated in the footer of each page.

Many series headings will be followed by administrative or contextual descriptions. Beneath the series you will find one or more entries. The entries provide detailed descriptive information about the actual records, as opposed to the organizational, administrative, and historical contexts of the records (see figure 2).

The granularity of the descriptions in the finding aid vary from record group to record group and even from series to series. This variation is reflected in the level and types of

The records are arranged initially by War Department decimal classification scheme, followed by ten project files, one of which is "Foreign Countries and Cities." Much of the series consists of cross-reference sheets that refer to documents which were forwarded to other offices, or were filed elsewhere in this series; in Patterson's security-classified correspondence for this period (0107-A1-141), or within the records of his assistants. The correspondence itself consists mainly of letters, memorandums, reports, cablegrams, bulletins, transcripts of hearings, and publications exchanged with other descriptive information in the finding aid as well as in the information found in the headers. Some entries will only have a series description while others will have extensive box and file title lists. In some cases you will be able to search and view all of the file titles for a particular entry, and in other cases you will need to request the records or consult with archival staff to determine file titles.

A typical entry will include the entry name, date span, and entry number. Additional information such as series arrangement statements are also provided for most record series entries. Where applicable, the total number of boxes in the entry is given along with the beginning location of the entry. In many cases, entries are followed by lists of related file titles and their corresponding box numbers. The record group number, entry name, entry number, box number(s), and beginning location are needed to request records from the stacks or when placing an order for photocopies.

The locations given in the finding aid were accurate at the time the finding aid was prepared; however, some locations and box numbers may change over time. We have tried to identify the few places where this is likely to occur. Consultation of the most recent Master Location Register (MLR) and archival staff may be needed to ascertain the correct location of records that have been moved.

HOW TO NAVIGATE THE FINDING AID

Due to the length and complexity of this finding aid, we highly recommend that researchers navigate it using the search functions available in Adobe Reader. While reading through the entire finding aid may be a necessary step for some researchers, most will be best served by searching for specific terms and then selectively reading through the record groups or record series that are relevant to their research topic.

The finding aid can be navigated in a number of ways.

1. Table of Contents. To jump to the first page of a specific record group, simply click on the record group link in the table of contents.

2. Bookmarks. To open the bookmark function, open the View menu on the top menu bar, select Navigation Tabs, and then click on Bookmarks. This will open a panel on the left side of the screen. You can use the scroll bar to browse through all of the available bookmarks. Click on a bookmarked link to jump to that particular section of the finding aid.

3. Basic Search. You can conduct simple word and phrase searches by pressing the CTRL+F keys on a PC, or COMMAND +F keys on a Mac, which will open a small search box. This search option highlights each result in the text itself; it does not display the search results and does not allow for advanced searching options.

4. Search Function (Control+Shift+F on a PC, Command+Shift+F on a Mac, or binocular icon from the toolbar). Adobe Reader's search function allows you to conduct basic and advanced word or phrase searches for names, places, entry numbers, and the like. Each instance of the search term will be highlighted and linked to the location of the search term in the finding aid. This feature allows you to refine your search by defining simple parameters.

Search Tips

- The search function is best used to search for proper names, such as individuals, places, administrative bodies, and committees. Name searches will sometimes result in false negatives because of variant spellings or changes in organizational names. Historical spellings have been maintained in the finding aid as they reflect the original file titles and current box labels. Researchers will want to search for common variant spellings to make sure that they are retrieving all relevant items.
- Researchers are strongly encouraged to use several search terms when searching for a particular subject, particularly if a search term retrieves zero hits or does not retrieve the type of information expected. To increase your search results, search for synonyms or use broader search terms.

- By default, the search engine will search exact words or phrases. To match any (rather than all) of the words in the search box, click on Use Advanced Search Options at the bottom of the search window. From the Return results containing drop-down menu, select "Match any of the words." This will allow you to search for any instance of any of the words in the search box rather than an exact word or phrase. For example, if you search "economic conditions" as an exact phrase (the default search option), you will retrieve 128 instances of the phrase "economic conditions" in the finding aid. On the other hand, if you search "economic conditions" and ask the search engine to match any word, you will retrieve 1604 instances of "economic" and/or "conditions" in the finding aid.
- By default, the search engine automatically conducts stem searching. For example, if you search for "Japan," you will retrieve all instances of "Japan" and "Japanese." However, if you would like to search for "Japan" but not "Japanese," you will need to select the Whole words only box in the Advanced Search Options window.
- You may scroll through the list of search results and manipulate both the search panel and the document panel at the same time. However, as soon as you close the search box or select Done, you will lose your search results and you will be not able to retrieve them again without redoing your search.
- If you know the file numbers, classification numbers, or entry numbers for a given file, try using these numbers as search terms as they are more likely to produce an accurate list of search results than if searching by the file name.
- Dates cannot be effectively searched with the search tool. This is due in part to the many different date formats used in the finding aid and the relatively short time period that the finding aid covers.

Since archival records are arranged by their provenance and not by subject, researchers should acquire some knowledge about which Federal agencies were responsible for or became involved in the subject(s) of their research interest.

REQUESTING ACCESS TO AND REQUESTING REPRODUCTIONS OF RECORDS

All of the records described in this finding aid are located in the National Archives at College Park, Maryland. For information about the location of the National Archives at College Park (Archives II) and hours of operation, as well as procedures for obtaining a researcher identification card and other research room information, please visit our visitor information page at <http://www.archives.gov/dc-metro/college-park/index.html> or call 1-866-272-6272.

The records described in this finding aid are administered by the Textual Archives Services Division. The Division's Modern Military Records and Civilian Agency Records units assist researchers in locating or ordering records. For inquiries about records, including access to or copies of the records, you may use the form found online at: <http://www.archives.gov/contact/inquire-form.html#part-b>. You may also contact the Modern Military Records and Civilian Agency Records at the addresses and telephone numbers below:

Research staff pull records Monday through Friday at five specific times. They do not pull records on Saturdays. Those desiring to do research on Saturday can have records pulled during weekdays for Saturday use.

Some of the records in this finding aid have been microfilmed as NARA microfilm publications. These microfilm publications are located in Room 4050 of the College Park facility; they are self-service. Other NARA facilities have copies of many of these microfilm publications.

Almost all of the records described in this finding aid are readily available, and researchers are not required to make advance arrangements to consult them. A few records may remain closed because of national security restrictions or may be withheld for reasons of personal privacy or because specific statutes demand it. These records may be requested under the Freedom of Information Act.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The comprehensiveness of this finding aid could not have been achieved without the assistance of the Textual Archives Services Division staff. Their knowledge about the records and their willingness to share their knowledge is greatly appreciated. Two student interns, Sean Morris of St. Andrews University (summer 2002) and Kate Harvey of Earlham College (summer 2003), provided invaluable assistance in identifying relevant files and documents within series of records. Without the support, encouragement, guidance, and friendship of IWG staff members William Cunliffe, Richard Myers, and David Van Tassel, compiling this finding aid would not have been such an enjoyable experience for me. The usefulness of this guide was immeasurably enhanced by the editorial work of Jacquelyn Ferry and Rusch Communications, who put it in electronic form and made it easily searchable. Finally, I would like to thank NARA managers James Hastings, Sharon Thibodeau, and Michael Kurtz. Without their vision and support, this finding aid would not have been undertaken and completed in a timely manner.

RECORDS OF THE BUREAU OF NAVAL PERSONNEL

RECORD GROUP 24

The Bureau of Naval Personnel (BUPERS) was established in the Department of the Navy by an act of May 13, 1942, (56 Stat. 276). BUPERS assumed five personnel-related responsibilities from the now-abolished Bureau of Navigation, which included procurement, training, distribution, performance, and welfare. These remained the bureau's principal responsibilities, with relatively modest changes, for over thirty years. Some functions relating to procurement and training of specialized personnel, such as in aviation and medicine, were exercised by the appropriate technical bureaus. During World War II, BUPERS had responsibility for most matters relating to regular and reservist naval personnel, including officers, enlisted men, WAVES, Staff Corps, and most specialists.

RECORDS OF THE OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF NAVAL OPERATIONS

RECORD GROUP 38

By an executive order of December 18, 1941, the Commander in Chief, U.S. Fleet (COMINCH) was removed from the authority of the Chief of Naval Operations and was put in supreme command of the Navy's operating forces. On March 12, 1942, however, another executive order made provision for combining the duties of the Commander in Chief, U.S. Fleet, and those of the Chief of Naval Operations and assigned them to one office with the title of "Commander in Chief, United States Fleet, and Chief of Naval Operations." This official served as the principal naval adviser to the President on the conduct of the war and principal naval adviser and executive to the Secretary of the Navy on the conduct of the activities of the Naval Establishment. Adm. Ernest J. King, who had become Commander in Chief, U.S. Fleet in December 1941, was given the dual role and retained it during the remainder of the war. As Chief of Naval Operations he succeeded Adm. Harold R. Stark, who had held that office since before the outbreak of the war in Europe in 1939.

Records of the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations (Operations)

The Deputy Chief of Naval Operations (Operations), holding the rank of Vice Admiral, under the authority and direction of the Chief of Naval Operations, prepared strategic plans and policies and was responsible for the organization, operational development, readiness, administration, and operations of seagoing forces, sea frontiers, and overseas naval command areas. He oversaw the evaluation and dissemination of operational information and had representation on joint operational agencies.

Records of the Office of Naval Intelligence

During World War II, the Naval Intelligence Division was part of the "Services" group under the Sub Chief of Naval Operations. During the war the Office of Naval Intelligence (ONI) was responsible for the collection and distribution of naval intelligence for Navy bureaus and offices. It cooperated closely with the Military Intelligence Division (MID), the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the State Department, the Office of U.S. Censorship, and the British Imperial Censorship Office. Since Headquarters, COMINCH, and ONI both carried on intelligence activities; a more clear-cut distinction was made between them when COMINCH established the Combat Intelligence Division on July 1, 1943. The general line of demarcation between their duties was that the Naval Intelligence Division was responsible for strategic intelligence and the Combat Intelligence Division was responsible for operational intelligence.

As the Allies conquered and occupied more places in the Japanese Empire and Japan, OP 16 FE started producing translation reports about harbors and harbor installations in French Indo-China, Singapore, Thailand, Philippines, Japan, Java, and elsewhere in the Japanese Empire. It also published information about countries Japan occupied. OP 16 FE's translation work shifted dramatically to occupation-related translations during the late summer and fall of 1945. During the August 25-October 1, 1945 period it produced numerous translations relating to prefecture information and government officials in different parts of Japan. It also produced, during the late August-mid-November period, translations related to the structure of the Japanese government and the various ministries. The Emperor and his household estates and accounts were the subject of several translations. The List of OP 16 FE Translations in Box 1 serves as an index to the translations.

RECORDS OF INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCES, COMMISSIONS, AND EXPOSITIONS

RECORD GROUP 43

Records Relating to the Far Eastern Commission

The Far Eastern Commission (FEC) was an international body created for the control of Japan during the Allied occupation after World War II. It replaced the Far Eastern Advisory Commission (FEAC) when its "Terms of Reference" were established by representatives of the United States, the Soviet Union, and the United Kingdom at the Moscow meeting of Foreign Ministers in December 1945. Under the "Terms of Reference" the principal functions of the Commission were to "formulate the policies, principles, and standards in conformity with which the fulfillment by Japan of its obligations under the Terms of Surrender may be accomplished," and "to review, on the request of any member, any directive issued to a Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers, or any action taken by the Supreme Commander involving policy decisions within the jurisdiction of the Commission."

The Far Eastern Advisory Commission

The FEAC consisted of representatives from Australia, Canada, China, France, India, the Netherlands, New Zealand, the Philippines, the United Kingdom, and the United States. The Commission made recommendations for basic post-surrender policies and objectives of the United Nations in regard to Japan. It made no recommendations with regard to the conduct of military operations or territorial adjustments in the Far East. It was headquartered in Washington, D.C. The U.S. government acted as host to the Commission and assumed responsibility for organizing the Secretariat that performed its technical, documentary, and service functions.

The Far Eastern Commission

The Foreign Ministers of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the United Kingdom, and the United States met in Moscow from December 16 to December 26, 1945, in accordance with the decision of the Crimea Conference, confirmed at the Berlin Conference, that there should be periodic consultation among them. At the meetings discussions were held on an informal and exploratory basis and agreement was reached on several questions. The agreements were announced on December 27, 1945. Among them was the establishment of the FEC.

Soon after its establishment, the FEC addressed the issue of war crimes. It created a committee (Committee No. 5 War Criminals) to consider questions relating to the identification, apprehension, and trial of Japanese suspects as well as punishment for those convicted. In April 1946, the FEC issued a "Policy Decision" regarding Allied war crimes policy in the Far East. Besides granting the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers and the military command of any Allied nation power to convene military courts for the trials of war criminals, the Far Eastern Commission policy decision also offered a broad definition of "war crimes," which included reference to violations generally known as "crimes against peace" and "crimes against humanity."¹

GENERAL RECORDS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF TREASURY

RECORD GROUP 56

The Department of Treasury was chiefly responsible during World War II, as before the war, for managing the financial affairs of the United States government. All of its operations were greatly expanded during the war, and several special functions were assigned to the department in connection with the war, such as the control of American assets owned by designated foreign governments and nationals.

The department's war-related activities were handled for the most part by its regular organizational units, although special units were established, such as for the wartime control of foreign funds. See various NARA finding aids for other relevant series.

The law provided that the General Counsel should be the chief law officer of the department and perform such duties in respect to its legal activities as were prescribed by the Secretary or required by law. By order dated June 20, 1934, the Secretary prescribed the duties of the General Counsel and established the Legal Division, which was placed under the direct supervision and control of the General Counsel. The General Counsel was responsible for and in charge of all legal activities of the Treasury Department, including all legislation pertaining to the affairs of the department; rendered formal legal opinions for the information and guidance of administrative officers of the department; prepared or reviewed material for publication, official regulations, Treasury

Decisions, and other rulings and orders concerning laws administered by the department; and cooperated with the Department of Justice with respect to litigation in which the Treasury Department had an interest.

Records of the Office of the Assistant Secretary for International Affairs

During the World War II period, the Office of the Assistant Secretary for International Affairs (OASIA) was named the Office of the Assistant Secretary in Charge of Monetary Research and Foreign Funds Control. The Assistant to the Secretary in Charge of Monetary Research supervised both the Division of Monetary Research and all matters relating to the management and operation of the United States Stabilization Fund. He also had general supervision of all foreign relations of the Treasury Department. In December 1944 the Assistant to the Secretary was replaced by the Assistant in Charge of Monetary Research and Foreign Funds Control. Harry D. White held both of these positions.

Records of the Division of Monetary Research

The Division of Monetary Research, established on March 25, 1938, supplied information and analyses and made recommendations to assist the Secretary of the Treasury and other Treasury officials in formulating and executing the international financial policies of the department. The division was headed by the Director of Monetary Research, a position held by Harry D. White until 1945, when Frank Coe became Director. Although the division was essentially a research and not an operating unit, it was authorized to act for the Treasury Department in exchange stabilization and other international financial negotiations and to implement stabilization agreements through use of the United States Stabilization Fund. During the war the division had representatives stationed in various foreign countries to deal directly with the governments of those countries on financial matters, and emergency field officers to assist military authority on financial and currency problems related to invasion and occupation. The division also represented the Treasury Department in interdepartmental groups concerned with international affairs.

With the outbreak of the war in Europe, the division was directed to prepare analyses of the international aspects of the fiscal policies of the United States and of foreign countries, and throughout the war it continued to make studies of the financial positions of foreign countries. When the Treasury Department's Foreign Funds Control was established in April 1940, the Monetary Research Division was assigned to do research for it.

In 1943 the division began sending representatives to work directly with military headquarters in the various theaters and to establish treasury representation in United States embassies and legations in a number of capitals. At the same time, it undertook work in the field of postwar planning. Its members performed research, prepared memorandums, and rendered technical assistance in connection with the numerous conferences of technical experts that culminated in the International Monetary Conference at Bretton Woods in June 1944.

With the end of hostilities, the division furnished economic analyses and provided most of the treasury advisers for the United States representatives in the many postwar international economic conferences and organizations.

GENERAL RECORDS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE

RECORD GROUP 59

The Department of State has principal responsibility for the determination of the policy of the United States government in relation to international affairs. Some of the more vital decisions are made by the President, but day-to-day negotiations with foreign countries, specific measures for the protection of American interests, the promotion of solidarity with friendly countries, and the conduct of the voluminous correspondence with the diplomatic and consular representatives of the United States as well as with the representatives of foreign powers accredited to the United States are delegated to the Department of State.

The multitude of foreign relations problems arising from World War II necessitated a broadening of many phases of the department's work. The wartime functions of the department included the conduct of war-related negotiations with foreign countries; collaboration with other government agencies in the mapping of broad strategies and in the determination of questions of foreign policy relating to lend-lease and economic warfare against the Axis; and the coordination of other foreign policy aspects of wartime operations. The department also conducted special research and discussions, formulated policies, and planned programs relating to post-war political and economic reconstruction as it pertained to the foreign relations of the United States.

Throughout most of the war, Cordell Hull was the Secretary of State. Upon his resignation in November 1944 he was succeeded by Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., who in turn resigned in June 1945 and was succeeded by James F. Byrnes. The Under Secretary of State was the principal assistant to the Secretary of State, and in the absence of the Secretary he served as Acting Secretary. Sumner Welles was Under Secretary of State from before the outbreak of the war until September 1943. He was succeeded by Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., Joseph C. Grew in December 1944, and Dean Acheson in August 1945.

Central Files

All correspondence and other records were arranged and filed by subject in one series called the Decimal File (to 1963) and the Subject-Numeric File (1963-1973).

The decimal file, basically a subject file with predetermined subjects designated by a decimal code, has subjects grouped into nine major classes as follows:

- Class 0 Miscellaneous
- Class 1 Administration of the U.S. Government
- Class 2 Extradition
- Class 3 Protection of private and national interests
- Class 4 Claims
- Class 5 International conferences and organizations
- Class 6 Commerce, customs, trade
- Class 7 Political relations of states
- Class 8 Internal affairs of states

As papers accumulated under a specific subject they were assigned consecutive numbers, called enclosure numbers, subordinate to the decimal classification and set off from it by a slash mark (/). The incoming communication and accompanying reply were usually assigned the same enclosure number. The decimal file number and enclosure number are stamped or typed on the first paper in each file.

For example, a document dated in 1941 in the subject file for financial affairs in Switzerland is 854.51/391. Class 8 is for the internal affairs of states, 54 is the number for Switzerland, 51 is for financial affairs, and the number after the slash indicates there were 390 other documents in the file dated from 1910 to 1941. A document dated in 1945 in the subject file for U.S. Claims against Germany is 462.11/3-2345. Class 4 is for claims against Germany (62) by citizens of the United States (11), and the number after the slash indicates the date, March 23, 1945. The main subject file for documents relating to World War II is 740.0011. Class 7 is for relations between states, 40 is for Europe, 00 is for the world, and 11 is for war. Within the main file there are hundreds of subfiles each containing thousands of documents. Sometimes letters or words follow the number and are part of the file title. File 740.0016EW is for war crimes in Europe (13 boxes for the 1940-1944 period), file 740.00119EW is for the termination of the war in Europe (15 boxes for the 1940-1944 period), and file 740.00119 Control (Germany) is for the occupation of Germany (134 boxes for the 1945-1949 period).

The decimal file changed in 1950 although most country numbers remained the same:

- Class 0 Miscellaneous
- Class 1 Administration of the U.S. Government
- Class 2 Protection of interests, persons and property (was class 3)
- Class 3 International conferences and organizations (was class 5)
- Class 4 International trade and commerce (was class 6)
- Class 5 International informational and educational relations, cultural affairs
- Class 6 International political relations (was in class 7)
- Class 7 Internal political and national defense affairs
- Class 8 Internal economic, industrial, and social affairs (previous class 8 subdivided into classes 7, 8, and 9)
- Class 9 Other internal affairs-communications, transportation, science

Researchers not familiar with the State Department Central Files or other State Department records are advised to consult with NARA subject matter experts in the consultation area in Room 2600. They also should consult the filing manuals for the 1910-1949 and 1950-1963 periods.

There are three basic finding aids for the Decimal File: Name Cards, Purport Lists and Purport Cards, and Source Card Index.

Name Cards

There is a name card index for each segment of the decimal file, arranged alphabetically, that helps to locate subject files and documents of interest. It is not comprehensive. There is not a card for each person named in every document, but the index is useful for locating a document from or about a non-government entity or private individual.

Purport Lists and Purport Cards

Every document in every file is listed on purport lists (1910-1944, NARA Microfilm publication M-973) and purport cards (after July 1, 1944) that indicate date, from, to, file number, and a brief description ("purport") of each document. Purport lists and purport cards are arranged in the same order as the records. Researchers should use them to help locate subject files of interest or eliminate the need to examine other records in other subject files.

Source Card Index

There is a comprehensive source card index for each segment that lists every document arranged by U.S. foreign service post, foreign embassy or legation, State Department office, or other agency of the U.S. government, thereunder by "to" and "from," and thereunder chronologically. Source cards, like name cards, are useful primarily for identifying relevant subject file numbers.

Decimal Files

As noted above, class 7 of the decimal file is for political relations of States. Each country, continent, or geographical area had an assigned two-digit number; Europe was assigned number 40. When the war began, the State Department decided to index all war-related documents in file 740.0011EW for the European war. The documents relating to the Pacific war, considered an extension of the European war, were filed under 740.0011PW. These records have been microfilmed as NARA Microfilm Publication M982.

Commissioned in February 1946, the Assistant Secretary of State for Occupied Areas was directly responsible to the Secretary of State for the coordination of department policy on all occupation matters. The Assistant Secretary advised and assisted the Secretary in the formulation of United States policy with respect to the occupation and government of occupied areas and served as the focal point within the department for the coordination of all occupied-areas policy and provided policy guidance to the Department of the Army, which served as the administrator and executor of U.S. government policy within the several occupied areas. The Assistant Secretary was responsible for consolidating and effecting agreement of other departments of the government relating to occupied-area matters; formulated policies with respect to refugees and displaced persons and arms and armament matters; chairing the State-War-Navy Coordinating Committee (SWNCC) (later the State, Army, Navy, Air Force Coordinating Committee or SANACC). The Assistant Secretary was also responsible for the coordination of high-level policy matters and directives of concern to the agencies comprising the SWNCC, including occupied-areas matters, armament policies and other political-military questions, coordinating the view of the Department of State on matters coming before the Far Eastern Commission, and serving as the Department of State contact with the U.S. member of the Far Eastern Commission.

In mid-April 1946 John H. Hilldring became Assistant Secretary of State for Occupied Areas as well as State Department representative on the SWNCC. He served in these capacities until 1947. Charles Eskridge Saltzman replaced Hilldring on September 2, 1947.

The Division of Chinese Affairs under the Office of Far Eastern Affairs was established in 1944 to effectuate, through long-range and day-to-day action, the plans and overall policies formulated by the Office of Far Eastern Affairs for the conduct of United States relations with China and Hong Kong. During a reorganization in 1950, the department changed the Division of Chinese Affairs to the Office of Chinese Affairs and established it under the Bureau of Far Eastern Affairs.

Records of the Office of Intelligence

Records of Bureau of Intelligence and Research

When President Truman disbanded the Office of Strategic Services (OSS) by Executive Order 9621 of September 20, 1945, the Research and Analysis Branch of that organization became part of the State Department. The branch continued the preparation of reports and studies that had begun under the predecessor of the OSS, the Office of the Coordinator of Information. Various organizational units were responsible for preparing intelligence reports over the next sixteen years, including the Interim Research and Intelligence Service, the Office of Intelligence Coordination and Liaison, the Office of Research and Intelligence, the Office of Intelligence Research, and the Bureau of Intelligence and Research.

On July 17, 1941, President Franklin D. Roosevelt issued a Presidential Proclamation that instructed the Secretary of State, acting in conjunction with the Secretary of the Treasury, the Attorney General, the Secretary of Commerce, the Administrator of Export Controls, and the Coordinator of Commercial and Cultural Relations between the American Republics, to prepare an appropriate list of persons and firms working with or for Axis nations and persons to whom exports from the United States were deemed detrimental to the interests of national defense. As a result of this order the Secretary of State established on July 21, 1941, the Division of World Trade Intelligence to handle State Department responsibilities pertaining to the Proclaimed List of Certain Blocked Nationals. The division was at first under the direct supervision of Assistant Secretary Dean Acheson but later became part of the Board of Economic Operations and successor economic offices. On March 1, 1945, it was renamed the Division of Economic Security Controls and as such became a part of the Office of Economic Security Policy on October 20 of that year.

Records of the Office of Economic Security Policy

The Office of Economic Security Policy was established in October 1945. Its mission was to initiate, formulate, and coordinate State Department policies and activities aimed at economic security and at economic aspects of the occupation of Germany, Austria, Japan, and Korea. German and Japanese reparations negotiations were specifically charged to this office in 1946. The office absorbed the Division of Economic Security Control, the Office of the Adviser on German Economic Affairs, and the Office of the Adviser on Far Eastern Economic Affairs. The reparations, industrial, and financial responsibilities of the Division of Financial Affairs and the Division of Foreign Economic Development pertaining to the prospective peace treaties involving Germany, Austria, Japan, and Korea were transferred to this office when those divisions were abolished in 1946.

The three units of the Office of Economic Security Policy (the Division of Economic Security Controls, the Division of German and Austrian Economic Affairs, and the Division of Japanese and Korean Economic Affairs) were ordered to cooperate in the Safehaven program to trace the flow of enemy assets into neutral countries. The office administered the Safehaven mission until March 1947.

The Office of Economic Security Policy was abolished in July 1947. Its functions, personnel, and records were transferred to the Office of Financial and Development Policy.

Records of the Division of Economic Security Controls

The Division of Economic Security Controls was established in March 1945. It assumed the functions of the former Division of World Trade Intelligence, such as the responsibility for American controls over foreign funds and properties mandated by the Proclaimed List of Certain Blocked Nationals (Executive Order 8389). Among its new responsibilities was development of measures to prevent concealment or flight of enemy assets and looted property.

The Division of Economic Security Controls was administered by the Office of Financial and Development Policy until October 1945, when it was placed under the Office of Economic Security Policy.

After the Safehaven was completed, the functions and personnel of the division were returned to the Office of Financial and Development Policy in July 1947, and assigned to the newly-established Division of Occupied Areas Economic Affairs.

Records of the Pauley Reparations Missions, 1945-1948 (Lot File M-17 & M-18)

On April 27, 1945, President Harry S Truman designated Presidential Special Assistant Edwin W. Pauley as his personal representative, with the rank of ambassador, to head the U.S. delegation to the Allied Reparations Commission considering German reparations. At the Crimea Conference the major powers had agreed that Germany would be “obliged to the greatest extent possible to make reparations.” After negotiating the formula and methods for exacting reparations, Pauley led the U.S. Reparations Mission to Japan in late 1945 and a third mission concerning Japanese assets in Soviet-occupied Korea and Manchuria in 1946. On March 7, 1947, Pauley transferred to the Department of State and was designated Special Advisor to the Secretary of State on Reparations.

Records of the U.S. Reparations and Restitution Delegation, Tokyo, 1947-1949

The U.S. Reparations and Restitution Delegation (USRRD) was part of the joint delegation formed by the Allies against Japan for the purpose of carrying out a program of compensation to all concerned countries for wartime seizures of their nationals' properties by the Japanese government. The program was under the administrative aegis of the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers (SCAP). The basic function of the USRRD was to make surveys of the Japanese economy in order to ascertain what business facilities might be removed as reparations goods to the United States without damaging the peacetime economic structure of Japan.

GENERAL RECORDS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

RECORD GROUP 60

The functions of the Department of Justice (DOJ) during World War II did not fundamentally differ from those performed in peacetime, but its work was nevertheless greatly influenced by the war. The DOJ enforced federal laws, rendered legal advice and opinions to the President and the heads of government agencies, investigated violations of most federal legislation, prosecuted offenders of federal laws and represented the interests of the United States in the courts, and supervised the activities of the United States attorneys and marshals.

With the United States entering into war, the DOJ became concerned with the preservation of the internal national security, the protection of civil rights, and the maintenance of law and order. It clarified many wartime legal problems and sought formal advice regarding laws about making and carrying out war plans. The DOJ also gave close attention to the drafting of legislation needed to safeguard internal security and to promote the internal security activities of other agencies, and to the preparation of executive orders and proclamations implementing the powers of the President for carrying on the war.

The DOJ established a War Division on May 19, 1942, to coalesce nonprosecutive and noninvestigative activities regarding the war that had formerly been scattered among the department's organizational units. The War Division's chief predecessor was the Special Defense Unit, which had originated in April 1940 as the Neutrality Laws Unit in the Office of the Attorney General. It was continued in the War Division as the Special War Policies Unit. The War Division was abolished on December 28, 1945.

For some 15 months after the establishment of the War Division, the Special War Policies Unit was responsible for directing and coordinating the activities of the DOJ relating to espionage, sabotage, sedition, subversive activities, and the registration of foreign agents. The Special War Policies Unit was abolished when the War Division was reorganized on August 28, 1943. Its functions in relation to subversive activities were transferred to the DOJ's Criminal Division. Its other functions were distributed among several of the other sections of the War Division. The records of the Special War Policies Unit and its predecessor are in Classes 146, World War II, and 148, War Policy, of the DOJ's Classified Central File.

On April 21, 1942, all nonlitigation functions that the DOJ had performed in enforcing the Trading with the Enemy Act, as amended by the First War Powers Act, were transferred by executive order to the Office of the Alien Property Custodian (APC). The Alien Property Section was established in May 1942 as part of the DOJ's War Division to represent the APC in all litigation in which it was interested. The Alien Property Section also represented the United States in matters arising from the administration of foreign funds control by the Treasury Department, and it rendered legal advice to the APC and the Treasury Department on problems related to alien property and foreign funds control and helped to formulate legislative recommendations. The cases handled by the Alien Property Section dealt largely with admiralty, copyrights, estates, enemy banks, patent problems, and suits against the APC for the return of property or the payment of debts. These activities were transferred to the Claims Division in December 1945. Most of the records of the Alien Property Section, consisting of legal studies, interoffice memorandums, and court briefs, were filed in the Central Classified File, in Class 9-21, Alien Property, and Class 146, World War II.

The Economic Warfare Section, which originated as the Economic Section of the Antitrust Division in 1942, was transferred to the War Division on August 28, 1943. Its chief functions were to collect industrial information, to prepare reports on enemy or enemy-controlled industrial organizations, and to make this information available for use in the economic warfare efforts of the Allies. In fiscal year 1944, the Bureau of the Budget designated the Alien Property Section as the central agency of the government to carry out research in the field of international cartels.

Classified Central Files 1914-

The records are arranged in numerically designated classes, each of which covers some general subject based either upon a specific legislative act or group of related acts or upon specific functions assigned to the Department. NARA has custody of most Class 146 files for the World War II period. Class 146 deals primarily with World War II matters. Classes 146-154 were created during World War II to provide for records relating to certain specific problems that arose during that period. Please consult NARA staff to ascertain boxes and locations for the Central File case files.

RECORDS OF THE FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

RECORD GROUP 65

During World War II the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) investigated all violations of federal laws, with the exception of matters specifically assigned by legislative enactment or otherwise to another federal investigative body. During the war, the FBI directed the greater part of its attention toward internal security problems. It also extended its activities to many Latin America countries, sending liaison agents to work with their police and intelligence forces.

The FBI of the Department of Justice began in 1908 as the Bureau of Investigation. During the next thirty years its size and areas of responsibility significantly increased. With the outbreak of war in 1939, the responsibilities of the FBI increased. Subversion, sabotage, and espionage became major concerns. Agents trained in general intelligence work, and at least one agent trained in defense plant protection, were placed in each of the FBI's 42 field offices. The FBI also developed a network of information sources, often using members of fraternal or veterans' organizations. With leads developed by these intelligence networks and through their own work, Special Agents investigated potential threats to national security.

During the summer of 1941, the FBI focused its internal security efforts on potentially dangerous German, Italian, and Japanese nationals as well as native-born Americans whose beliefs and activities were seen as aiding the Axis powers. The FBI also participated in intelligence collection with their pioneering Technical Laboratory. Its highly skilled and inventive staff cooperated with engineers, scientists, and cryptographers in other agencies to enable the United States to penetrate and sometimes control the flow of information from the belligerents in the Western Hemisphere.

On December 7, 1941 the FBI Headquarters and the 54 field offices were placed on 24-hour schedules. On December 7th and 8th, the FBI arrested previously identified aliens who threatened national security, and turned them over to military or immigration authorities. The FBI augmented its special agent force with National Academy graduates, who took an abbreviated training course. As a result, the total number of FBI employees rose from 7,400 to over 13,000, including approximately 4,000 agents, by the end of 1943.

While most FBI personnel during the war worked traditional war-related or criminal cases, one contingent of agents was unique. Separated from Bureau roles, these agents, with the help of FBI Legal Attachés (Legats), composed the Special Intelligence Service (SIS) in Latin America. The SIS, established by President Roosevelt in 1940, provided information on Axis activities in South America and destroyed its intelligence and propaganda networks. Several hundred thousand Germans or German descendants and numerous Japanese lived in South America. Some of them provided pro-Axis pressure and cover for Axis communications facilities. In every South American country, the SIS was instrumental in bringing about a situation in which, by 1944, continued support for the Axis became difficult.

FBI Record Keeping System

By 1981 the FBI had accumulated over 500,000 cubic feet of records, (not including field files destroyed in the late 1970s). In the Washington, D.C., headquarters there were over six million criminal, civil, security, applicant, and administrative case files dating back sixty years and nearly one hundred indexes to the files, including a general index consisting of 65 million 3" x 5" cards.² In the FBI field operations there were at least five million case files and over 100 million index cards. Altogether, there were over 5,000 cubic feet of records, 260,000 cubic feet of which were in the headquarters and the remainder in the field operations. For security reasons the volume of records maintained in the Legats was kept to a minimum.

The FBI record-keeping was created in October 1921. It is a classified filing system in which each classification (or category of records) relates to a specific violation of law or specific administrative activity. In 1981 there were 214 classifications. Under this system each case file carries a classification number plus a sequential number. For example, a kidnapping case file might carry the number 7-10, indicating it was the tenth case opened in classification 7-kidnapping. Each document in the case file has its own numerical designation, referred to as serials. Hence 7-10-8 would refer to the eighth document in the tenth kidnapping case. This process of serialization, providing a unique numeric identifier for each document, gives the FBI control of its records at the item level. FBI investigations involving more than one type of violation are normally classified under the more serious crime. If an individual has been involved in several violations over a period of time, separate case files would have been initiated for each violation. However, in security cases only one file is used for each individual or organization. When a case file has been opened for an individual or organization under a particular security classification, all subsequent documentation relating to security matters is filed in that case, regardless of the nature of the investigation. Although most of the file maintenance procedures used in the FBI headquarters are duplicated in field offices and overseas Legats, some variations do exist. Because the files are numbered consecutively, the same case will not have the same number at headquarters and in the field offices. Additionally, classification of investigations is idiosyncratic, in both the field office and headquarters, so that the same case may be in different classifications in the field office and headquarters.

Although most records are maintained in central file rooms in headquarters and in the field offices, some are kept separately from the related case file or as a separate series outside the main file room. The latter include records in special file rooms, electronic surveillance (ELSUR) materials, personnel and budget records, FBI National Academy records, public inquiries, automated and audiovisual materials, and sensitive and confidential materials maintained under the personal control of the special agents in charge (SACs) of the field offices.

2. Two types of entries are prepared for the general index: "Main cards" for individuals, organizations, and general subjects that are the primary focus of an investigation; and cross reference or "see" cards for secondary subjects. Beginning in 1921 the FBI also prepared abstracts or summaries of individual documents. Each abstract was made in duplicate on 3" x 5" slips. One set was arranged alphabetically by the source or originator of the document (field office, federal agency, or private individual), while a second set was arranged by file number. A third set of abstract slips was prepared for foreign material relating to the FBI's Special Intelligence Service (SIS) during the 1940-1948 period. Adoption of the Automation of Incoming Mail Serialization (AIMS) system in 1976 eliminated the need for abstracting, although the practice was not stopped completely until 1979.

Each classification begins with a zero (O) file and a double zero (OO) file, which are used for documents relating to the individual classification but which do not warrant an individual file. Most OO files include material relating to the administrative history of the classification and document, why the classification was initiated, changes in legislation modifying the FBI's investigative responsibilities, investigative policy, unique investigative procedures, and jurisdictional disputes between the FBI and other federal agencies. Before the OO files were established, O files were sometimes used for policy documentation relating to the classification. Now, for the most part, the O files consist of citizen complaints, routine requests for information, general reference material, and newspaper clippings. In 1977 the FBI began using the O files for one-serial (single document) cases that would previously have been separate case files.

Within each classification the individual case files follow the O and OO files. The number of case files in a classification can range from fewer than one hundred to hundreds of thousands. For example, among the larger classifications at FBI headquarters in 1981 were classifications 100 (Domestic Security) and 105 (Foreign Counterintelligence), together consisting of over 800,000 case files (13,000 cu. ft.). The case files contain a variety of documentation, including FBI agent reports; teletype messages; prosecutive summaries; accounts of interviews and physical surveillance; letters; memorandums; lab reports; informant reports; photographs; newspaper clippings and other public record material; and logs, transcripts, and summaries of electronic surveillance.

Major World War II-Era FBI File Classifications

Classification 61 Treason

Established prior to 1924, this classification covers investigations of persons or organizations engaging in treasonous activities or concealing knowledge of such activities. Specific statutes, which include Title 18, USC, Sections 2383-2385, 2389-2390, and 793-794, also cite as treasonous service in, or recruitment of, others to serve in armed hostility against the United States and aiding or procuring the escape of interned enemy aliens. FBI investigative instructions note that treason is the "highest crime known to this country" and is the only crime mentioned in the U.S. Constitution. Instructions to the field further state that any evidence of possible violations of the treason statute should receive "immediate, continuous and preferred investigation." The OO file contains no documentation prior to 1938. In late 1939 and early 1940 field offices were instructed to file accusations in the category separately and prepare Nationalistic Tendency Cards on subjects in this classification. Before World War II the major focus of concern was alleged Communist Party activities. During World War II the FBI focused on America's wartime enemies, and beginning in late 1944, treasonous activities committed by Americans in foreign theatres of operation. In addition, the FBI investigated allegations that persons aided in the escape of prisoners of war from U.S. internment camps.

Classification 62 Miscellaneous Subversive

This classification was established about 1921 to serve as a catch-all classification. Classification 66, Administrative, was established concurrently or shortly thereafter, so the number of early administrative records in Classification 62 is quite limited. However, since Headquarters classification 63 did not become a repository for miscellaneous non-subversive files until 1953, there is a great deal of non-subversive material in Headquarters classification 62.

Classification 64 Foreign Miscellaneous

Classification 64 contains many records relating to the FBI's activities in Latin America both before and during World War II. The FBI's Special Intelligence Service (SIS) program is documented in this classification.

Classification 65 Espionage

The FBI uses this classification for investigations of individuals alleged to have unlawfully obtained information affecting national defense or unlawfully disclosed such information to a foreign government. The FBI's investigative jurisdiction in this area rests on both legislation, beginning with the Espionage Act of 1917, and Presidential directives, notably two World War II-era directives, promulgated in 1939 and 1943, which assigned to the FBI primary responsibility for investigating espionage and subversion.

This classification, which predates 1924, is one of the oldest FBI classifications. Classification 65 remained relatively inactive until the World War II period. Between 1939 and 1945, it became extremely active; in fact, the bulk of cases opened at Headquarters date from this period. Most of the cases opened during the World War II era did not deal with espionage; rather, most of these files dealt with individuals suspected of Axis sympathies.

Classification 73 Application for Pardon

Established before 1924, Classification 73, Application for Pardon after Completion of Sentence and Application for Executive Clemency, covers investigations of individuals seeking pardons from the President after completing prison sentences for federal offenses as well as investigations of those convicted of federal offences who seek executive clemency. The FBI rarely conducts investigations of the latter sort. Applications for pardon investigations are conducted in the same manner as applicant investigations generally. Thus, they include interviews with the subject's family, friends, neighbors, and employers as well as credit checks and law enforcement records.

Classification 97 Foreign Agents Registration Act

The FBI opened this classification in 1939 to document violations of the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938. The Act requires "foreign propagandists" or "agents of a foreign principal" engaged in distributing propaganda to register with the State Department.

Classification 100 Subversive Matter, Internal Security, Domestic Security Investigations

In 1936, President Roosevelt directed the FBI to conduct investigations of individuals and organizations suspected of engaging in subversive activities such as communism and fascism. In 1939 the FBI was designated by Presidential Directive as the "clearing house" for national defense and general domestic intelligence matters. This Directive established the classification formally in 1939.

In the period 1940-1970 the FBI's activity in this area was almost exclusively limited to investigations of communist and Soviet individuals and organizations. For example, in 1944 the classification was restricted to cases bearing the character of internal security in which the accompanying symbol letter C for communist or R for Russian was attached.

Classification 105 Foreign Counterintelligence – Russia (formerly Internal Security)
(Nationalistic Tendency – Foreign Intelligence) (Individuals and Organizations – by country)

Classification 112 Foreign Funds

Classification 113 Foreign Military and Naval Affairs

Classification 114 Alien Property Custodian Matter (Obsolete)

In 1945, the Department of Justice directed the FBI to investigate cases brought against the Alien Property Custodian under the Trading with the Enemy Act of 1917 and the first War Powers Act of 1941. Most investigations examined the ownership and control of unvested property and of vested property that was subject to claims and litigation.

Classification 121 Loyalty of Government Employees (Obsolete)

The FBI opened this classification in 1947 for investigation under Executive Order 9835 of March 22, 1947, which required investigations of the loyalty of all federal employees and all future applicants. The program established a Loyalty Review Board to make final determinations, but the FBI was assigned the task of conducting the initial investigations. The FBI had jurisdiction over all civilian agencies, while the military investigated its civilian employees. The FBI's instructions from Headquarters to the field stressed a businesslike approach that recognized "there is a distinction between Liberalism and Communism." Full field investigations were conducted only if the preliminary investigations found derogatory information. In response to considerable criticism of the loyalty program Director Hoover argued that the FBI made no recommendations but only reported the facts to the employing agency. The FBI insisted that only the agencies and the Loyalty Review Board made determinations on people's loyalty.

RECORDS OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM

RECORD GROUP 82

The Federal Reserve System was established as an independent agency by the Federal Reserve Act of December 23, 1913. It serves as the national central bank. Among its duties are executing federal monetary policy, transferring funds, handling government deposits and debt issues, and supervising and regulating banks.

The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve Board determines general monetary, credit, and operating policies for the Federal Reserve System, and formulates rules and regulations necessary to carry out the purposes of the Federal Reserve Act.

Australia

Australia declared war on Germany on September 3, 1939, and began fighting the Japanese shortly after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. During 1942, Australian forces fighting in North Africa returned to Australia to aid in the country's defense, as well as to mount an offensive on New Guinea. They were joined by American forces; some coming from the Philippines and others from the United States. General Douglas MacArthur established his Allied Command Headquarters first at Melbourne and then in the summer of 1942 he moved it to Brisbane. During the war nearly 900,000 Australians served in the military, nearly 14 percent of the population. General Sir Thomas Blamey was the senior military officer. Over half a million Australian soldiers were sent out of Australia, and over 17,000 died in the Pacific Theater. Some 8,000 Australians were killed or died of starvation or disease while prisoners of the Japanese.

Australia's investigations into Japanese war crimes began in 1943 with the creation of the Commission of Inquiry into Japanese Forces Atrocities. The commission was to inquire into and report to the Attorney-General whether there had been atrocities or breaches of the rules of warfare by members of the Japanese armed forces in, or in the neighborhood of, the Territory of New Guinea or the Territory of Papua; and if so what evidence was available of any such atrocities or breaches. In addition, evidence of these alleged breaches and atrocities had already been collected by army headquarters staff in Melbourne as early as 1942.

The Australian War Crimes Commission was an extension of the Commission of Inquiry into Japanese Atrocities, in that it investigated war crimes and also attempted to ascertain individual responsibilities. This mandate was in line with the operations of the United Nations War Crimes Commission (UNWCC).

The first War Crimes Commission was succeeded by the second Australian War Crimes Commission on September 3, 1945, with additional judges and extension of powers. The second commission was made official by the Attorney-General and Minister for External Affairs, H. V. Evatt, on September 3, 1945, and established as an extension of the first one. An additional two Commissioners under the Chairmanship of Sir William Webb were appointed to the Board of Inquiry which formed the new commission. These were Alan James Mansfield, a Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of Queensland, and Richard Clarence Kirby, a Judge at District Courts of the State of New South Wales.

Burma

In 1935 Burma was detached from India and the country was made a Crown Colony, with its own constitution and parliament, but with a governor appointed by the British. In 1937 it was set up as a semi-autonomous federation, with some degree of internal self-government and its own prime minister. Burmese nationalists were dissatisfied with this situation and some allied themselves with Japanese agents, who in the late 1930s plotted to bring Burma under Japanese control. Most notable among the Japanese operatives in Burma was Col. Keiji Suzuki. He developed extensive contacts with nationalist elements, supplied them with money, and helped some young nationalists, including Aung San, receive military training in Formosa. Just prior to the Japanese invasion of Burma, Suzuki helped organize the Patriotic Burmese Force, soon renamed the Burma Independence Army (BIA), in Indochina. The BIA initially numbered about 2,500 men, mostly exiles associated with the Burma Independence Movement (BIM), a small anti-British nationalist group formed in the late 1930s.

Japanese troops landed in Burma on December 8, 1941. During December 1941, BIA, under the leadership of Suzuki and Aung San, joined the Japanese in fighting the British forces. The capital city of Rangoon was captured, and by the end of April 1942, Lashio, the Burmese end of the Burma Road, was captured. When Mandalay fell to the Japanese the first week of May 1942, the Japanese held all of central Burma. By the summer of 1942, the BIA numbered 20,000 men.

After the British were driven out of Burma in 1942, the Japanese entrusted the civil administration of some occupied areas to the BIA, which proceeded to commit atrocities against the minority populations. In May 1942 Tun Oke, a Burmese dissident trained in Japanese administration, was appointed to head a central Burmese government which concluded a treaty with the Japanese. This government was replaced in August with a more extensive civilian administration under Ba Maw. Meanwhile the Japanese recruited the Burma Defense Force, under General Aung San, and this force became Burma National Army in August 1943.

In 1943 the Allies mounted an offensive against the Japanese in Burma and in August 1943 the Japanese granted an ostensible independence to Burma, under Ba Maw. Ba Maw formed a one-party state and declared war on the Allies. The Japanese stripped Burma of two Shan states, which were given to Thailand. By 1944 many Burmese were working against the Japanese, and in August 1944 Aung San formed the Anti-Fascist Organization (later the Anti-Fascist People's Freedom League), an underground, Communist-inspired movement to fight the Japanese. Aung San, who had served as Burma's Minister of Defense after independence, defected with his army to the British in March 1945.

Burmese guerrillas, a Burma national army, and Allied forces mounted campaigns late in the war to regain Burma. As they neared Rangoon in the spring of 1945, the puppet government fled to Japan. The British occupied Burma until a civil government was established in 1946. Aung San later formed the first post-war administration and negotiated Burma's independence from the British. On October 17, 1947, under a treaty with Great Britain, Burma became an independent republic.

China

The Second World War began for China near the northeastern Chinese city of Mukden in September 1931, when Japanese and Chinese forces began fighting. The victorious Japanese, in northeastern China, established the state of Manchukuo and set up Henry Pui as their puppet emperor. Rather than contest Japanese aggression, Nationalist General Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, the leader of the Kuomintang forces, allocated his resources to fighting the Chinese Communists, led by Mao Tse-Tung. In 1936 Gen. Chang Hsueh-liang seized Chiang Kai-Shek at Xi'an, to force him to terminate the civil war against the Communists in order to establish a united front against the encroaching Japanese. Despite the resultant truce, Chiang's release, and the 1937 outbreak of the Second Sino-Japanese War, the agreement between Nationalists and Communists soon broke down. In 1937 the Japanese poured troops into China, claiming Chinese troops were fighting their limited occupation in the Peking area. During the latter half of 1937 Japanese forces seized Peking and Shanghai. The Nationalist forces evacuated its capital of Nanking in 1937 and withdrew to Chungking. The Japanese forces took Nanking and more than 50,000 civilians were slaughtered and 20,000 cases of rape were later documented. These Japanese actions led to a temporary reconciliation of the Kuomintang regime and the Chinese Communists.

By the time the war began in Europe in 1939, the Japanese had killed at least 2 million Chinese, encouraged opium use among Chinese, and occupied more than 900,000 square miles of China. Despite this, by 1940 Chiang's best troops were being used against the Communists in the northwest. After the Japanese took Nanking and Hankou, Chiang moved his capital to Chongqing. As the Sino-Japanese War merged with World War II, Chiang's international prestige increased. He attended the Cairo Conference (1943) with Franklin Delano Roosevelt and Winston Churchill. He and his wife, Soong Mei-ling, were the international symbols of China at war, but Chiang was bitterly criticized by Allied officers, notably the American commander in China, Gen. Joseph Stillwell, for his internal policies and his conduct of the war.

When the Japanese began withdrawing forces from China in 1943, the vacuum was often filled by the Chinese Communists. On August 8, 1945, the Soviet Union declared war on Japan and invaded Manchukuo, which once again became Manchuria. Soviet troops looted Manchuria until the end of Soviet occupation in April 1946. A Chinese civil war continued until 1949 at which time a People's Republic of China was proclaimed in Peking in September 1949 and Mao became Chairman of the Central Government Council of the newly government. Chiang Kai-Shek moved his Kuomintang government to the island of Formosa (Taiwan) in December 1949.

Under UNWCC auspices, China founded a war crimes agency in late 1943. This agency was charged with the duties of investigating the crimes that fell within its sphere, apprehending the accused, and conducting the trials in its own courts. The Law Governing the Trial of War Criminals of October 24, 1946, provided the Chinese courts with a very broad legal basis.

American officials actually supervised the first war crimes trials conducted in China. Beginning in early 1946, a series of trials took place in Shanghai centering about the inhumane treatment of captive American airmen by the Japanese. While these trials were taking place, Chinese authorities apprehended Japanese suspected of committing war crimes against Chinese civilians during the occupation period. By early March 1946 the inspection department of the Shanghai District Court announced that it had compiled 11,889 cases of war crimes. Less than two weeks later reports disclosed that the number of cases of Japanese atrocities filed in Shanghai alone had risen to over 30,000.

The Japanese subsequently arrested were mainly Army and "gendarmierie" personnel, and some civilians. Most were suspected of murder and manslaughter, or willfully destroying properties. Fewer cases involved torturing civilians, plundering, and rape. In an effort to manage the trials, Chungking constituted a total of thirteen military tribunals in thirteen districts. By the second week of April 1946 the trials were underway. The trials continued into the early spring of 1949. The National Government, beset by civil war with the Communists, transferred 260 convicted Japanese war criminals to Tokyo to serve out their terms of imprisonment. It appears that the Chinese only tried 605 cases, with 883 individuals tried. Convictions resulted for 504 defendants, death sentences were given to 149 individuals, and life sentences to 83 individuals.

India

India, as a member of the British Commonwealth, went to war against the Axis in 1939. At that time, the British Indian Empire included the present countries of India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, and Sri Lanka. From the beginning of the war the Indian Congress Party, led by Mohandas Gandhi and Jawaharlal Nehru, lobbied for Indian independence. Gandhi demanded immediate independence as the price for India's participation in the war and threatened mass civil disobedience. The British viceroy's council declared the Congress Party an illegal organization and in August 1942 began to arrest Ghandhi, Nehru, and other party leaders. Rioting broke out in Bombay and other cities. Further complicating efforts to marshal Indian forces against the Axis were the endless scheming of Hindu and Moslem nationalists over the question of which religious group would ultimately govern India.

Both Germany and Japan took advantage of the anti-British sentiments to sponsor Fifth Column movements in India. From upwards of 75,000 Indian prisoners of war the Japanese recruited some to form the Indian National Army (INA). It was placed under the control of Gen. Mohan Singh, an Indian major who had surrendered early in the Malaya campaign. By late 1942 Singh had a force numbering about 16,000. Because Singh and his main supporters proved more interested in pursuing purely Indian objectives than Japanese ones, in December 1942 there was a falling out between the Indians and the Japanese. Rather than submit to Japanese domination, Singh ordered the INA to disband. The Japanese quickly installed a new INA leader. This was one of Gandhi's political opponents, Subhas Chandra Bose. Bose was a much more radical Indian nationalist than Singh had been, but was also more amenable to Japanese interests. Bose purged the INA of Singh and about 4,000 of his supporters and then began to reorganize it in early 1943.

By May 1943 the INA had some 12,000 troops on paper, and was in the process of recruiting more soldiers. The INA went into combat for the first time in Burma in January 1944, when some small units supported the Japanese 55th Division in the Arakan Campaign. That April about 7,000 INA soldiers joined Japanese troops of the Japanese 15th Army in the invasion of India in March 1944. This combined military force reached Imphal and Kohima, about thirty miles from the Burmese border, in an attempt to seize the Burmese border. It took Allied forces until August 1944 to repel the Japanese-INA advance. During the campaign at least 700 INA soldiers went over to the British and well over 4,000 were killed in action or died of wounds. After the war, a number of INA soldiers were tried by courts-martial, with the result that several dozen were imprisoned and nine hanged as traitors.

During the war Indians fought valiantly in North Africa, Iraq, Syria, and elsewhere. The Royal Indian Air Force had ten squadrons. The Royal Indian Navy ended the war with 30,000 men. More than 2 million Indians volunteered for the Indian Army. About 700,000 Indian troops served in the Burma phase of the Allied China-Burma campaign. India was granted its independence on August 15, 1947.

Japan

The Japanese Empire was ruled by Emperor Hirohito (1901-1989) since 1926. The empire included Korea and Formosa, as well as Japan. He had full executive power, with the advice of his Cabinet and Privy Council. He exercised legislative powers with the consent of the Imperial Diet. It consisted of a House of Peers and a House of Representatives. The 404 peers included princes, counts, barons, and men of great wealth. The representatives were voted into office. The Emperor's cabinet was dominated by military officers.

Although the Emperor was the head of state, he was not the head of the Japanese government. From the early 1930s to the end of the war, the military was responsible for giving most of the orders. This was accomplished by having a general as the Prime Minister and by using the government to control the population and any organizations that might threaten military control.

The most powerful person in Japan, the Prime Minister, was appointed by the Emperor on the advice of his principal advisers and elder statesmen. The military leaders, after assassinating two civilian Prime Ministers, in 1932 forced the emperor to appoint the first of a succession (with a few short-term civilians) of generals or admirals as Prime Minister.

Japan began expanding its empire in September 1931, with a conquest of northeastern China. The League of Nations condemned Japan in 1933, and Japan quit the League. In November 1936, Japan signed the Anti-Comintern Pact with Germany, to form a common interest against threats by the Soviet Union. Japan moved again against China in 1937 and by 1939 seized many of China's important cities. Japan also created the Great East Asia Co-Prosperity Sphere that was intended to form a new balance of power in the Pacific. In July 1939 the United States notified Japan that it was terminating the 1911 U.S.-Japanese commercial treaty, cutting Japan off from vital imports. After the Germans won the battle of France and installed the Vichy Regime, Japan, about to sign the Tripartite Pact and become a member of the Axis, got German approval to occupy French Indo-China. In April 1941, Japan and the Soviet Union signed a neutrality pact that contained a Soviet pledge to respect the borders of the puppet state of Manchukuo. This pact gave Japan protection on its Soviet flank.

The military-dominated Japanese Cabinet expelled the remaining moderates and in July 1941 ordered a Japanese invasion of the rest of Indo-China. The United States responded by freezing all Japanese assets in the United States and cutting off all oil exports to Japan. Prime Minister Fumimaro Konoe tried to work out a diplomatic solution to the growing crisis but he resigned and was replaced by Minister of War Hideki Tojo (1884-1948). He demanded the United States must end aid to China, accept the Japanese seizure of Indo-China, resume normal trade, and not reinforce U.S. bases in the Far East. The United States Secretary of State on November 26, 1941 informed Japanese diplomats that the Japanese must withdraw from China and Indo-China. Tojo responded by ordering an attack on Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, and the Philippines. These took place in December 1941.

During the war Tojo transformed a political organization, the Imperial Rule Assistance Association, into a virtual government agency for controlling industrial, agricultural, and patriotic groups. Tojo reorganized his cabinet in 1943, bringing in industrialists and financial experts. He also became almost a one-man Cabinet, holding down the posts of Prime Minister, Foreign Minister, Minister of War, Minister of Education, Minister of Munitions, and Chief of the General Staff. Tojo's Cabinet crumbled soon after the fall of Saipan in June 1944. A new Cabinet was organized on July 22, 1944, with Gen. Kuniaki Koiso as its leader. It lasted until April 4, 1945. On April 9, Adm. Kantaro Suzuki formed a Cabinet dominated by elder statesmen. He began efforts to end the war. On July 26, a proclamation was issued from the Potsdam Conference that said the Allies agreed that Japan would be given an opportunity to end the war and if they did not, the alternative was "the utter devastation of the Japanese homeland."

The Cabinet was still debating how to surrender on August 6, 1945 when an atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima. Two days later the Soviet Union, ignoring a neutrality pact, declared war on Japan and sent troops into Japanese-held Manchuria. On August 9, the United States dropped an atomic bomb on Nagasaki, but the Japanese Army did not surrender. However, on August 15th the Emperor announced Japan's surrender without actually using the word. After some minor negotiations, the United States announced the end of the war on August 14, 1945. The Japanese formally surrendered on September 3, 1945.

The occupation began in late August and by the end of 1945, nearly a dozen divisions were in the country, including a combined British Commonwealth task force. The occupation was supposed to be supervised by the Allied Control Commission, which included representatives of all the Allied powers, including the Soviet Union. In practice, however, the commission yielded real power to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers (SCAP). A treaty of peace was signed with the Japanese in 1951 and in 1952 Japan was again allowed to run its own affairs. U.S. military occupation would continue until 1955, but as of 1952 the United States had no direct role in Japanese internal affairs.

Philippines

The Philippines was ceded to the United States by Spain in the treaty ending the Spanish-American War. In 1916, by an Act of Congress, the Philippines was promised withdrawal of American authority as soon as a stable government could be established. By then, Filipinos were voting for their own legislators and provincial governor. A Governor-General represented U.S. authority. The Territory of the Philippines became the Commonwealth of the Philippines under the terms of the Tydings-McDuffie Act of 1934, which created it as an internally self-governing entity in preparation for independence. The President of the Commonwealth was Manuel Quezon (1878-1944). He was first elected in 1935 and again in November 1941.

As a commonwealth, the Philippines remained dependent upon the United States for defense. Retired U.S. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, former U.S. Army Chief of Staff, onetime commander of the Army's Philippine Department, and son of the Philippines' last U.S. Military Governor, became the commonwealth's military adviser and head of a U.S. military mission.

In July 1941 Gen. MacArthur was recalled to active duty and given command of U.S. and Filipino troops in the Philippines. When the Japanese attacked the Philippines in December 1941, the forces defending it consisted of about 10,000 U.S. Army troops, 12,000 Filipino scouts (Filipino enlisted men who were serving in the U.S. Army as officers), and about 100,000 ill-trained and ill-equipped soldiers of the Philippine Army. The Japanese made quick advances on the Philippines and by mid-March, MacArthur, President Quezon, and other U.S. and Filipino officials were evacuated to Australia. American forces surrendered to the Japanese on May 6, 1942.

Japan hoped for a peaceful occupation of the Philippines. However, guerrilla groups constantly harassed the Japanese. To counter guerrilla activities, on October 14, 1943, the Japanese declared the Philippines "independent," with Jose Laurel as President. The new government had limited power and served primarily as a means by which the Japanese occupation forces could better control the populace. Laurel and the other officials of the government were by no means abject puppets of the Japanese, and clashed with them on numerous occasions.

By mid-1944 guerrillas controlled 60 percent of Philippine territory. By the fall of 1944 there were well over 100,000 organized guerrillas waiting to act as scouts and fighters when the Americans returned. On October 20, 1944, American forces under MacArthur landed on Leyte and began the process of defeating the Japanese. With MacArthur on Leyte was Segismondo Osmena (1878-1961), the former Vice President of the Philippines, who had become President upon the death of Quezon on August 1, 1944. By early March 1945 Manila had been captured and civil control of the Philippines was placed in the hands of Osmena. At the end of June 1945, MacArthur declared that most of the Philippines was liberated. Fighting continued with about 65,000 Japanese troops in the mountains of Luzon under Gen. Yamashita. They held out until the end of the war.

The Philippines, by Executive Order 64, signed on August 16, 1945, established a War Crimes Office as a branch of the Philippines Army. However, primary responsibility for war crimes investigation and prosecution remained in American hands until January 1, 1947. American legal officers stayed in the Philippines until June 1947 to assist with Filipino investigations. During 1945-1946 the Philippine government set about purging the collaborationists who had held government posts under the Japanese. Laurel and most of the wartime Filipino officials were let off lightly by the Commonwealth of the Philippines.

On July 29, 1947, President Manual A. Roxas signed Executive Order 68, directing that Japanese war criminal suspects be tried by military commissions. Military commissions followed the American pattern set down in SCAP war crimes regulations of December 5, 1945. Military commissions began operating in late 1947 and continued until December 30, 1949. In all there were 72 cases and 169 defendants. Convictions resulted for 133 and there were 17 death sentences and 87 life sentences.

Independence came to the Philippines on July 4, 1946, when the Commonwealth of the Philippines became an independent republic.

Thailand

In 1936 the constitutional monarchy of Siam abrogated its treaties with the United States and other nations and proclaimed independence from any foreign interference in its affairs. New treaties establishing this principle were signed in 1937. In 1939 the government announced that Siam was to be known as Thailand. When war began in Europe in 1939, Thailand declared its neutrality. When the Vichy government refused to adjust the Thailand-French Indo-China borders, Thai troops crossed the border and began fighting French forces. Japan mediated the dispute, which ended with Vichy France ceding about 21,000 square miles to Thailand.

On December 8, 1941, Japanese forces landed on the coast of Thailand, with the assistance of Prime Minister Lang Pipul. The troops then passed through Thailand for the invasion of British Malaya. Pipul embraced Japanese policy, declaring war on the United States and England on January 25, 1942, and recognizing the Japanese puppet government in China. In October 1942 Pipul suspended the Parliament and became a dictator controlled by the Japanese occupation authorities. As a reward for cooperation, Japan ceded to Thailand four northern Malayan states and territory from Burma, a total of about 30,000 square miles. However, beset by a widespread guerrilla movement, Japan inflicted a harsh occupation on Thailand. The Siamese resistance had strong ties to the Thai government, and it maintained contact with the Allies. It provided a steady stream of reliable information on Japanese activities in Siam. As a result, the Allies never declared Thailand "hostile," simply viewing it as more evidence of Japanese aggression. After Japan's surrender Thailand swiftly nullified its 1942 declaration of war against the Allies. But peace treaty negotiations with England and France continued until 1946, when Thailand gave back all territory acquired during the war. The name Thailand was changed back to Siam in September 1945, and then to Thailand once more in the late 1940s.

RECORDS OF THE OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF WAR RECORD GROUP 107

Records of the Office of the Secretary of War

During World War II the Secretary of War's Office had two major functions. The first was to determine general policy for the military establishment as a whole and policy with respect to special military problems as they arose. The Secretary's decisions, transmitted as directives by the Chief of Staff to his subordinates at the appropriate levels of command, were translated into action throughout the War Department and the army. The other major function was to supervise the procurement of weapons, equipment, and supplies for the army.

The wartime Secretaries of War were Henry L. Stimson, July 10, 1940-September 21, 1945, and Robert P. Patterson, September 27, 1945-July 18, 1947.

Coordination and Records Decimal File 1943-1946 (General Correspondence) (0107-A1-102)

Much of the Secretary of War's general correspondence for this period was forwarded to other offices for reply and filing. In many cases, the files in this series consist only of a cross-reference sheet, the originals of those described in Entry 101, for each incoming and outgoing document and a copy of the Secretary of War's reply. The cross-reference sheets generally indicate to which office the incoming document was referred. The cross-reference sheets in this series contain many references to other series among the records of the Office of the Secretary of War. The most frequent cross-reference is to a "secret file." The documents referred to may be filed in Stimson's "Safe File," (0107-A1-99). Cross-references to a "new file" refer to Secretary of War Patterson's correspondence, February 1946-July 1947 (0107-A1-110). The records are arranged according to the War Department Decimal Classification Scheme. At the end of the series are a number of project files arranged alphabetically by subject. The records within a project file are generally arranged alphabetically by subtopic, or, in a few cases, are arranged chronologically and numbered. Boxes 1-175 location: 390/8/34/05.

Cross-Reference Sheets to the Security-Classified Correspondence 1946-1947 (0107-A1-107)

The cross-reference sheets in this series are identical in format to those described in Entry 101; some are duplicated in Entry 108. The records are arranged in two parts: the first is arranged according to the War Department Decimal Classification Scheme; the second is arranged alphabetically according to subject of the project file. Box 1 location: 390/9/3/04.

Secretary of the Army (Patterson) General Decimal File 1946-1947 (Formerly Security-Classified Correspondence) (0107-A1-108)

This series consists largely of memorandums exchanged between the Secretary of War and the Under Secretary and the Assistant Secretaries of War; "stayback" copies of letters, memorandums, and reports to the Secretary of State, Secretary of the Navy, the President, and other high officials of the federal government; memorandums and position papers received from the War Department General and Special Staffs; copies of processed documents and publications of the War Department; and cross-reference sheets. Included are documents originally classified as "top secret" and "secret." Unlike the "Safe File" (0107-A1-106), which was maintained in Patterson's immediate office, this series was kept in the Coordination and Records Division of the Secretary's Office. Arranged according to the War Department Decimal Classification Scheme followed by six project (subject) files. Boxes 1-10 location: 390/9/3/04.

These are 5" x 8" carbon copies of the top portion of the 8" x 10" sheets interfiled with the correspondence described in Entry 110. Each sheet provides the primary decimal (upper left corner) under which either the document or the original 8" x 10" cross-reference sheet is filed, the decimals under which other copies of the cross-reference sheet are filed, the decimal (shown in the shaded box) under which the cross-reference sheet itself is filed, date of document, date of receipt, name of writer and recipient, security classification, subject and summary of contents, and notations concerning enclosures and disposition of the document. Arranged according to the War Department Decimal Classification Scheme. At the end of the series are cross-reference sheets for project (subject) files. Arranged alphabetically by subject and thereunder by decimal number. Boxes 1-31 location: 390/9/3/06.

Coordination & Records Decimal File 1946-1947 (General Correspondence) (0107-A1-110)

Most of the Secretary of War's general correspondence of this period was forwarded to other offices for reply and filing. In many cases, the files in this series consist only of a cross-reference sheet, the originals of those described in Entry 109, for each incoming and outgoing document and a copy of Patterson's reply. Generally, the cross-reference sheets indicate to which office the incoming document was referred. The cross-reference sheets in this series contain many references to other series among the records of the Office of the Secretary of War. The most frequent cross-reference is to a "secret file." The document thus referred to may be filed in either Patterson's security-classified correspondence (0107-A1-108); or in Patterson's "Safe File" (0107-A1-106). Many documents in this series in the same file with related cross-reference. References to a "previous file" or "old file" refer to the general correspondence of Stimson (0107-A1-102). References to a "new file" related to Patterson's correspondence as Secretary of the Army, which is part of Record Group 335, Records of the Secretary of the Army. Arranged according to the War Department decimal classification scheme. At the end of the series is a number of project files arranged alphabetically by subject. Records of the Under Secretary of War

The Under Secretary of War occupied a position created by an act of December 16, 1940 (54 Stat. 1224), and carried on the duties formerly vested in the Assistant Secretary of War. Robert P. Patterson became Under Secretary when that position was created and continued in office until September 1945. Besides his primary procurement functions, the Under Secretary of War had various duties that were delegated to him from time to time by the Secretary.

The position of the Under Secretary of War was held by the following: Robert P. Patterson (December 16, 1940-September 26, 1945), Kenneth C. Royall (November 9, 1945-July 23, 1947), and William H. Draper, Jr. (August 29, 1947-September 17, 1947).

Administrative Office Decimal File 1943-1945 (General Correspondence) (0107-A1-144)

Much of the series consists of cross-reference sheets that refer to documents which were forwarded to other offices, or were filed elsewhere in this series; in Patterson's security-classified correspondence for this period (0107-A1-141), or within the records of his assistants. The correspondence itself consists mainly of letters, memorandums, reports, cablegrams, bulletins, transcripts of hearings, and publications exchanged with other officials in the War Department, Army Service Forces, Cabinet members, the White House, members of Congress, Federal Bureau of Investigation, businessmen, and industrialists. Within the project files in the series under the project "Foreign Countries and Cities," are records primarily concerning U.S. installations located within the country and the financial, military, and political conditions of the country or city. The records are arranged according to the War Department Decimal Classification Scheme. At the end of the series is a number of project files that are arranged alphabetically by subject or project. Administrative Office Decimal File 1945-1947 (General Correspondence) (0107-A1-147)

Much of this series consists of cross-reference sheets that refer to documents filed elsewhere in this series, in other series of the Under Secretary's correspondence, or among the records of other officials in the Office of the Under Secretary of War or in other offices of the War Department. Most of the correspondence was with other officials in the Offices of the Under Secretary and Secretary of War, the Army Services Forces, Congress, interagency boards and committees, businessmen, and industrialists. The records in the project portion of the files relate almost entirely to the acquisition or lease of land and property for military purposes or the disposal of surplus government property. In addition, records filed under the project "Foreign Countries," deal with the economic needs of those countries, settlement of lend-lease payments, military occupation, and industrial mobilization in the Axis and Allied countries during World War II. The records are arranged according to the War Department Decimal Classification Scheme. At the end of the series is a number of project files arranged alphabetically by subject of the project. Records of the Executive Assistant, Special Assistant and Consultants

Records of Special Assistant Harold H. Neff

Harold H. Neff served as an expert and adviser on foreign economic matters to the Under Secretary of War from September 1941 until September 1945. As such, he was principally concerned with ensuring adequate supplies of critical and strategic defense materials for the United States and its Allies while denying these essential materials to the Axis powers, analyzing the industrial and economic strength of the enemy, and serving as the Under Secretary of War's major contact with the War Department liaison office attached to the Board of Economic Warfare and its successors, the Office of Economic Warfare and the Foreign Economic Administration.

Special Assistant for Economic Warfare Harold H. Neff, General File 1943-1945 (0107-A1- 160)

Neff's correspondence with the Under Secretary of War consists largely of memorandums outlining his views on the policy the War Department should recommend or pursue. There are also synopses of lengthy reports and studies prepared by Neff and forwarded to the Under Secretary of War. The rest of the series includes short notes Neff prepared as aides-memoir summarizing meetings and telephone conversations; minutes of meetings of the Board of Economic Warfare (BEW), with Neff's comments on the matters discussed; mimeographed copies of area studies and reports prepared by the BEW; Foreign Economic Administration, and the Research and Analysis Branch of the Office of Strategic Services; War and State Department cablegrams on economic conditions in Europe; and export license applications received from Spain, Portugal, Turkey, and Sweden. The records are arranged in two alphabetical sequences; the first by office or subject, the second by name of country. The four largest country files (Portugal, Spain, Sweden, and Switzerland) are further divided as follows: general, cables, statistics, and various subjects arranged alphabetically. Among the duties of the Assistant Secretary of War were: supervision of lend-lease policy and the economic phases of military occupation; supervision of civil affairs, that is, the military government of occupied countries; and coordination of War Department policies and activities with those of the State Department. In this capacity, the Assistant Secretary of War served as a member of the State-War-Navy Coordinating Committee. The Assistant Secretary of War also served as Chairman of the Combined Civil Affairs Committee, an Anglo-American committee that served under the Combined Chiefs of Staff. It recommended civil affairs policies for enemy and enemy-held areas that were occupied by combined operations and coordinated military and civilian agency interests in such matters.

The position of Assistant Secretary of War was held successively by John J. McCloy (April 1941- November 1945) and Howard Petersen (December 1945-July 1947).

RECORDS OF THE OFFICE OF THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICER

RECORD GROUP 111

During World War II the Signal Corps was one of the major Technical Services of the Army Service Forces. It was responsible for the research and development, production, and supply and maintenance programs relating to all signal, electronic, meteorological, photographic, cryptographic, goniometric, and related equipment and supplies, except communications and weather equipment used exclusively by the Army Air Forces. The Signal Corps was also responsible for the training of Signal Corps troops and troop units for assignment throughout the military establishment; the installation, operation, and maintenance of the army's major wire and radio communications systems and networks; the production, collection, and preservation of still and motion pictures except for photographic materials peculiar to air operations; and the supervision of signal intelligence operations for the War Department and the army.

The Signal Corps comprised the following groups of organizational units: Office of the Chief Signal Officer in Washington, D.C.; the Signal Corps field agencies in the continental United States; signal sections of tactical and other commands in the United States and overseas; and a variety of Signal Corps troop units.

Office of the Chief Signal Officer

Supervising the Signal Corps was the Office of the Chief Signal Officer. This headquarters, which reported to the Chief of Staff and the Assistant Secretary (later Under Secretary) of War from 1939 to March 1942 and thereafter to Headquarters Army Service Forces, had general responsibility for the Signal Corps programs, administrative supervision over the Signal Corps field agencies in the United States, and varying degrees of technical supervision over Signal Corps administrative and troop units attached to the tactical commands of the Army.

The post of Chief Signal Officer during the war was successively held by Maj. Gen. Joseph O. Mauborgne until September 1941; Maj. Gen. Dawson Olmstead, October 1941-June 1943; and Maj. Gen. Harry C. Ingles after July 1943.

RECORDS OF THE OFFICE OF THE SURGEON GENERAL (ARMY) RECORD GROUP 112

During World War II the Office of the Surgeon General (OSG), headed by the Surgeon General of the Army, was one of the major Technical Services of the Army Service Forces. Like the other Technical Services, the OSG conducted parts of the Army's equipment-procurement and supply programs and parts of its personnel and training programs. It had responsibilities in budgeting, development, specifications, requirements, purchasing, inspection, storage, and issue for such major categories as drugs, biologicals, and medical chemicals; medical, surgical, and dental instruments and professional kits; hospital equipment and supplies; ambulance and litter equipment; medical laboratory chemicals and instruments; and supplies used by individuals and by troop units.

The wartime OSG consisted of four groups: The Surgeon's Office, most of which was located in Washington, D.C.; medical field agencies in the continental United States, responsible to the Surgeon General's Office; medical staff section of tactical or other commands, responsible to a particular tactical commander but forming part of the collective Medical Department; and medical troop units, which also served under particular tactical or service commands in the field.

Surgeon General's Office

Supervising the wartime Medical Department and its many administrative and professional services in Washington, D.C. and the field was the Surgeon General of the Army, Maj. Gen. James C. Magee, June 1939-May 1943, and Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, June 1943-June 1947. The Surgeon General Office, which was his headquarters in Washington, was responsible directly to the Chief of Staff of the U.S. Army until March 1942, when it was placed under the Headquarters Services of Supply.

RECORDS OF THE OFFICE OF THE JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL (NAVY) RECORD GROUP 125

The Office of the Judge Advocate General was directed by the Judge Advocate General of the Navy. During the war, the position was held successively by Rear Admirals Walter B. Woodson and Thomas L. Gatch. The office provided staff to the War Crimes Office (see RG 153) to investigate and assemble evidence on enemy atrocities against service personnel and other United States citizens and to arrange for the prosecution of war criminals.

The U.S. Navy had jurisdiction over trials in the Marianas Islands, the Marshall and Gilbert Islands, Palau Islands, Bonin Islands, and the Caroline Islands after Japan surrendered. From 1945 through 1949, the U.S. Navy conducted 47 trials of 123 accused Japanese war criminals on the islands of Guam and Kwajalein. Trials were held for the mistreatment of prisoners of war and for the executions of captured Allied airmen (including beheading and cannibalism). Accused collaborators were also tried.

The trials resulted in 113 convictions. There were 30 death sentences and 10 executions, all for murder convictions. The navy conducted executions or sent convicted war criminals to Sugamo Prison in Tokyo to serve their sentences. Some accused and convicted war criminals chose suicide rather than face trial, imprisonment, or execution.

RECORDS OF THE UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS

RECORD GROUP 127

Office of the Commandant

During the war the Commandant of the Marine Corps, under the general direction of the Secretary of the Navy, was responsible for the procurement, education, training, distribution, discipline, and discharge of officers and enlisted personnel of the Marine Corps, including the Marine Corps Reserve, and for their administration and general efficiency. The successive wartime commandants were Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb and Lt. Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift.

Field Organizations

Fleet Marine Force, Pacific

After the United States entered World War II, Marine forces operated in the Pacific under the Marine Administrative Command, Fifth Amphibious Corps. On September 17, 1944, this command was replaced by Headquarters, Fleet Marine Force, Pacific, which was established at Pearl Harbor to supervise more effectively the widely separated activities of the Marine Corps in the Pacific. The commanding general of this Force was responsible for the overall administration and supply of the units of the Force, except for the distribution of aviation supplies and ordnance, a function of the Commander Air Force, Pacific Fleet. The commanding general served directly under the Commander in Chief, Pacific Fleet, and advised him on Marine Corps affairs in general and amphibious operations in particular, made recommendations for the distribution and employment of the Fleet Marine Force, and acted as task-force commander in combat operations when so directed.

When the war ended Marine Corps strength was over 480,000, with six divisions and five aircraft wings, their operations coordinated by two amphibious corps.

The 1st Marine Division was reactivated in February 1941. It fought on Guadalcanal, eastern New Guinea, and New Britain. Later the division landed at Peleliu and Okinawa. In September 1945 it was transferred to northern China on occupation duty. It returned to the United States in 1947.

The 2nd Marine Division was activated in February 1941. It fought on Guadalcanal, Tarawa, Tinian, and Okinawa. It served on occupation duty in Japan until early 1946, when it returned to the United States.

The 3rd Marine Division was activated in September 1942. It fought in the Solomons (Bougainville), Guam, and Iwo Jima. It was inactivated at Guam at the end of 1945.

The 4th Marine Division was formed in August 1943 and was composed of Marines coming from the first three Marine Corps Divisions. It first saw action in February 1944 against Roi-Namur Island in Kwajalein. It went on to invade Saipan and Tinian during the summer of 1944. Finally, it participated in the assault on Iwo Jima in February 1945. The division was inactivated in California in November 1945.

The 5th Marine Division was formed in January 1944 and participated in the Iwo Jima assault during February 1945. It served occupation duty in Japan and was inactivated in early 1946.

The 6th Marine Division was formed in August 1944 and its only combat was during the Okinawa Campaign in April-June 1945. The division served occupation duty in Japan for a short period of time and then was transferred to occupation duty in China. It was inactivated in China in April 1946.

Subject File Relating To World War II, 1915-1955 (0127-A1-1011)

This artificial series was assembled by the History and Museums Division and its predecessors and consists of records originating from the Marine Corps Intelligence and Historical Sections, Division of Plans and Policies, and commands in the field. There are also records from the U.S. Army and Navy and from foreign sources. Although most of the records date from World War II, some predate that period, for example, those relating to the situation in China during the late 1920s and 1930s and to the Spanish Civil War. Other records are for the immediate post-World War II period. A number of the records relate to military operations and include reports of engagements or campaigns as well as operating plans. Other records concern United States, Japanese, and German Armed Forces, military equipment, naval vessels, transportation and ordnance; intelligence assessments of foreign nations; military casualties; and prisoners of war. At the end of the series are World War II chronologies dating from December 1941 to December 1944. Arranged alphabetically by subject. A detailed box and folder title list is available. Boxes 1-61 location: 370/B/18/02.

Reports, Studies, and Plans Relating to World War II Military Operations 1936-1956 (0127-A1-1013)

The records document Marine Corps operations in the Pacific during World War II and in northern China (particularly Tsingtao) during the immediate postwar period. The documentation includes operational plans and orders, intelligence studies, action/after action reports and postwar histories. The series contains Naval War College studies compiled in the 1950s on The Battle of Savo Island and The Battle for Leyte Gulf; a special monograph by Col. A. T. Mason on amphibious warfare before and during World War II; studies prepared by the Commander in Chief, U.S. Fleet on amphibious operations during 1943-1944; histories of Marine aircraft groups; historical information relating to Fleet Marine Force Pacific; transcripts of interviews with World War II Navy and Marine officers; administrative histories and operational diaries of Marine Corps headquarters organizations; a November 1945 intelligence study of Japanese installations in Peiping; documentation relating to the surrender of Japanese troops in Tsingtao to Marine forces in October 1945 (including a signed copy of the Act of Surrender); and a report of the Naval Technical Mission to Japan, November 1945. Pre-World War II records include a 1936 geographic study of Wake Island prepared by Marine Corps Schools and a 1940 report on the defenses of Samoa. Lastly, there are copies of British handbooks on amphibious operations and a 1943 Marine Corps counterintelligence manual. Arranged by subject in no consistent pattern, except that records for ground and amphibious units are filed at the beginning of the series, while most records relating to Marine aviation are filed at the end. There is an agency-created folder list for this series. Boxes 1-36 location: 370/B/19/03.

Records Relating to World War II Organizations, Plans and Military Operations 1938-1946 (0127-A1-1014)

The records constituting this series were assembled from a variety of sources, including files of the Adjutant General's and Inspector General's Offices, the Division of Plans and Policies, the War Plans Section, and the Aviation Section. The documents were removed from their original provenance and archived to form this artificial series. Although most of the records relate to World War II, a number predate that period, including those relating to Marine Corps activities in Guam, Nicaragua, and Brazil, 1913-45, and to Marine aviation, dating from the 1920s. World War II records include operational reports, orders and plans, situation and special action reports, correspondence, and numerous photographs. The records relate to a wide variety of subjects, including Pacific Island and North African operations, activities of Marine Corps ground units, the occupation of Japan and China, postwar and demobilization planning, amphibious vehicles, and military equipment. Arranged according to a subject-numeric scheme in the following categories: Chief of Naval Operations, ND (Navy Department), G (Geographic), F (Fleet Marine Force), FA (Fleet Marine Force Aviation), HQ (Commandant, Marine Corps), U and P (U.S. Pacific Fleet), W

(War Department), World War II Photographs, and A (Aviation). There is an agency-created folder list for this series. Boxes 1-15 location: 370/B/19/07.

History and Museums Division

General Subject File 1940-1953 (0127-A1-1023)

The individual files constituting this artificially constructed series follow no consistent pattern of arrangement, but documents relating to particular subjects are often grouped together. Many of the records document Marine Corps operations in World War II. Included are action and intelligence reports for the Guadalcanal, Iwo Jima, Guam and Okinawa campaigns as well as for campaigns in the Marshall and Solomon Islands. Guadalcanal related files include an operations report of the 1st Marine Division, 1943 (files 9-12 through 13-12). For Solomon Islands operations, there are intelligence summaries of Commander Aircraft, Solomon Islands, and Commander Aircraft, Northern Solomons, 1943-1945 (files 2-11 through 5-11, 1-17 through 21-17, and 1-18 through 4-18). Okinawa campaign files include special action reports of the 6th Marine Division and its subordinate units, 1945 (files 6-8 through 8-8, 12-8 through 21-8, 1-9 through 10-9, and 14-12 through 37-12). There is also an operational history of the 1st Marine Air Wing, July 1941-June 1946 (file 3-15). Many other records relate to Marine Corps involvement in the Korean conflict, including a "Report on activities of Fleet Marine Force Pacific from 25 June 1950 to the Amphibious Assault at Inchon" (file 32-6); a two volume "Evaluation of the Influence of Marine Corps Forces on the Course of the Korean War, 4 Aug.-15 Dec. 1950" (file 48-6); and periodic intelligence reports of the 1st Marine Division, October 1950-November 1952 (files 27-18 through 14-20). Other records include reports and intelligence assessments relating to the West Indies area, China, Japan, Germany, Great Britain, France, and Italy. Arranged according to a numerical scheme based on the original box and folder numbers. There is an agency-created folder list for this series. Boxes 1-59 location: 370/B/24/04.

RECORDS OF THE OFFICE OF ALIEN PROPERTY

RECORD GROUP 131

The World War II Office of Alien Property Custodian (APC), was established within the Office for Emergency Management by an executive order of March 11, 1942. By an executive order of April 21, 1942, the functions, personnel, and property of the Alien Property Division were transferred to APC, which had been established in the Department of Justice by the Attorney General on December 9, 1941, to handle certain enemy property responsibilities that resulted from the entrance of the United States into the war.

An executive order of July 6, 1942 defined in detail the powers and duties of the APC and clarified the distinction between its authority and that of the Secretary of Treasury in relation to alien property. The order gave to the Secretary of the Treasury authority over foreign-owned properties that constituted general purchasing power and required no active management, such as cash, bullion, bank deposits, and securities. To the custodian it gave authority over types of foreign-owned property that were productive resources requiring active management, such as business enterprises, patents, copyrights, trademarks, and ships. An executive order of June 18, 1945, extended the jurisdiction of the custodian to cover all property in the United States owned by Germany or Japan or nationals of those countries, but the earlier limitation of its authority with respect to some types of property of other enemy countries or their nationals was not changed.

An executive order of October 14, 1946, terminated the APC and transferred its functions, funds, personnel, records, and property (except those connected with property in the Philippine Islands) to the Department of Justice, in which it became the Office of Alien Property.

Leo T. Crowley held the position of custodian from 1942 to 1944, and James E. Markham was custodian from 1944 to 1946.

An important collection of records within the record group are those created by the Foreign Funds Control during World War II. The Foreign Funds Control was organized in April 1940 to administer the authority assigned to the Treasury Department by an executive order of April 10, 1940, placing restrictions on transactions in foreign exchange; the export or withdrawal of gold, silver, coin, and currency; and transfers of credit, securities, or any other evidences of ownership or of indebtedness involving property of the countries or nationals of the countries that had been invaded by German and Soviet armies. After the entry of the United States into the war the scope of the Foreign Funds Control's activities widened to include the severing of all financial and commercial intercourse between the United States and the Axis and Axis-dominated countries; the prevention of all financial and commercial intercourse between the United States and any countries outside the Western Hemisphere that directly or indirectly benefited the Axis; the prevention of all financial and commercial transactions between the United States and any other American Republic that directly or indirectly benefited the Axis; and the stopping of all financial and commercial activity on the part of persons or corporations in the United States whose influence or activity was deemed inimical to the security of the Western Hemisphere.

The executive order of April 10, 1940, broadened by subsequent amendments, enumerated the countries with which unlicensed financial and commercial intercourse should be prohibited. A Presidential proclamation of July 17, 1941, authorized the Secretary of State, in conjunction with the Administrator of Export Control and the Coordinator of Commercial and Cultural Relations Between the American Republics, to prepare and maintain a "blacklist," officially known as the Proclaimed List of Certain Blocked Nationals, naming all persons and business concerns whose activities were deemed to be in the interest or behalf of the Axis nations or against the interest of national defense. On July 6, 1942, the President issued an executive order clarifying the respective jurisdictions of the Secretary of the Treasury (acting through the Foreign Funds Control) and the APC. This order authorized the Secretary to handle all dollar balances, bullion, and securities of governments or nationals except those belonging to an enemy business; all property of the occupied and neutral countries and their nationals except those particular business enterprises that the APC determined that must be, in the national interest, under control; all transactions or business dealing with countries frozen under the executive order of April 10, 1940, and its amendments; and all other phases of freezing control. The order stipulated that if the Secretary of the Treasury should have occasion to vest any property (other than the assets of foreign governments and central banks), such property should be vested in the APC.

The Foreign Funds Control was abolished on July 15, 1947, and its residual functions, personnel, and records were transferred to the Treasury Department's Office of International Finance. An executive order of August 20, 1948, transferred responsibility for all work that still remained to be done with foreign funds control to the Office of Alien Property, Department of Justice.

Orders

Vesting orders, supervisory orders, and general orders were the three basic forms of control used by the APC and the Office of Alien Property. Vesting orders were the instrument used in the seizure of property or interests in property described in the order. During World War II over 5,000 vesting orders were issued by APC, vesting some 500 business enterprises, banks, and insurance companies; over 50,000 patents and copyrights; and thousands of pieces of property and assets. By July 1, 1952, over 13,000 more vesting orders were issued. The vested property was returned or liquidated by various means, primarily by allowing a title or debt claim, of which over 67,000 were made. Another means by which property was returned to private hands was by the issuance of divesting orders, whereby the federal government relinquished vested proprietary interests. The vesting orders were published in the Federal Register. A complete listing of all the vesting orders, giving the vesting order number, summary description of the vested property, and the Federal Register citation is contained in the annual reports of the Office of Alien Property and Office of Alien Property.

Supervisory orders provided for the direction, management, supervision, and control of specified foreign-owned property by the APC without transfer of ownership to the APC. The APC issued supervisory orders for four main purposes: to facilitate investigations, to supplement vesting orders, to acquire control over the property of nationals of enemy-occupied countries, and, to acquire control over the property of internees.

In contrast to vesting orders and supervisory orders, which referred to specified pieces of property, general orders required certain classes of persons, or persons having interests in certain types of property, to perform or refrain from performing certain acts. General orders were issued not only as a means of controlling property, but also for a variety of other purposes. Several of the general orders gave the APC control over transactions relating to property of nationals of certain foreign countries in patents, trademarks, and copyrights. Seven of the general orders related to the discovery of the interests of different persons in property subject to the control of the APC. Three general orders required payment to the APC of royalties due to nationals of enemy and enemy-occupied countries under contracts based on rights in patents, copyrights, and trademarks. Four general orders dealt with claims against the custodian. One general order set up exchange ratios between the currency of the United States and that of five enemy countries to provide for the discharge of certain obligations, the amount of which was fixed in foreign currency.

The vesting orders and the general orders were published in the Federal Register. The supervisory orders were not.

Legal Records

Between 1942 and 1965 the Alien Property Custodian and the Office of Alien Property were involved in some 3,000 suits and other judicial proceedings. Many of the suits involved title claims for return of vested property under sections 9(a) and 32 of the Trading With the Enemy Act; section 207 of the International Claims Settlement Act, and claims for payment of debts owed by the prevesting owners of vested property under section 34 of the Trading With the Enemy Act and section 203 of the International Claims Settlement Act. Suits were also initiated by the APC under section 17 of the Trading with the Enemy Act to enforce compliance with vesting orders.

Cases involving vested property in estates or trusts were by far the most numerous among those suits and judicial proceedings in which the APC had an involvement. The litigation involving estates and trusts encompassed a variety of types of cases. Some cases pertained to provisions in wills that attempted to prevent vesting of enemy interests in estates by postponing distribution thereof until after the war. Other litigation concerned the constitutionality of the laws of certain States that prevented foreigners residing outside of the United States from taking property by succession unless a reciprocal right existed in favor of American citizens under the laws of the countries of which such foreigners were citizens. Most of the remaining estate and trust cases involved attacks on wills, proof of heirship, and revocation of trusts.

Other suits and judicial proceedings in which the APC had an interest pertained to actions relating to banks and insurance companies in liquidation; matters relating to corporate and individual insolvencies; matters involving taxes and assessments; matters relative to patents, trademarks, and copyrights; actions relating to real property; causes in admiralty; and matters involving property seized in World War I.

RECORDS OF THE JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL (ARMY) RECORD GROUP 153

War Crimes Branch

The War Crimes Office, established as a branch in October 1944, represented the United States in the United Nations War Crimes Commission, and collected and prepared evidence for the trials of suspected war criminals. Though the agency began as an army activity, it became an army and navy enterprise in January 1945, under the control of the Judge Advocate General's Office. After the appointment in May 1945 of Justice Robert H. Jackson as United States Chief of Council for the Prosecution of Axis Criminality, the War Crimes Office concentrated on preparing charges against lesser war criminals, although it also provided aid to the Chief of Counsel and his staff in preparing cases against major defendants. The War Crimes Office gathered information from many sources, including interviews and depositions from returned members of the army, navy, and civilian agencies, and it prepared charges for submission to the War Crimes Commission on behalf of the United States. The agency's work, at first centered in the United States, was expanded late in 1944 to include work in several overseas theaters of operations by the War Crimes Branch of the Judge Advocate General Sections of the headquarters of the appropriate commands, and by War Crimes Investigating Teams attached to some field armies. Simultaneously, the Navy Department appointed similar units in naval commands that were responsible to the Judge Advocate General of the Navy.

After several reorganizations, the War Crimes Office had five divisions by September 1945. Among them were the Eastern Division that had responsibilities for investigating charges of war crimes against American personnel in the Far East and Pacific areas; the Research and Information Division which investigated war crimes problems common to all theaters of operations, maintained liaison with other agencies in the collection of information, and conducted such special projects as were assigned to it; the Special Projects Division which handled special work assigned by the Chief of Counsel; and the Administrative Division which handled administrative services. In March 1946 the Office was transferred to the Civil Affairs Division of the War Department General Staff and was renamed the War Crimes Branch. On January 1, 1949, it was re-transferred to the Judge Advocate General's Office and renamed the War Crimes Division.

120	118-4-1168	Memo from Brig. Gen. E. R. Wright, Deputy Director, CIA to Chief, Civil Affairs Division, ATTN: Chief, War Crimes Branch, December 18, 1947. Indicates that in November CIA was requested to find the original copy of the "Secret Telegram No. 303, dated 25 April 1942 from the Chief of Staff China Expeditionary Force, to Vice Minister of War." Wright notes that "considerable time has been expended in an effort to locate the telegram" but without success. In order to conduct a thorough search "it would be necessary to examine 70,000 unprocessed Japanese war records. These records contain from 200 to 300 reports and telegrams per volume. Consequently, it would be necessary to scan 14,000,000 documents in order to locate the requested telegram. It is estimated that this would require the full time of four qualified Japanese linguists for approximately six months. The personnel necessary for such a project are not available." He concludes that in the normal processing of material in the CIA's Foreign Documents Branch the telegram "may come to light." "Accordingly, a special watch has been placed so that it will be furnished to you if it is discovered during the regular activities of the Branch." Attached to the document is a note that IPS had been information on December 30, 1947, and no further action was required.

Records of the United States Commission, United Nations War Crimes Commission

On October 7, 1942, the United States and Great Britain issued simultaneous declarations that a United Nations War Crimes Commission would be established to affix responsibility of individuals guilty of war crimes and to collect and evaluate all the available evidence pertaining thereto. It was also stated that upon capitulation the enemy would be required to surrender war criminals within its jurisdiction. The declarations pointed out that it was not the intention of the United Nations to resort to mass reprisals but to punish "ringleaders responsible for the organized murder of thousands of innocent persons and the commission of atrocities which have violated every tenet of the Christian faith."³

To help identify war criminals, coordinate the war crimes investigations, and determine if there was sufficient evidence available to bring individuals to trial for war crimes, 17 Allied nations by diplomatic protocol created the United Nations Commission for the Investigation of War Crimes (subsequently the United Nations War Crimes Commission, or UNWCC).⁴ It was officially established in London on October 20, 1943, with authorization to compile lists of war criminals and to receive evidence against them submitted by representatives of the participating countries. Member nations were to cooperate by reporting all crimes committed against nationals of any of the United Nations, to decide what war crimes should be brought before the commission, and to supply the commission with the proof required for prosecution. If the commission found that there was a prima facie case against any individual, it published his name in a list of alleged war criminals, thus preparing for his apprehension and prosecution by one of the National War Crimes Offices of the member states. The commission itself was not empowered to prefer charges.

The office of the United States Commissioner on the United Nations War Crimes Commission was held by Herbert C. Pell, Jr., October 1943 to May 1945; Col. Joseph V. Hodgeson, May 1945 to May 1946; and Col. Robert M. Springer, May 1946 to May 15, 1948 (when the Commission terminated). The commission had a Far Eastern Subcommission to investigate Japanese war crimes. The U.S. Representative on this body was George Atcheson, Jr. The main body was located in London while the Far Eastern Subcommission was located in Chungking and later in Nanking, China.

Records relating to the International Military Tribunal for the Far East

The origins of the International Military Tribunal for the Far East (IMTFE) can be traced to the Cairo Declaration of December 1, 1943, in which the United States, Great Britain, and China announced that their principal war aim in the Far East was "to restrain and punish the aggression of Japan." The three allies amplified this statement in the Potsdam Declaration, July 26, 1945, which reads in part: "There must be eliminated for all time the authority and influence of those who have deceived and misled the people of Japan into embarking on world conquest..." and that "stern justice shall be meted out to all war criminals including those who have visited cruelties upon our prisoners." On September 2, 1945, the Japanese government agreed by the Instrument of Surrender to carry out the provisions of the Potsdam Declaration in good faith.

The IMTFE was established by a Special Proclamation issued January 19, 1946, by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers (SCAP). As at Nuremberg, major offenders were to be prosecuted by an international agency before an international court. In conjunction with the special proclamation, General Headquarters (GHQ) SCAP issued General Order 1, which officially promulgated the charter of the Tribunal. This charter, later amended and published in General Order 10, GHQ, SCAP, April 25, 1946, outlined the Tribunal's constitution, jurisdiction, functions, and procedure.

Additional records relating to the IMTFE are among the records of the National Archives Collection of World War II War Crimes Records (Record Group 238) and the records of GHQ SCAP and its subdivision in the Records of Allied Operational and Occupation Headquarters, World War II (Record Group 331).

Records of Lesser Japanese War Crimes Trials

Only the leaders of Japan were tried by the IMTFE. Middle-level government and military personnel and lower-level individuals who were accused of atrocities were brought before U.S. military commissions.

Under the auspices of Gen. MacArthur, the United States Armed Forces, Pacific, issued initial regulations on September 24, 1945. These rules would be used at two of the earliest trials, including that of General Yamashita. On December 5, 1945, a new set of SCAP regulations supplanted those of September. The regulations provided that the military commissions “confine each trial to a fair, expeditious hearing” on germane issues only.

Supplementing the December 1945 SCAP regulations were additional “Rules of Procedures,” promulgated February 5, 1946. These elaborated and specified official trial procedure, including precise seating arrangement for all court personnel and the oaths to be administered. Further amendments to U.S. war crimes regulations followed in December 1946. These deleted reference to war crimes committed by “units and organizations.” The original September regulations had authorized commission to try criminal groups—as units, not individuals—for specific offenses.⁷

Another set of regulations exclusively for the China Theater was promulgated on January 21, 1946. They were similar to the September 1945 regulations, but did contain a few notable distinctions. They authorized U.S. military commissions operating in China to prosecute Japanese for crimes against humanity and conventional war crimes, but for crimes against peace, i.e., “planning, preparation, initiating or waging a war of aggression.” They also made no allowance for creation of mixed inter-Allied military tribunals.⁸

The records of military commissions in the Far East are included in the case files described in Entry 143; some records were kept in Japan, however, and were returned to Washington, D.C. when the United States ended its occupation of Japan in 1952. These records include reviews of sentencing in war crimes trials heard before 8th Army military commissions and transcripts and exhibits in the trials of Hiroshi Tamura and Soemu Toyoda, both tried before military tribunals in Tokyo.

Records of the Military Intelligence Division

The Military Intelligence Division (MID) was responsible for the collection, evaluation, and dissemination of military information. Its major staff duties from 1939 to 1945 included the supervision of United States military attachés and military missions abroad, liaison with military attachés and missions in Washington from accredited foreign countries, negative (or counterintelligence) as well as positive intelligence work, and participation in joint intelligence collection activities with the navy and with other agencies of the federal government.

The March 1942 reorganization of the War Department included a major overhaul of the MID. The Intelligence Branch was replaced by the Military Intelligence Service (MIS), which assumed principal responsibility for collecting, evaluating, and disseminating intelligence information. Additional changes followed during the war, so that by 1944, MIS consisted of the following major components: Information Group Intelligence Group, Administrative Group, and Counterintelligence Group.

Formerly Security-Classified Intelligence Reference Publications ("Regional File") Received From U.S. Military Attachés, Military and Civilian Agencies of the United States, Foreign Governments, and Other Sources, 1922-1944 (0165-NM84-77)

The records are arranged alphabetically by name or country or region and thereunder according to a numeric-subject filing scheme initially prepared by the MID in 1920 as the Index Guide for Classification of Military Information. This index organized intelligence materials for a particular country or region into general and secondary subject categories, each of which was assigned a four-digit numerical designation. In the 1940 edition of the index, information was organized into nine general categories: Geographic (1000-1320), Population and Social Conditions (2000-2950), Political (3000-3870), Economic (4000-5070), National Defense (5900-5990), Army (6000-6970), Navy (7000-7945), Air-Civil (8000-8290), and Air-Military (9900-9960). For each country or region additional miscellaneous subject files, correspondence, or memorandums are often appended to the end of the numeric-subject files. A detailed listing of box numbers and Index Guide numbers is available. The Numerical Series of Intelligence Documents ("ID File"), which began in June 1944, was the successor to this series. See Records of the Army Staff (Record Group 319) for the "ID" File.

Field Organizations Directly Under the General Staff

Throughout the continental United States and overseas there were a number of agencies that were “exempt” organizations, that is, they operated not as field commands of the arms and services but directly under one or more divisions of the War Department General Staff. Administrative services for each of these agencies were usually provided by the appropriate army command where the agency operated, but technical and policy direction derived from the General Staff.

General Intelligence Schools

In June 1942 the Military Intelligence Training Center was activated at Camp Ritchie, Maryland. This was the first of a group of intelligence schools supervised by the Training Branch of the Operations Group, Military Intelligence Service. These schools included the Military Intelligence Service Language School (MISLS), contract language schools at California, Michigan, Cornell, Indiana, and Yale Universities, and various special courses given at the Pentagon building for personnel on duty with Military Intelligence Service.

Several Japanese-language schools were managed by G-2. The MISLS, originally called the Military Intelligence Service Japanese Language School, was successor to the School for Nisei established in 1941 at the Presidio. It was moved to Camp Savage, Minnesota, in 1942 (when it was taken over by G-2) and to Fort Snelling, Minnesota, in 1944. The Army Intensive Japanese Language Course given at the University of Michigan, October 1942-December 1945, was administratively associated with the MISLS in Minnesota, for which it served at first as a preparatory school. When the school at the University of Michigan was abandoned its military personnel and its functions were turned over to the school at Fort Snelling.

RECORDS OF THE FOREIGN ECONOMIC ADMINISTRATION RECORD GROUP 169

Records of the Board of Economic Warfare 1941-1943

On December 17, 1941, the Economic Defense Board was renamed the Board of Economic Warfare. For about four months thereafter there were no major changes in the functions and no significant changes in administrative organization. By an executive order of April 13, 1942, however, the Board's powers that hitherto had been limited chiefly to the control of exports, were significantly increased by giving to the Board a large measure of control over imports. It was also directed to "represent the United States Government in dealing with the economic warfare agencies of the United Nations for the purpose of relating the government's economic warfare program and facilities regarding the importation of strategic and critical materials."

As a result of the executive order, the board was reorganized and added to the existing membership, presided over by Vice President of the United States, Henry A. Wallace, were the Chairman of the War Production Board and the Administrator of the Office of Lend-Lease Administration. The Offices of Exports, Imports, Economic Warfare Analysis, the General Counsel, and Administrative Management, established at that time, remained in existence during the life of the agency, although the branches and divisions of the offices underwent a number of changes.

By an executive order of July 15, 1943, the Board of Economic Warfare was terminated, and its functions, personnel, and records were transferred to the Office of Economic Warfare (OEW). The various centralized and decentralized files of the Board, which were taken over and maintained practically intact by the OEW, were later distributed to various units of the Foreign Economic Administration.

Records of the Office of Economic Warfare 1943

By an executive order of July 15, 1943, the OEW, headed by Director, Leo T. Crowley, was established in the Office of Emergency Management. To it were transferred the functions, personnel, and records of the Board of Economic Warfare, which was abolished by the order. The OEW was in existence for only about six weeks. Its functions and administrative organization were substantially those of its predecessors. By an executive order of September 25, 1943, the OEW and certain other agencies, together with their personnel and records, were transferred to and consolidated in the Foreign Economic Administration (FEA), which was established by that order. The records of the OEW were later absorbed into the records of various units of the FEA.

Records of the Foreign Economic Administration 1943-1945

In order to unify and consolidate the administration of governmental activities relating to foreign economic affairs, the FEA was established by an executive order of September 25, 1943. The functions, personnel, and records of the Office of Lend-Lease Administration, the OEW, the Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation Operations of the Department of State, and the foreign economic operations of the Office of Foreign Economic Coordination of the Department of State were transferred to the FEA.

The FEA was responsible for the wartime functions of export control, foreign procurement, lend-lease, reverse lend-lease, participation in foreign relief and rehabilitation, and economic warfare, including foreign economic intelligence. By an executive order of September 27, 1945, the FEA was abolished and its remaining functions were divided among five agencies, including the Departments of State and Commerce.

Records of the Office of Economic Programs

The Office of Economic Programs (OEP) was established on September 13, 1943. It included specialized staffs of advisers who assisted the administrator and other high officials of the agency in preparing foreign economic policies and programs. The OEP represented a consolidation of the War Trade Staff of the OEW and the Government Liaison and Reciprocal Aid Division of the Office of Lend-Lease Administration. The OEP, whose chief was an assistant FEA administrator, was largely composed of economists serving as consultants on matters as supplies and resources, foreign development, foreign finance, and trade policy.

The OEP acted as the integrating unit for the operational branches within the FEA whose own projects had to be brought into harmony with the central policies of the administration. Operational approaches within the framework of FEA were often dissimilar and even, in cases where objectives were not identical in practice, conflicting. A primary function of the OEP was to reconcile differences and keep the strategy of economic warfare consistent. Operations personnel, enthusiastic about their programs and bent on achieving their ends quickly and efficiently, were reminded of political considerations.

In 1944, through V. Frank Coe and L. Currie, the OEP was brought directly and originally into the Safehaven Program. It was in OEP under Coe that the Executive Committee on Economic Foreign Policy (ECEFP) was established. An interdepartmental unit, maintained by Angell after Coe left the FEA, the ECEFP, animated by the OEP, studied issues involved in economic warfare, anticipated the economic programs connected with Germany in the postwar period, and took steps to initiate plans that would operate effectively after the defeat of the Axis.

The ECEFP, guided largely by the OEP, had considered from time to time such matters as modification of wartime financial controls over foreign assets. It had, for example, considered the possibility of continuing the Proclaimed List after the surrender of Germany as a method of economic supervision of Axis friends.

With the development of the Safehaven Program idea, the ECEFP took over a serious study of controlling enemy assets after the war. A new committee, the Interdepartmental Committee on Post-Hostilities Controls over Foreign Property, was organized. Its membership was composed of representatives from the Departments of State, Treasury, Justice, Commerce, and the Alien Property Custodian, the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, and the FEA. The committee studied, considered, and made recommendations with respect to wartime property and financial controls over foreign assets. It also made recommendations on the control and disposition of enemy assets in neutral and other non-Axis countries.

The committee was designed to be a clearinghouse for the problems as they were defined, and for the various departmental proposals as they were worked out. As far as the Safehaven Program was concerned, the committee would coordinate recommendations regarding programs for dealing with Germany's hidden assets and with its devices of economic penetration. It would also consider policies with respect to U.S. and United Nations' attitudes toward neutrals used by the Axis for purposes of economic expansion.

During 1944 the Executive Policy Committee of the FEA met regularly and consistently studied Safehaven problems. Through its relationships with other departments it brought the FEA attitude toward control of Germany into focus and through the FEA and its legal advisers pressed for implementation of a strong U.S. policy toward neutrals with respect to the problem of postwar Axis penetration. Its policies and views were submitted to the Interdepartmental Committee on Post-Hostilities Controls over Foreign Property for critical consideration.

Records of the Bureau of Areas

The Bureau of Areas was established on November 13, 1943, by a consolidation of those units of the predecessors of the Foreign Economic Administration that were not assigned to the Bureau of Supplies or to the Office of the Administrator. The units of the OEW that were transferred to the Bureau of Areas included the area divisions of the Country Programs Branch of the Office of Exports; the Area Branch, excluding the South Pacific Division, of the Office of Imports; and the Enemy and the Blockade and Supply Branches of the Office of Economic Warfare and Analysis. From the Office of Lend-Lease Administration the Bureau received the geographic divisions of the Office of Foreign Liaison, the Office of Soviet Supply, and the Overseas Missions Divisions; from the Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation Operations there were transferred to the Bureau the Divisions of Field Operations, Supply and Transport, Progress Reports, and Program and Requirements. The bureau also inherited the "liberated areas" activities of the Office of Foreign Economic Coordination of the Department of State. These offices, branches, and divisions were merged into the Bureau of Areas, and the functions they performed were assigned to the six branches of the Bureau.

Records of the Office of the Executive Director

The Office of the Executive Director planned and directed the programs and policies of the Bureau of Areas pertaining to foreign countries, maintained liaison with the Bureau of Supplies, the staff units of the Office of the Administrator, and various interdepartmental and intergovernmental committees; and supervised the activities of the foreign field missions of the Foreign Economic Administration, working closely in that connection with the diplomatic missions of the Department of State. Its Area Program Coordination Staff reviewed the economic policies of the Administration for each country and coordinated these with the overall supply program, served as a clearance office for instructions from the branches of the Bureau of Supplies to the branches of the Bureau of Areas, and acted as the secretariat for the Administration's Allocations Committee. The Field Operations Staff was the administrative unit in the Bureau that served the foreign field missions by coordinating the activities of these missions with those of the operating branches of the Administration in Washington, supplying the field with digests and newsletters of economic information and expediting the exchange of reports between the branches in Washington and the field offices. Matters relating to lend-lease, reverse lend-lease, and the British White Paper were handled by the Lend-Lease Staff of the Office of the Executive Director and administrative duties for the branches and staffs of the Bureau were performed by the Executive Officer.

Records of the Enemy Branch

The Enemy Branch was responsible for planning the economic program to be put into effect when the enemy countries were occupied. It prepared studies and reports for the industrial disarmament of the enemy to prevent future wars, including analyses of the entire economic structure of the Axis countries. The Enemy Branch was established on December 30, 1944, with the name the German and Austrian Branch; a name change was shortly forthcoming. It had a leading role in the Safehaven Program. When it was established and responsibility placed in it for Safehaven activities, the External Security, Intelligence Service, and other staff that had been independent divisions were made part of it. In addition, the Branch included personnel from the old independent divisions that had been involved in Safehaven operations. Thus in the beginning of 1945 the Safehaven Program became the responsibility of one unit, the Enemy Branch, under the direction of Henry H. Fowler.

Records of the Blockade Division

The chief functions of the Blockade Division were to administer blockade control measures; to determine blockade clearance for U.S. exports to neutral countries in Europe; and, so far as the preclusive purchase operations were concerned, to provide data on the supply needs of neutrals and the enemy, and to make recommendations for preclusive operations. The division was also involved in efforts to stop Axis smuggling efforts.

The Blockade Division not only collated the material it had accumulated in the process of operating its special activities, but it had asked for the intelligence resources of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Office of Censorship, the Office of Navy Intelligence, the Army's Military Intelligence (G-2), and the Board of Economic Warfare. The division requested diplomatic missions to report information on local smuggling rings, and related material at hand in Washington was examined. All available facts were checked and a file was made that listed the names of smugglers, the names of ships used in blockade running, the kinds of commodities smuggled, the names of ports to which deliveries of smuggled goods were made, routes, and methods and means of concealing goods.

The Enemy Branch (later known as the European Enemy Division) made studies of enemy supply positions with respect to materials being smuggled, thus providing the Blockade Division with guides on the importance or relative insignificance of blockade evasions. The greatness of the enemies' need for material guided the smugglers' counter measures and helped to determine the nature and extent of preclusive purchases.

The significance of the blockade work of the Blockade Division, as far as the Safehaven Program is concerned, is that the division created a backlog of information about firms and individuals who were actively assisting the Axis and who would bear watching in the future.

Records of the Economic Intelligence Division

Until the German and Austrian Branch (Enemy Branch) was created late in 1944, the Economic Intelligence Division had been a separate unit of the FEA under the Special Areas Branch and had serviced most departments of the agency. The division had its origins in 1941, when it was discovered that it would be necessary to gather information on the economic resources of Japan for the administration of export control. After December

7, 1941, the Board of Economic Warfare established Analysis Sections and Intelligence Sections on geographical lines, the purpose being to procure economic data for the armed forces and for other U.S. and Allied governmental agencies.

Collaborating throughout the war with the British Ministry of Economic Warfare and with other intelligence units operating for the United States, the Economic Intelligence Division, which later became the Intelligence Service Staff, gathered, compiled, classified and made available to the proper authorities the data received from censorship intercepts, foreign radio broadcasts, foreign publications, American business firms with foreign interests, representatives of foreign countries, returned travelers, refugees, and U.S. intelligence agents operating in foreign countries.

The division maintained close liaison with Military Intelligence (G-2) and the Office of Naval Intelligence, having representatives of those two services attached to the office in Washington, D.C. In addition, it maintained a close relationship with the Office of Strategic Services, the Office of Censorship, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation. FEA special agents in the field, United States Commercial Company representatives, FEA business experts, and U.S. diplomatic officers and intelligence agents operating in foreign countries contributed reports to the unit.

RECORDS OF THE CHEMICAL WARFARE SERVICE

RECORD GROUP 175

The Chemical Warfare Service, which dated from 1918, was responsible during World War II for the qualitative development, quantity procurement, distribution, and maintenance of various categories of material and equipment, including chemical mortars and flame throwers; smoke fillings; smoke pots and smoke generators (for smoke screens); gas masks, protective ointments, decontamination equipment, and other items for defensive gas warfare; gas-filled munitions, toxic gases, and accessory equipment for possible offensive operations by air and ground forces; incendiary bombs; and bacteriological warfare agents and defensive materials and techniques. In addition, the Chemical Warfare Service was responsible for training chemical warfare combat and service troops for employment by ground and air forces of the army, organizing and training chemical warfare troop units, training civilian-defense instructors, and training others in chemical warfare weapons and techniques.

As one of the Technical Services of the army, the Chemical Warfare Service was responsible from 1939 to 1942 to the Chief of Staff of the U.S. Army and after March 1942 to the Commanding General of the Services of Supply (later the Army Service Forces).

Collectively the Chemical Warfare Service comprised the following groups of organizational units: Office of the Chief, Chemical Warfare Service in Washington; various field agencies in the continental United States supervised by the Office of the Chief; the chemical warfare sections of army tactical and service commands in the continental United States and overseas; and the many chemical warfare troop units. In August 1946 the Service was renamed the Chemical Corps.

Office of the Chief, Chemical Warfare Service

The Office of the Chief, Chemical Warfare Service, served as the staff agency for advising the Chief of Staff, the Secretary of War, the Assistant Secretary (later Under Secretary) of War, and Headquarters Army Service Forces on the development, production, distribution, and employment of chemical warfare material and equipment, on chemical warfare personnel, training, and troop units, and on war plans and related problems. It also supervised field agencies of the Service in the United States. It was represented on some committees, including the United States Biological Warfare Committee, the United States Chemical Warfare Committee (of the Joint Chiefs of Staff), and the Combined Chemical Warfare Committee (of the Combined Chiefs of Staff). The last two committees, under Chemical Warfare Service chairmanship and in cooperation with the British Commonwealth's Interservice Committee on Chemical Warfare conducted an interallied procurement and supply program to maintain a state of readiness for gas warfare, prepared plans for gas warfare for possible retaliatory use by the U.S., British, and Canadian forces against the enemy, and exchanged intelligence on equipment and techniques.

The wartime Chiefs of the Chemical Warfare Service were Maj. Gen. Walter C. Baker, until April 1941, and Maj. Gen. William N. Porter, May 1941-November 1945.

Correspondence of and about the Chemical Warfare Service was filed in the central records of the War Department, in the Adjutant General's Office under Decimal 020 Chemical Warfare Service, 1943-1945, 029 Chemical Warfare Service, 1940-1943, and 321 Chemical Warfare Service 1941-1945. More records can be found under Decimal 334, filed by the names of the three aforementioned interagency committees mentioned above, 1942-1945.

RECORD GROUP 200

The Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949, as amended (44 U.S.C. 2107 (2)), which superseded the 1934 act, authorized the acceptance from private sources of such gifts that are appropriate for preservation by the government as evidence of its organization, functions, policies, decisions, procedures, and transactions.

RECORDS OF THE OFFICE OF WAR INFORMATION RECORD GROUP 208

The Office of War Information (OWI) was established by an executive order of June 13, 1942, "in recognition of the right of the American people and of all other peoples opposing the Axis oppressors to be truthfully informed about the common war effort." To achieve a coordinated governmental war information program, both foreign and domestic, the functions and records of the Office of Facts and Figures and of the Office of Government Reports and the coordinating functions of the Division of Information in the Office for Emergency Management were transferred to the OWI. The Foreign Intelligence Service, Outpost, Publication, and Pictorial Branches of the Office of the Coordinator of Information were also transferred to the OWI. The executive order provided, however, that dissemination of information to the Latin American countries should be continued by the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs. The OWI was terminated, effective September 15, 1945, by an executive order of August 31, 1945.

RECORDS OF THE OFFICE OF CENSORSHIP

RECORD GROUP 216

The First War Powers Act, approved on December 18, 1941 (55 Stat. 840), contained broad grants of executive authority for the prosecution of the war, including a provision for censorship. The next day the President signed Executive Order 8985, which established the Office of Censorship and conferred on its director the power to censor international communications in "his absolute discretion." Byron Price was appointed Director of Censorship and remained in that office throughout the agency's existence.

When the Office of Censorship was organized under a civilian director, the censorship activities carried on by the War Department were placed in the Postal Division under the direction of a Chief Postal Censor.

By Executive Order 9631 the Office of Censorship was formally abolished as of November 15, 1945.

U.S. Censorship Flash Index 1942-1945 (0216-UD-1)

Photostatic copy of an index, current as of August 15, 1945, to the Watch List and Censorship Daily Reports, consisting of names watched by censors in the handling of international communications. Names placed on the index at the specific request of a government agency or branch of the office, or because they appeared on a recognized government blacklist, were called Watch List names and formed what was officially known as the U.S. Censorship Watch List. Certain numbers, called Watch List numbers, were used to indicate these names:

1000-the name was on the Proclaimed List of Certain Blocked Nationals;

4600-the name was watch-listed at the request of a government agency or branch of Censorship;

4601-essentially the same as 4600, used to signify different types of handling by Cable Censorship;
5000-the name was on the Treasury Department's List of Special Blocked Nationals;
7500-the name was of interest to a Government agency or to Chief Cable Censor with respect to telecommunications only;
7600-the name was on the British Statutory List;
7700-the name was of high security interest to security agencies and the Technical Operations Division.

If a name was not accompanied by one of the above numbers, it was called a non-Watch List name, and was listed on the index only because there was information regarding the name in the Censorship Daily Reports. Non-Watch List names were followed by other numbers that represented Daily Reports. The index consists of 50,600 strips, or 38,100 names, allowing for cross-listings, of which 23,600 strips, involving 16,117 names, represented the Watch List. In addition to the names and addresses and identifying numbers of subjects watched, the index strips also carry certain distinctive letters, numbers, and symbols that guided the censors in handling pertinent documents. Arranged alphabetically by name of person, business firm, and organization. Box 1 location: 650/43/22/01.

In October 1944, all 4900 listings involving names in the Western Hemisphere except Argentina were deleted, and in May 1945 the remaining Argentine and Eastern Hemisphere names were eradicated, discontinuing 4900 as a Watch List number. RECORDS OF THE U.S. JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF

The U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS), was created as a result of the decision made during the Anglo-American military staff conference in Washington, D.C., December 1941- January 1942, to establish the Combined Chiefs of Staff. The JCS became the U.S. representatives on the Combined Chiefs of Staff. In addition to the foregoing role, the JCS became the principal U.S. agency for coordination between the Army and the Navy.

The first meeting of the JCS as an organized body was held on February 9, 1942. Its original members were the Chief of Naval Operations, Adm. H. R. Stark; the Chief of Staff of the U.S. Army, Gen. George C. Marshall; the Commander in Chief of the U.S. Fleet; Adm. Ernest J. King; and the Commanding General of the Army Air Forces, Lt. Gen. Henry H. Arnold. In March 1942 the duties of the Chief of Naval Operations and of the Commander in Chief of the U.S. Fleet were combined in one person, Admiral King, thus reducing the membership of the JCS to three. In July a fourth member was again provided, Adm. William D. Leahy, the newly appointed Chief of Staff to the President in respect to the latter's role as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy.

The functions and duties of the JCS were not formally defined during the war period. The absence of any written definition of duties allowed great flexibility of organization and the extension of activities in accordance with the requirements of the war.

During the war period the JCS existed informally on the basis of its continuing functions. It was given legislative recognition as a permanent agency, the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, by the National Security Act of 1947.

Records of the Combined Civil Affairs Committee

The Combined Civil Affairs Committee (CCAC) was established by the Combined Chiefs of Staff in July 1943 to recommend civil affairs policies for enemy or enemy-held areas that were occupied by combined operations and to coordinate military and civilian agency interests in such matters. The U.S. membership consisted of one representative each from the army, the navy, and the State Department, with an additional civilian official who served as Chairman of the Committee. The British membership consisted of one representative of the Foreign Office, two from the British Joint Staff Mission, and one additional civilian expert.

RECORDS OF THE OFFICE OF STRATEGIC SERVICES

RECORD GROUP 226

The Office of Strategic Services (OSS) was established by a military order of June 13, 1942, as the principal successor to the Office of the Coordinator of Information. Since the latter's establishment in July 1941, it had collected, analyzed, and disseminated information bearing on national security. The two basic functions of the OSS, under the jurisdiction of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, involved gathering, evaluating, and analyzing intelligence in support of the war against the Axis Powers; and planning and executing operations in support of intelligence procurement.

The Office of the Director of the OSS, located in Washington, D.C., constituted the organization's headquarters throughout the war. The principal divisions consisted of separate Offices of Deputy Directors for Services (concerning administrative duties), Intelligence (including the Research and Analysis and Secret Intelligence Branches), Operations (including the Special Operations and Morale Operations Branches and the Operational Group Command), Schools and Training, and Personnel. In addition to field offices in New York and California, the OSS established more than 40 overseas offices, which fell under the authority of the Special Services Officer in a given theater of operations or the chief of a mission. At the height of its wartime activities in October 1944, the OSS numbered approximately 5,500 military and 2,000 civilian personnel overseas and approximately 2,700 military and 2,000 civilian personnel in the United States.

Intelligence activities, the primary function of the OSS, were performed from June through December 1942 by three intelligence branches inherited from the Office of the Coordinator of Information: Secret Intelligence (SI), Research and Analysis (R&A), and Foreign Nationalities Branch (FNB). On January 3, 1943, these branches were put under the Office of the Deputy Director, Intelligence, and later in 1943, the X-2 Branch and the Censorship and Documents Branch were added. This office, also known as the Office of the Deputy Director, Intelligence Services, in addition to supervising the work of its branches, maintained liaison with other government agencies that were engaged in intelligence activities, especially the War and Navy Departments.

Secret Intelligence Branch

Secret Intelligence, which was known in the Office of the Coordinator of Information and in the early days of OSS as Special Activities B, was renamed the Secret Intelligence Branch on January 3, 1943. It collected secret intelligence in all parts of the world except the Western Hemisphere, evaluated such intelligence and disseminated it to authorized agencies, and established and maintained direct liaison with government and Allied secret intelligence agencies. It was organized largely on a geographic basis, with divisions for Europe, Africa, the Near and Middle East, and the Far East. These geographic units supported secret intelligence activities in their respective theaters of operations and recruited, trained, and dispatched personnel overseas. The SI also included the Reporting Board, which edited and disseminated reports after they were approved by the geographic divisions concerned.

Research and Analysis Branch

The R&A originated in the Office of the Coordinator of Information and was responsible for the accumulation, evaluation, and analysis of political, psychological, sociological, economic, topographic, and military information required for operations or requested by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Armed Forces, and other authorized government agencies, and for the preparation of studies, maps, charts, and illustrations relating to such material. R&A prepared daily and weekly situation reports and current intelligence studies; participated in the preparation of the Joint Army and Navy Intelligence Studies, the Civil Affairs Handbooks, Civil Affairs Guides, and Newsmap; collected and cataloged strategically valuable photographs; and maintained an extensive card index of information obtained by the Foreign Nationalities Branch.

The R&A was organized both geographically and functionally. It included the Projects Committee, which authorized, scheduled, and approved all study and research projects of the R&A; the geographic divisions, for the European-African, Far Eastern, Latin American, and Soviet Union areas; the functional units, including Current Intelligence Staff and the Map Division; and a special representative who maintained liaison between the Branch in Washington and its field units and between the Branch and Joint Intelligence Committee, the Joint Strategic Survey Committee, the Joint Intelligence Studies Publishing Board, and the Civil Affairs Divisions of the War and Navy Departments. The Central Information Division of the R&A was the repository for intelligence documents from its own units, from all other branches of OSS, and from other intelligence agencies, except that documents requiring special security safeguarding were held by the OSS Registry. The R&A was also responsible for the activities of the Interdepartmental Committee for the Acquisition of Foreign Publications. This unit, which was sponsored and financed by OSS, collected foreign newspapers, periodicals, books, technical and trade journals, and other library materials and served in this way all government agencies interested in foreign publications.

Foreign Nationalities Branch

This FNB maintained contact with "hyphenated-nationality groups" in the United States and analyzed, indexed, and processed information gathered from them for dissemination to planning and operating branches of OSS, to the State Department, and to other government agencies. In connection with its duties, it maintained closed liaison with the Foreign Activity Correlation Division of the State Department.

X-2 Branch

The Counterintelligence Division of the Secret Intelligence Branch was established in March 1943 and was set up separately as the X-2 Branch in 1943. It handled counterintelligence activities in all areas other than the Western Hemisphere. In particular, it collected and evaluated counterintelligence information disseminated it to authorized agencies; directed liaison with appropriate military, naval, and civilian agencies of the United States and Allied governments; and prepared lists of enemies or subversive persons for use by theater commander and other Government agencies. X-2 was organized on a geographic basis, with offices for the European, North African, Middle Eastern, and Far Eastern Theaters of Operations and for European and Far Eastern Field Control.

William J. Donovan, who had previously served as the Coordinator of Information (beginning in July 1941), occupied the post of Director of the OSS throughout the war. By an executive order of September 20, 1945, the OSS was abolished (effective October 1, 1945), and its functions, personnel, and records were divided between the State Department and the War Department.

OSS Grading of Reports

On October 19, 1942, the OSS modified its system of grading intelligence reports. Agency employees were notified that the symbols used for grading purposes on certain reports distributed by the OSS had, in some respects, been found to be inadequate and therefore they were being modified as follows:

Reports are graded, according to the reliability of the source and the probability of the information, by letters and figures respectively. Please note that the following definitions of symbols vary from those previously used:

I. Sources

"A" indicates "Absolute reliability" (inside source).

"B" indicates "Previously or probably reliable."

"C" indicates "Doubtful reliability"- this indicates uncertainty as to reliability of source but does not necessarily mean the source should not receive consideration.

"D" indicates "Unreliability."

II. Information

"O" indicates that the "Probability of the report cannot be adequately judged" (please note that this a new and important addition to the grading system).

"1" indicates "Entire reliability" (at first hand).

"2" indicates "Information supported by other evidence or considered probably true."

"3" indicates "Information unsupported but considered probably true."

"4" indicates "Information improbably."

Many of the OSS records have been microfilmed. Researchers are required to use the microfilm rather than the textual records.

Most OSS series of records have detailed box, folder, and document listings. Researchers should consult these resources to maximize their exploitation of the OSS records.

Intelligence Reports ("Regular" Series) 1941-1945 (0226-NM-54-16)

The "regular" designation simply indicated that documents from this series could be borrowed by OSS staff and other agencies. This series covers all matters of intelligence interest during the war. The reports in this series were numbered as they were received, without regard for origin, subject, or chronology. There are no cover or forwarding sheets to indicate the processing of individual reports, nor is any indication provided concerning the use made or internal OSS processing of these reports. A number of reports, while still indexed in the OSS records system, were withdrawn by the State Department during the early postwar period and became integrated in that agency's files; sometimes these transfers are indicated by withdrawal cards. The select listing of reports below was based on a review of the index and many of the records themselves. There may be instances that a specific document is listed but is not in the files for the reason just discussed. The series is arranged numerically (1-145,317, with some gaps). Many of the records, files 1-50,869, have been microfilmed as NARA Microfilm Publication 1499. Researchers will need to use the microfilmed version of these first 50,869, rather than the textual copies.

Name and Subject Indexes to the "XL" and "L" Series [Entries 19, 21] (0226-NM-54-17)

These card indexes are arranged in three subseries (persons, countries or geographic areas, and subjects), each thereunder arranged alphabetically. The entries within each subseries follow the same numerical classification scheme as described for the name and subject indexes to the "regular" intelligence reports; the format and content of the card indexes also remains the same. Boxes 1-120 location: 190/4/10/07.

Formerly Security-Classified Intelligence Reports ("XL" Series) 1941-1946 (0226-NM-54-19)

Similar in content to the "regular reports" (Entry 16), this series is also arranged numerically (XL 1-51,494 with gaps), with some unnumbered documents appended to the end of the series. "XL" denoted more limited distribution than that governing "regular" intelligence reports: OSS staff members could borrow "XL" documents for use, but members of other agencies could not. The wide range of intelligence content, however, matches that of the principal series of intelligence reports, with the possible addition of more data for the 1945-1946 period. The distinguishing characteristic of this series lies in the large number of captured German documents, most of which constitute original copies. A number of reports, still indexed in the OSS records system, were withdrawn by the State Department during the early postwar period and became integrated in that agency's files; sometimes these transfers are indicated by withdrawal cards. The select listing of reports below was based on a review of the index and many of the records themselves. There may be instances that a specific document is listed but is not in the files for the reason just discussed.

Formerly Security-Classified Intelligence Reports ("L" Series) 1942-1945 (0226-NM-54-21)

This series is closely related to the two preceding intelligence series. It is arranged numerically (L1-58678). The information was obtained directly by the OSS Secret Intelligence Branch, and it could only be used in a special reading room by approved OSS personnel. The series contents reflect very sensitive political intelligence matters. A number of reports, while still indexed in the OSS records system, were withdrawn by the State Department during the early postwar period and became integrated in that agency's files; sometimes these transfers are indicated by withdrawal cards. The select listing of reports below was based on a review of the index and many of the records themselves. There may be instances that a specific document is listed but is not in the files for the reason just discussed. Boxes 1-457 location: 190/4/23/07.

Sources and Methods Files (“Previously Withdrawn Material”) (0226-UD-210 through 220)

In 1997 the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) transferred to NARA approximately 617 cubic feet of Office of Strategic Services (OSS) and Strategic Services Unit (SSU) records (in 11 series: entries 210-220) representing the main body of documents withheld from OSS/SSU records opened by NARA between 1975-1996. The CIA retained those materials as an artificial “Sources and Methods” file. Because these records were withdrawn from other files, they are not organized by topic or activity. The records had been retained by the CIA under exemptions provided to it by the National Security Act of 1947 and the Freedom of Information Act. Most of these records were declassified in late 1999 and opened for research in June 2000.

The records document the operations, intelligence gathering, weapons and methods, personnel, and organizational activities of the OSS during and immediately following World War II. Most of the records were created during the 1942-1945 period, but there are records pre-dating 1942, a relative substantive quantity from 1946, and a few documents that post-date 1946.

There are three finding aids to the records. One, which is on NARA’s website with a hard copy in the consultation area of Room 2400, provides highlights to a selection of key documents. The other two finding aids are available in the Textual Research Room and in the consultation area in Room 2400. One of those is an incomplete NARA-prepared listing, arranged in several manners (e.g., by name, by code word, by geographic name), which provides the entry number and box number where information about the listing can be found. The other is a CIA-prepared two-volume finding aid [CIA OSS DARE/PODS PRINTOUT] describing all the documents in the 1997 accession of “previously withdrawn records.” There is no particular order to or arrangement of the documents in the DARE printout. The contents on any one box may be described on as many as 20 different, nonconsecutive pages. Careful notetaking is essential for archival retrieval and efficient research in the records. Researchers will need to read the printout and make careful note of the entries in order to fill out reference service slips.

The following information is provided on the printout:

Withdrawn number - A unique number assigned to a specific document or file.

Job number - Identifies which of 11 series of records are being requested. For instance, 70-00332A is Entry 210, the largest series in this accession encompassing 556 archives boxes.

Box number - Identifies the box number assigned by the CIA, and in almost all instances corresponds to the NARA box number. Entire boxes are pulled in response to a research request. (Enter the box number on the reference service slip.)

Folder number

Document number - The OSS/CIA annotated the document with a document number to register its place within the folder. Researchers can use the number to verify they are examining the exact document described in the DARE printout.

Document Title

Researchers should use, in many instances, the listings provided below and the three finding aids cited above to ensure complete coverage of relevant records on a particular subject. Researchers should also note that the records, in most instances because of their physical arrangement within the boxes, do not lend themselves to "research by mail." They need to be used in the Textual Research Room, and even then researchers should be well aware that they will encounter some difficulties in locating precise documents.

1	Memorandum from HQ, OSS, SU, Detachment 203, China Theater, requesting permission to carry out a reconnaissance trip to Manchuria, May 17, 1945, 5 pp. The memorandum argues that the trip would provide a chance to find out about the Anti-Japanese Salvation Corps and to collect intelligence about an area that was probably "the place where the Japanese will attempt their last stand."
1	Draft plan to carry out the reconnaissance trip to Manchuria described above, July 6, 1945, 3 pp.
1	Operational Plans for the reconnaissance trip to Manchuria described above, codename Ostrich, August 1, 1945, ca. 7 pp.
1	Folder entitled "Kaji & POW Projects," January 14, 1945-August 2, 1945, 200 pp. Records relating to the possible use of Japanese exiles, detainees, and/or POWS-held by the Chinese government-to prevail upon their countrymen to "desert, surrender, or take other desired action." The man mentioned most often for this was Wataru Kaji, President of the League of Establishing Democratic Japan.

2	Memorandum proposing a reconnaissance trip through the northeastern Chinese provinces of Shantung, Hopeh, and Jehol, April 3, 1945, 4 pp. The provinces were said to be the home of "puppet armies" that "would take instruction and leadership from the U.S. Forces or the Central Government if they were approached properly."
3	Folder entitled "Contact Reports, ca. May 1945, 55 pp. The folder contains a memo on the intelligence needs of the MO Branch, an assessment of personalities in Malaya and Thailand (Chinese and others), a report of a rumor that "U.S. representatives in Yalta have reached a secret agreement with the Russians that Korea would become a sphere of Russian influence," a memo of a conversation among people affiliated with the Institute of Pacific Relations about the organization of the United Nations, a "List of Questions Relating to the Views of National Delegations and Individual Delegates on the Post-War Treatment of Japan," and a summary of the "Official and Unofficial Views of Representatives of Various Countries toward the Treatment to Be Afforded Japan during the Final Phases of the War, the Transition to Military Occupation, and Later." The copy of the questions on the post-war treatment of Japan was specifically for Russia, and the last memo addresses the separate views of Britain and Russia.
4	Folder entitled "Augur Cables, Chronological file of outgoing cables," from OSS, China Theater, September 12-November 3, 1945, 34 pp. Augur was the special indicator on all communications pertaining to plans to maintain U.S. intelligence activities in China after the war. Since China was friendly to the US, "every effort should be made to convey the impression that intelligence activities will cease entirely when U.S. Forces retire from China." The need for secrecy meant that an almost entirely new staff had to be recruited, since the Chinese working for the OSS up to that time were largely motivated by patriotism. One possible source of personnel was "a number of Korean American enlisted men inducted into Army at OSS request by special arrangement . . . where under OSS has right to discharge at any time. . . ."

The cable's writer felt that between British opposition to the U.S. presence in Burma, and the ongoing Burmese revolution, "my scope would be much broader for future as military liaison officer rather than what is known definitely as intelligence officer."

Records of the International Military Tribunal for the Far East (IMTFE) 1946-1948

The International Military Tribunal for the Far East (IMTFE) was established by a special proclamation of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers (SCAP), January 19, 1946. The IMTFE's intent was to implement the Potsdam Declaration of China, the United States, and the United Kingdom (July 26, 1945, as accepted by the Japanese signatories of the Instrument of Surrender, September 2, 1945), which states that war criminals would be brought to justice. It was also established to act on the SCAP's authority to issue all orders implementing the Japanese surrender terms. Such authority was given to SCAP by a declaration of the foreign ministers of the United Kingdom, United States, and Soviet Union, issued from Moscow, December 27, 1945. In accordance with the IMTFE charter, promulgated by General Order 1, General Headquarters (GHQ) SCAP, January 19, 1946, and amended by General Order 20, GHQ SCAP, April 25, 1946, IMTFE consisted of 11 judges, appointed by SCAP, as the representative in nationality of the Allied signatories of the Instrument of Surrender, and of India and the Philippines. IMTFE heard cases against 28 defendants, April 29, 1946-January 12, 1948 and rendered judgments, November 4-12, 1948, against 25 defendants (2 having died during the trial and 1 having been deemed incompetent to stand trial), with 7 sentenced to death, 16 to life imprisonment, 1 to 20 years' imprisonment, and 1 to 7 years' imprisonment.

RECORDS OF THE AMERICAN COMMISSION FOR THE PROTECTION AND SALVAGE OF ARTISTIC AND HISTORIC MONUMENTS IN WAR AREAS

RECORD GROUP 239

The American Commission for the Protection and Salvage of Artistic and Historic Monuments in War Areas, also known as the Roberts Commission, was established by President Franklin D. Roosevelt on June 23, 1943, when he appointed Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts as chair. The commission cooperated with the U.S. Army in protecting and gathering information about war damage to cultural treasures. It also compiled data on cultural property appropriated by the Axis Powers, and encouraged restitution. The Roberts Commission was abolished on June 30, 1946. Researchers interested in matters relating to art/cultural restitution matters will find many useful documents in this Record Group.

In early 1942 various civilian groups began making plans to protect Europe's cultural monuments should the areas in which they were located become subject to Allied occupation. That fall, the President of the Archaeological Institute of America, the President of the College Art Association, and the Directors of New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art, and Washington's National Gallery of Art approached Harlan F. Stone, Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, with a proposal to establish a government commission to protect and salvage European artistic and historical monuments. These individuals also contacted the Chief of the War Department's Civil Affairs Division, as well as the Army Air Intelligence Service, to enlist support.

On December 8, 1942, Chief Justice Stone wrote President Roosevelt to ask his support for a plan to establish a government body that during wartime would protect and conserve artworks, historic monuments, and important papers in Europe, as well as making restitution of such works to their lawful owners if looted.

As a result of Navy Department requests that the commission prepare maps and lists of areas in the Far East containing cultural and historic monuments, the Roberts Commission officially changed its name to "The American Commission for the Protection and Salvage of Artistic and Historic Monuments in War Areas."

During the war, the commission was instrumental in the establishment by the War Department of a Monuments, Fine Arts, and Archives (MFA&A) program to protect cultural materials in war areas, under the Civil Affairs Division. The commission recommended acquiring members already in the armed services who had the training and experience to carry out the formulated plans. Working through the American Defense-Harvard Group and the Committee for the Protection of Cultural Treasures in War Areas of the American Council of Learned Societies (two independent civilian groups established before its creation), the commission supplied the armed forces with over 700 maps of the important cultural centers and regions of Allied and enemy countries, both in Europe and the Far East, on which artistic and historic monuments and cultural deposits had been located and described in accompanying lists. The commission also prepared and distributed lists and handbooks to MFA&A officers in the field to aid them in preparing official lists of sites and monuments to be protected. Commission members gave lectures on the care and preservation of artworks, monuments, and records for Civil Affairs officers during the early days of Military Government schools. The commission's staff correlated all reports from MFA&A officers and made that information available to government agencies, scholars, and students. The commission also gathered information on available qualified civilian personnel to replace military personnel when the school of Military Governments was transferred to civilian hands.

The American Commission cooperated with commissions established in the Allied countries for analogous purposes and with the Department of State in considering problems relating to restitution of cultural materials. It was instrumental in the restitution of identifiable looted public artworks found in the American Zone in Germany to the owner governments. The commission cooperated in the formation of a special unit within the Office of Strategic Services specifically concerned with the investigation of enemy personnel suspected of participating in art looting activities. The commission cooperated with several other federal agencies in investigating German assets abroad, insofar as these assets involved cultural materials, and enemy art looting activities in Europe and their relationship to enemy activities in the Western Hemisphere. The commission recommended to the Treasury Department the establishment of a system of customs controls to prevent looted art from being imported into the United States, and examined the special licenses required for the importation of cultural material.

In April 1944, the Inter-Allied Commission for the Protection and Restitution of Cultural Material (Vaucher Commission) was established under the chairmanship of Paul Vaucher as a subcommission of the Conference of Allied Ministers of Education. Composed of representatives of the varied Allied governments, the Vaucher Commission had as its purpose the study of problems relating to protection, restitution, and reparations and the collection and organization of information relating to looting for the eventual use of SHAEF and particularly of its Civil Affairs Section. This was the agency with which the Commission's representatives abroad were at first chiefly concerned. The secretariat of the Vaucher Commission functioned as a central bureau for information on looted objects supplied by the different national commissions and issued lists of looted objects for the use of MFA&A officers until its dissolution in November 1945.

The British Committee on Preservation and Restitution of Works of Art, Archives, and Other Material in Enemy Hands, generally known as the Macmillan Committee after its Chairman, Lord Macmillan, was established in May 1944, as a counterpart to the American Commission. It differed from the latter chiefly in that its terms of reference limited its interest primarily to problems of restitution and reparation, leaving the question of protection solely to the military authorities. French, Belgian, and Dutch Commissions were formed in the wake of their countries liberation from German occupation.

The Commission's activities were brought to a close on June 20, 1946. It provided for the continuation of its work through the offices for Germany-Austria and Japan-Korea of the Occupied Areas Division (OAD) of the Office of International and Cultural Affairs (OIC) of the Department of State.

Records of the American Council of Learned Societies Committee for the Protection of Cultural Treasures in War Areas Relating to the Work of the Commission

Throughout 1941, U.S. educators and museum officials held many private discussions regarding the dangers that the war presented to European artworks and cultural monuments. On January 29, 1943, at the initiative of Waldo G. Leland, the Director of the American Council of Learned Societies (ACLS), the ACLS Executive Committee appointed William B. Dinsmoor, President of the Archaeological Institute of America, to chair the ACLS Committee for the Protection of Cultural Treasures in War Areas. With the assistance of Charles R. Morey, Dinsmoor co-opted additional members to the committee, including Sumner McK. Crosby (Executive Secretary), Paul J. Sachs, Francis H. Taylor, John Walker, and others who later became involved in the work of the Roberts Commission. Together with the American Defense- Harvard Group, an ad hoc body of scholars with a similar goal, the ACLS Committee was instrumental in securing the formation of the Roberts Commission. The ACLS Committee's principal activity thereafter was the production of maps and handbooks identifying cultural materials in war areas, as well as the compiling lists of monuments and artworks in areas likely to be occupied by elements of the U.S. armed services. These materials were channeled to the War Department's MFA&A Section through the Roberts Commission, with which the ACLS Committee remained closely associated throughout the war.

RECORDS OF THE UNITED STATES STRATEGIC BOMBING SURVEY

RECORD GROUP 243

The United States Strategic Bombing Survey (USSBS), also known as the Strategic Bombing Effects Committee, and as the Combined Bombing Offensive Survey, was organized in November 1944 by the Secretary of War at the request of the President. The USSBS inherited the functions of the U.S. Bombing Research Mission to London, which had been sent in July 1944 to initiate the Bomb Damage Analysis Project in collaboration with British military authorities, the Office of Scientific Research and Development, the Office of Strategic Services, the Economic Warfare Division of the American Embassy in London, and other interested U.S. and Allied organizations.

The USSBS, composed of civilian and military experts headed by a civilian chairman, studied the direct and indirect effects of Allied strategic bombing programs in Europe, partly in order to develop a more efficient campaign against Japan. The USSBS investigated the extent of physical destruction caused by bombings and the effects of bombing on industry, utilities, transportation, medical care, social life, morale, and the will to fight on the part of bombed populations. Although the USSBS undertook preliminary research during the period of hostilities, it was most active after the fighting stopped in May 1945. Its representatives, working as field teams, followed the occupying troops and studied the results of bombings at first hand by observation, collection of documentary evidence, and interviews with residents of bombed areas.

The overseas headquarters of the USSBS in London consisted of a Chairman, a Military Advisory Board, and a panel of civilian USSBS Directors. In addition there were several operations units that engaged in the work of research and compilation.

The London office of the USSBS, which had set up regional headquarters in Belgium, France, and Germany in the course of its operations, was closed in October 1945, and the staff returned to the United States to prepare its reports. Following the survey of aerial bombardment in Europe, the USSBS, up to that time largely a War Department enterprise, shifted its attention to the Pacific theaters and became a joint Army-Navy survey organization. The USSBS was discontinued about August 1946.

For additional administrative information and a complete description of the records of the USSBS researchers should consult the various finding aid in the consultation area in Room 2400.

Pacific Survey

On August 15, 1945, President Truman requested the USSBS to conduct a study of the effects of all types of air attack in the war against Japan. The USSBS operated from headquarters in Tokyo, with subheadquarters in Nagoya, Osaka, Hiroshima, and Nagasaki, and with mobile teams operating in other parts of Japan, the islands of the Pacific, and the Asiatic mainland.

The USSBS secured many of the principal surviving Japanese records and interrogated top army and navy officers, government officials, industrialists, political leaders, and many hundreds of their subordinates throughout Japan. They were able to reconstruct much of wartime Japanese military planning and execution and to secure reasonably accurate data on Japan's economy and war production. In addition, studies were made of Japan's over-all strategic plans and the background of Japan's entry into the war, the internal discussions and negotiations leading to Japan's acceptance of unconditional surrender, the course of health and morale among the civilian population, the effectiveness of the Japanese civilian defense organization and the effects of the atomic bomb.

RECORDS OF THE FOREIGN BROADCAST INTELLIGENCE SERVICE

RECORD GROUP 262

The Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service (FBIS), originally called the Foreign Broadcast Monitoring Service, was established in the Federal Communications Commission in February 1941 to record, translate, and analyze foreign broadcast programs and to report on them to interested government agencies. Monitoring stations intercepted broadcasts of foreign news, intelligence, or propaganda emanating from belligerent, occupied, and neutral countries. At the monitoring stations recordings, transcripts, and translations of selected broadcasts were made and teletyped, cabled, or mailed to Washington headquarters where they were edited and significant parts (occasionally full texts) teletyped to concerned Government war agencies. Special analyses and daily and weekly summaries were also prepared at headquarters and distributed to appropriate agencies and officials. On July 28, 1942, the Foreign Broadcast Monitoring Service was renamed the Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service. The FBIS was transferred to the War Department in December 1945 and placed under the Military Intelligence Division of the General Staff. On August 5, 1946, it was transferred to the Central Intelligence Group of the National Intelligence Authority, where it was renamed the Foreign Broadcast Information Service on November 1, 1946, and the Foreign Broadcast Information Branch on December 31, 1946.

This record group comprises only records created by the FBIS and its predecessors. Records created after December 31, 1946, by the Foreign Broadcast Information Branch (later Division) are among the records of the Central Intelligence Agency (RG 263).

RECORDS OF THE CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

RECORD GROUP 263

The Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) was created under the National Security Act of 1947 (61 Stat. 495), approved July 26, 1947, and established under the National Security Council in the Executive Office of the President. The CIA inherited the personnel, property, and records of the Central Intelligence Group, which had been set up under a Presidential directive of January 22, 1946, to assist the National Intelligence Authority. Both the Central Intelligence Group and the National Intelligence Authority ceased to exist when the terms of the 1947 act took effect.

The CIA correlates and evaluates intelligence relating to national security and disseminates it within the government. It also advises and makes recommendations to the National Security Council concerning intelligence matters and performs, for the benefit of the existing intelligence agencies, such additional services of common concern as the National Security Council decides can be more efficiently carried out by a central organization.

Records of the Office of the Director of Central Intelligence

Agency Selected Documents from the Office of the Director of Central Intelligence 1940-1947 (0263-A1-85)

This artificial series consists of a mixture of redacted and released electrostatic copies, the originals of which are still in the possession of the creating agency. The information contained in these records relates primarily to organizational and administrative matters relating to U.S. intelligence. Many of the documents relate to the Washington Document Center and to the exploitation of captured enemy documents. Boxes 1-7 location: 190/A/49/04.

Records of the Foreign Documents Division

Washington Document Center Translations 1940-1965 (0263-A1-60)

This series consists of translations of foreign documents. The translations done during the June-November 1946 period are numbered 1-43 and they relate primarily to the Soviet Union and China. Among the large translations are two volumes related to Manchurian Airfields (560 pages) and a translation related to Order of Battle of Soviet Forces in Eastern U.S.S.R. (349 pages). There are very few translations of Japanese documents. Among them are three volumes of a January 1941 Japanese Plan for Hydroelectric Development of the Yellow River in China (472 pages), a Japanese Radio Intelligence Report on the U.S.S.R. (52 pages), and Kwantung Army Intelligence Reports on the U.S.S.R. (32 pages). Translation No. 43 is dated November 27, 1946; Translation No. 44 is dated January 7, 1947; and Translation No. 45 is dated January 22, 1947. The November 1946-January 1947 period was one of reorganization of the Washington Document Center and thus the few translations produced. Continuing in 1947 and 1948 most of the translations relate to the Soviet Union and China. There are a few translations about the Japanese or translations of Japanese documents about non-Japanese topics. They include two volumes of Biographies of Japanese Proletarian Movement Workers (January 1947, 295 pages), and translations of reports on Meteorological Data of Outer Mongolia, A Study on Solid Vibrations in One-Story Buildings of Special Shapes, Ice Conditions in the Waters Bordering U.S.S.R., Reports on Communism in Japan, Revolutionary Policies of the Chinese Communist Party, and Military Geography of Outer Mongolia. Translation No. 102 January 12, 1948 contains Reports on Japanese Bacteriological Research, 282 pp. This publication consists of complete translations of 17 Japanese medical reports prepared by Japanese Army personnel between 1934 and 1944. The editor notes that these reports were selected by a board of U.S. medical officers from brief summaries in the Washington Document Center's Special Medical Summary No. 1, October 18, 1946. The reports are numbered 66, 130, 228, 290, 292, 293, 294, 305, 309, 320, 328, 372, 607, 608, 664, 917, and 918. Report No. 320 is Tests on The Survival of Cholera Vibrio on Various Types of Food, by Col. Ishii, Immunological Research Laboratory, Army Medical College, and Army Surgeon Maj. Takatomo Inouye, June 30, 1941. Many of the experiments reported involved mice, rabbits, and marmots.¹² Arranged chronologically by Washington Document Center Number. There is an agency prepared finding aid for this series. Boxes 1-45 location 631/53/13/01.

Files Released in Response to the Japanese Imperial Government Disclosure Act

CIA Name and Subject Files released under the Japanese Imperial Government Disclosure Act fall into two groups: (1) those released prior to February 2005 that were the result of the CIA's initial effort and in accordance with then-current CIA release guidance, and (2) those released after the February 2005 extension of the Nazi War Crimes Disclosure Act in accordance with a less restrictive CIA release policy. Part of the second release effort entailed re-review of materials previously released and, in some cases, resulted in the release of more material on the same individuals and subjects. As of January 2006, the second release effort is ongoing. More material may be released on individuals and subjects in both categories as well as on new individuals and subjects. As additional releases are announced, the second release list will be augmented. For a current list of CIA Name and Subject Files declassified and released under the Japanese Imperial Government Disclosure Act, see the IWG's website at: <http://www.archives.gov/iwg/>.

Researchers seeking release of additional CIA materials on the individuals named in these files or seeking further release of information withheld by the agency from these files should submit a Freedom of Information or other request directly to the Central Intelligence Agency.

First Release

These files comprise documentation from several CIA filing systems and are organized under the names of four individuals and three subjects found in response to search terms and subject matter guidance provided to the Agency by the IWG. The material provides information on wartime crimes; the post-war search for, contact with, and intelligence use of war criminals; and new information on the workings of U.S. intelligence during the early Cold War.

12. Another copy of this translation is contained within Record Group 38, identified earlier in this finding aid.

As of January 2006, this group consists of files on 17 individuals, including biographies, correspondence, reports, memorandums, messages, telegrams, publications, clippings, dispatches, translations, transcripts, legislative records, legal documents, statements, lists, and other records. The records fall into two categories: Axis personnel accused of committing war crimes, or of belonging to criminal organizations during World War II; and former Axis personnel who were used by the U.S. as intelligence sources during the Cold War. Both releases include documentation relating to people who were never accused of war crimes or of belonging to criminal organizations, but who may have been associated with war crimes as victims, witnesses, investigators, sources, or officials.

As additional releases are announced, the Second Release list will be augmented. For a current list of CIA Name and Subject Files declassified and released under the Japanese Imperial Government Disclosure Act, see the IWG's Web site at: <http://www.archives.gov/iwg/>.

The Commission is a quasi-judicial, independent agency within the Department of Justice, which adjudicates claims of U.S. nationals against foreign governments, either under specific jurisdiction conferred by Congress or pursuant to international claims settlement agreements. Funds for payment of the Commission's awards are derived from congressional appropriations, international claims settlements, or the liquidation of foreign assets in the United States by the Departments of Justice and the Treasury.

The commission's organization and functions are defined in the International Claims Settlement Act of 1949, as amended (22 U.S.C. 1621 et seq.), the War Claims Act of 1948, as amended (50 U.S.C. app. 2001 et seq.), and the Iran Claims Settlement Act (50 U.S.C. 1701 note).

RECORDS OF NAVAL OPERATING FORCES RECORD GROUP 313

Records of Pacific Ocean Area Activities

Joint Intelligence Center, Pacific Ocean Areas

The Joint Intelligence Center, Pacific Ocean Areas (JICPOA), had its origins in the Intelligence Center, Pacific Ocean Areas (ICPOA) which had been established on July 14, 1942, in Hawaii as Adm. Chester W. Nimitz' intelligence center.¹³ At the start of 1943, ICPOA was dealing mainly with intercepted messages since not many prisoners of war or documents had been captured. When the first 35 prisoners of war arrived in June 1942, after the Battle of Midway, Japanese interrogators were borrowed from other activities.

The first major collection of captured Japanese documents in the Pacific Theater was made in August 1942 when the 1st Marine Raider Battalion, under Col. Evans Carlson and Lt. Col. James Roosevelt, made a harassing raid on Makin Island in the Gilberts. The documents were quickly brought back to Hawaii. They included plans, charts, and air defense details on all Japanese-held Pacific Islands, as well as battle orders.

In February 1943 the first contingent of 20 graduates from the Navy's Japanese Language School in Boulder, Colorado arrived at ICPOA and began interrogating prisoners of war and translating captured documents. On September 6, 1943, ICPOA was designated a joint Army-Navy-Marine organization by a CINCPAC directive and was given the name Joint Intelligence Center, Pacific Ocean Areas (JICPOA). It was placed under the direction of the Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence (J-2), Joint Staff, CINCPAC, and CINCPAC (Commander in Chief, Pacific Ocean Areas). Once JICPOA became an inter-service organization, some 50 U.S. Army Military Intelligence Service (MIS) Nisei linguists joined. By 1944 there were over 200 translators serving with JICPOA.

Joint Intelligence Center, Pacific Ocean Areas Administrative Records (Blue 644) (0313-UD-1320)

Although this particular series was identified as records originating with Joint Intelligence Center, Pacific Ocean Area, many of the files contained in it were removed from the files of the Commander-in-Chief, U.S. Fleet (CINCUS). In addition to information about the situation in the Pacific Ocean in general and Japan in particular, these records contain much information relating to the war that broke out in Europe in September 1939. As such, the records contain a significant amount of documentation on the British, French, German, and Italian armed forces, particularly naval establishments and aviation. Some of this documentation was provided by the British. There are also records dating to the interwar (pre-September 1939) period, both for Europe and Asia, and a significant amount of information provided by naval district intelligence offices. (Also note that the term "reports of foreign operations" appears to have been used interchangeably with the phrase "reports of air operations.")

13. ICPOA's first officer in charge was Cmdr. Joseph J. Rochefort (of the Battle of Midway code-breaking fame). He was succeeded in September 1942 by Capt. Roscoe H. Hillenkoetter, who later became the director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Many folders consist primarily or entirely of routing slips, cover sheets, and/or cross-reference sheets. Very few documents are dated later than 1943. Folder titles listed below are taken from the original folder titles applied by the navy, with some minor revisions. (For example, original folder titles that used the abbreviation “Jap” have been revised to read “Japan” or “Japanese” for sake of clarity. Similarly, “ops” would now read “operations.”) Information in brackets has been added by NARA staff. Specific date spans appearing in brackets usually refer to the date of receipt, not date of creation. Boxes 1-59 location: 370/43/30/01.

RECORDS OF THE ARMY STAFF

RECORD GROUP 319

The Army Staff was established in the Department of the Army by the Army Organization Act of 1950 (June 28), as the collective name for all organizations responsible to the Chief of Staff, U.S. Army. The Army Staff provides advice to the Secretary, Under Secretary, and Assistant Secretaries of the Army. It supervises the planning, execution, and review of all army programs. Some of the records in this record group were created by predecessor military organizations.

Records of the Assistant Chief of Staff, Intelligence (G-2)

The Military Intelligence Branch was organized in newly established Executive Division of War Department General Staff (WDGS) by General Order 14, War Department, February 9, 1918, assuming functions formerly exercised by Military Intelligence Section of WDGS. The Executive Division was abolished, and Military Intelligence Branch redesignated Military Intelligence Division (MID), by General Order 80, War Department, August 26, 1918. The G-2 designator was assigned to MID in War Department General Staff reorganization pursuant to General Order 41, War Department, August 16, 1921. The Military Intelligence Service (MIS) was established as MID operating arm, effective March 9, 1942, by Circular 59, War Department, March 2, 1942. The G-2 designator was deleted from MID name, effective June 11, 1946, by Circular 138, War Department, May 14, 1946.

The Intelligence Division was established by consolidation of MID and Military Intelligence Service, by WDGS Circular 5-2, War Department, April 19, 1947. It was redesignated Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2, Intelligence, effective March 1, 1950, by Circular 12, Department of the Army, February 28, 1950, confirmed by Special Regulation 10-5-1, Department of the Army, April 11, 1950. Formerly Security-Classified Numerical Series of Intelligence Documents ("ID File") June 1944-1955 (0319-NM-3-85A)

Arranged numerically by MIS number (1-948410) with some additional subseries and bulky files located at the end of the series. The "ID" files, which succeeded the wartime "regional files," relate for the most part to the postwar period; ID numbers 1-205000 are most pertinent for the period June 1944-September 1945. Despite the indicated date period, a number of reports furnish intelligence with effective dates as early as 1942. As with the regional files, the "ID" materials constitute records originated by the Military Intelligence Service (MIS) and its subordinate organizations, together with intelligence data supplied by other U.S. Army, Navy, and civilian organizations and by British and other Allied intelligence agencies. Many individual reports in this series have been withdrawn or transferred to other intelligence collections, usually indicated by a withdrawal sheet. This is particularly true of collections of reports/documents coming from organizations, such as the United States Strategic Bombing Survey; Office of War Information; Enemy Equipment Intelligence Service; Military Attaché, London; Far Eastern Commission; U.S. Pacific Fleet and Pacific Ocean Areas; CINCPAC-CINCPAC, SEATIC, Combined Services Detailed Interrogation Center; United States Army Forces Pacific Ocean Areas; U.S. Navy Technical Mission to Japan; Captured Personnel and Material Branch MIS; Military Intelligence Language School; Chemical Warfare Service; United States Forces, China; United Army Forces, Pacific; British Ministry of Information; United States Army Forces, Far East; State Department; 5250th Technical Intelligence Company and its successor; Netherlands East Indies Forces Intelligence Service; and India-Burma Theater's Enemy Equipment Intelligence Service-Technical. Many of these "missing" documents were moved to the "P" File or the "Bulky" ID File, as well as other series in Record Group 319, and in other record groups. The listing below is very selective. Researchers should use the indexes for more documents, but with the understanding that a document may be indexed but not within this particular series. Boxes 1-10140, and Box 9866A location: 270/10/33/1. Researchers should consult the Master Location Register for boxes and locations of the "Bulky" Files.

For additional information on war-time morale of the Japanese civil population see index (Box 82) under BID number 5502; for more information on Japanese and Allied propaganda, see index (Box 82) under BID number 5503.

211123	GHQ SCAP and U.S. Army Forces Pacific. Summary of Daily Messages, Resume of Situation, and Miscellaneous Information No. 1295; including information that Maj. Gen. Miyoshi told the Assistant Chief of Staff G-2 6th Army that prior to occupation that there was an order from Tokyo to burn all military records and that this order was subsequently countermanded but the General believed that in the interim "most" of the records in Japan were destroyed. Such records as were preserved at the 2nd General Army were destroyed in the Hiroshima atomic bomb attack and the General believed that subordinates destroyed all other records but could not obtain information about records, due to "the deplorable state of communications in the Japanese Army at present." Report by the 6th Army indicates that some documents that are being given to them by the Japanese contain errors, but they could not determine if this was intentional or purely an unavoidable situation.

"In regard to the question as to whether the Japanese have turned over to Chinese all documents having to do with Japanese operations, movements, and activities in the Honan-Hopei area, Headquarters, First War Area in Cheng Hsien...reports that they have received very few documents. They have received no documents which were of high classified categories. They expect yet to receive a few, but it is believed that the number and the scope they cover will be meager. An interview with the Chief of Staff, Twelfth Japanese Army brought forth the information in the form of a blunt statement: "Important documents, those having to do with operations and plans, were destroyed by headquarters of the various Japanese units on or before 15 August, when the Emperor announced that he would accept the unconditional surrender terms. We have placed a call to collect any documents which may have escaped destruction. Those will be turned over to the Headquarters, First War Area (Chinese)." Report also indicates that Puppet troops in the area had thus far turned over no documents. Report by Lt. Col. James R. Geddes, CW. October 16, 1945, 1 p.

Counter Intelligence Corps Collection

The predecessor of the Counter Intelligence Corps (CIC) was the Military Intelligence Service's Counterintelligence Branch (before March 1942 designated the Counterintelligence Branch, G-2), which supervised the general counterintelligence activities of the CIC detachments in the field. Many of NARA's holdings concern investigations of foreign individuals and organizations during and after the war.

Records of the Investigatory Records Repository

The main body of records of the Investigatory Records Repository (IRR) are arranged in two series: the impersonal files and the personal name files. The impersonal files include a number of subjects and organizations; the personal name files include dossiers on individuals.

Intelligence and Investigative Dossiers

American POWs–World War II–Japan 1946-1947 (0319-A1-1840)

This series mainly consists of copies of depositions given by former American prisoners of war (POWs) held by Japan during World War II. The former POWs accuse their captors of war crimes in the depositions, for actions ranging from murder of other POWs to beatings and deliberately withholding food and medical treatment. Some of the depositions describe mistreatment of the captives by Americans placed in positions of authority over their fellow prisoners by the Japanese. The series includes depositions by civilian internees too, as well as correspondence relating to locating the former soldiers, and instructions for carrying out the depositions. Arranged alphabetically by the last name of the person who gave the deposition.

A few records from unrelated security investigations into the background of the former POWs in the years after the war are also included. Boxes 1-9, location: 490/10/15/06.
