British Black Watch soldier killed after Iraq troop move

Baghdad, 29 Oct—A British soldier from the Black Watch Regiment has been killed and three others injured in a vehicle accident in Iraq’s Babil Province, where they had just moved from southern Iraq.

“We can confirm that a vehicle accident, not involving hostile action, occurred today with the Black Watch battle group in northern Babil Province,” a military spokesman said.

“Sadly one soldier from the Black Watch has died and a further three have suffered minor injuries and shock.”

It was the first fatality from the contingent of around 850 soldiers of the Black Watch regiment and support personnel who began a dangerous move closer to Baghdad midweek.

They had moved from their previous base in the relative calm of southern Iraq, following a request from Washington, which wanted to free up US troops to fight in other hotspots.

The first troops had arrived at a new base, southwest of the Iraqi capital, called Camp Dogwood, the Ministry of Defence said in London, refusing to give the exact location of the camp beyond that it was in Babil Province.

A newspaper reporter travelling with the convoy for the British media said that Camp Dogwood was west of Mahmudiyah, a restive town just south of Baghdad.

The decision to shift the troops from Babil Province, where Britain’s 8,500-strong Iraq force is based, prompted concern at home that they could face casualties in the violence-hit area around Baghdad.

US forces clash with Iraqi guerillas in Ramadi

Ramadi (Iraq), 29 Oct—Fierce clashes broke out between US forces and Iraqi guerillas on Thursday at several spots in Ramadi, a rebel hotbed west of Baghdad, US Army and witnesses said.

The battle first started in small hours inside the city as US troopers advanced to some neighbourhoods to search foreign fighters, said local residents.

Abdul Rahman Aysawi, one of the residents, told Xinhua that he saw a Humvee set ablaze “with all the crew inside”, after it was hit by a rocket-propelled grenade.

Iraqi police said guerillas also fired three rocket-propelled grenades at a US base that houses government offices in the city.

The US military earlier said it launched a cordon and search in Ramadi and arrested a house owner after discovering caches at his residence. Some others were also arrested.

It was hard to know the casualties in Thursday’s skirmishes as it was difficult even for ambulances to travel freely in the streets due to the tension.

Ramadi, 100 kilometres west of Baghdad, was another guerilla bastion other than flashpoint city of Fallujah in the Anbar Province. It remained on the top list of restive cities to be retaken before the national elections slated for January.

Two killed in US airstrike on Fallujah

Fallujah (Iraq), 29 Oct—The US military launched airstrikes on the restive city of Fallujah overnight, killing two people and injuring one, witnesses said on Thursday.

The strike flattened a house in Jolan neighbourhood, and the owner of the house said that the two victims were his brothers, a local resident told Xinhua.

US forces have stormed the city almost daily to hunt Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, a Jordan-born militant whose Tawhid and Jihad (Unity and Holy War) group has claimed some of the deadliest attacks in the country since the US-led invasion of Iraq last year.

Schnoor’s wife, Alyce, and 9-year-old son were notified Wednesday night by Muscogee County sheriff’s deputies. Schnoor was a former sheriff’s deputy.

Iraqi militants abduct Polish woman, claim killing of soldiers

Baghdad, 29 Oct—Islamic militants claimed three more hostages in Iraq and the deaths of 11 Iraqi soldiers, as US researchers said 100,000 Iraqis have died since the US-led invasion.

The latest hostage drama unfolded as fighting flared between US Marines and rebels in the restive city of Ramadi and US warplanes bombed the neighbouring guerilla hub of Fallujah amid growing expectations of an all-out military assault.

Adding to pressure on US allies in the violence-torn country, militants seized a British Black Watch battle group and members of 40 Commando as they prepare to move out to Camp Dogwood, 20 miles west of Baghdad on 29 Oct, 2004.—INTERNET understanding. Above all, the legacy of Buddhism has left a special mark on the relationship between our two countries.

The exchange of visits between the leaders of our two countries in recent years has contributed to strengthening these ties that bind us. We recall with pleasure the successful visit to India in 2000 of Vice-Senior General Maung Aye, Vice-Chairman of the State Peace and Development Council and the visit to Myanmar last year of Vice-President of India His Excellency Shri Bhairon Singh Shekawat. These high-level visits have ushered in a new era of friendship and cooperation between our two countries in the political, economic, social and cultural fields.

We are pleased to note that trade between our two countries is growing steadily. However, there is room for further expansion as what has been achieved so far is quite modest when compared to the immense potential that exists for both border and normal trade. In this age of globalization, Myanmar considers that closer cooperation among neighboring countries is essential to meet the new challenges we face.

In this regard, Myanmar welcomes India’s “Look East” policy and its commitment to strengthen economic linkages and developmental cooperation with the ASEAN countries. Myanmar takes pride that we are regarded as your gateway to ASEAN. We will continue to work closely with India, both bilaterally and in the framework of regional groupings, such as BIMST-EC, ASEAN, ACD and the Ganga-Mekong cooperation to promote peace, stability and prosperity in the region.

I come here at a time when tremendous transformations are taking place in both our countries. I am convinced that the changes will be beneficial to our peoples and strengthen traditional ties of friendship and cooperation between our two countries.

I am gratified that I shall have the opportunity to observe first hand the immense transformations taking place in India.

The progress that India has achieved in agriculture and food processing, power, education and healthcare, information technology and strategic sectors is indeed remarkable.

In view of the large strides taken by India in recent years, we have no doubt that it will achieve its goal of joining the ranks of developed nations by the year 2020. As an immediate neighbour of your great country, we take pride in your achievements and rejoice with you. We welcome India’s willingness to share its expertise in a number of areas, including agriculture, science and technology, healthcare, industry, human resource development, defence, and, of course, information technology with developing countries.

We are confident and optimistic that your visit will open a new and more effective global cooperation. It is with this in mind that we are committed to the early implementation of the Trilateral Road Project, which will connect India, Myanmar and Thailand. You would agree that early completion of this road would give a boost to our trade relations.

When we look eastwards, Myanmar emerges as our gateway to ASEAN. You occupy a central place in our vision and approach. Besides the India-ASEAN Summit-Level relationship, we are both partners in BIMST-EC and the Mekong-Ganga cooperation process. Our bilateral relationship is a factor of peace and stability for the region and has an important bearing on regional cooperation initiatives. In the bilateral as well as the wider regional context, it is of utmost importance that we assign special attention to economic progress of the border areas common to us. While we are pleased that trade between our two countries has registered a steady increase, it is necessary for Governments to take measures to remove impediments to trade and promote cross-border connectivity. We would like to see our trade reach a figure of at least one billion US Dollars by the year 2006. The accelerated development of border areas will be to our common advantage. This must be our joint endeavour. At the same time, our efforts cannot be successful unless peace, stability and security in the border areas are ensured.

Some fifty years ago our leaders affirmed the principles of Panchsheel, which allowed for the possibility of peaceful co-existence between peoples. Genuine multilateralism and a just and equitable world order is the key to overcoming common challenges confronting mankind. The world has changed a great deal. Existing global realities need to be recognised and accepted. We are convinced that reform and restructuring of the United Nations should not be postponed any further. A more representative United Nations Security Council will provide the basis for genuine multilateralism and allow for more effective global cooperation.

Excellency, your visit to India comes during our festive season. May I take this opportunity to convey my good wishes to you and to the people of Myanmar. The full-moon day is an auspicious day in the Buddhist calendar as it is in the Vikram Samvat calendar. I am particularly happy that on the full-moon day this month, you and your delegation will be at the most sacred of Buddhist sites.

We are confident and optimistic that your visit will open a new and more dynamic chapter in our bilateral ties. Our vision is of a long-term bilateral partnership with Myanmar, a partnership based on mutually beneficial cooperation, trust and understanding.

Excellencies, Ladies and Gentlemen, may I now request you to join me in a toast to:

— health and happiness of His Excellency Senior General Than Shwe
— continued friendship and cooperation between India and Myanmar, and — the progress and prosperity of our two peoples and countries.

Royal coronation of new Cambodian King begins

PHNOM PENH, 29 Oct — The three-day royal coronation of Cambodia's new King began here Thursday with traditional religious rituals being held inside the golden-roofed Royal Palace where King Norodom Sihamoni will be crowned Friday evening.

Prince Sihamoni was chosen as Cambodia's new monarch by the nine-member Throne Council on 14 October, following his father King Norodom Sihanouk abdicated a week earlier in Beijing for fragile health.

Sihamoni is the second King for the Cambodian nation in over 60 years. According to Royal Palace Minister Kong Sam Ol, as the retired King Sihanouk asked the coronation ceremony to be held in a modest way, no foreign heads of states, special envoys and royal families were invited to the event, nor traditional mass celebrations and parades planned.

He said, King Sihamoni will be crowned only in the presence of about 40 royal family members, hundreds of government officials and lawmakers and dozens of foreign diplomats in Phnom Penh.

Thursday's royal coronation includes traditional Buddhist and Brahmanic rites and ceremonies designed to bring divine blessings upon the new monarch in the Royal Palace.

King Sihamoni will be officially crowned and seated in the throne Friday evening to be followed by a state banquet.

According to a statement from the country's celebration committee, King Sihamoni is expected to announce royal pardons to scores of prisoners at his coronation.

The capital city Phnom Penh is in a festive mood with national flags festooned along the city's leading boulevards and portraits of the new monarch and banners carrying congratulation messages can be seen on government, school, factory and hotel buildings.

To let the whole country join in the jubilation, people will enjoy one day off on 29 October and fireworks displays were arranged for three evenings along with song and dancing performance at public locations in Phnom Penh.

The 51-year-old unmarried King's coronation ceremony will be broadcast live on radio and TV across the country.

Cambodia's monarch dates back as early as to the world-famous Angkor Period around the 10th Century. The current Constitution, adopted in 1993, restricts the sphere of action of the monarchy which is non-hereditary. The monarchy reigns, but does not rule, nor does the King choose his successor.

FA investigate Stamford bridge crowd chaos

LONDON, 29 Oct — England’s Football Association (FA) is investigating the second outbreak of crowd trouble at a London match within 24 hours after Chelsea striker Mateja Kezman was hit in the face by a coin thrown during a League Cup tie.

Police in riot gear struggled to contain West Ham fans at the end of the all-London tie at Stamford Bridge on Wednesday, won 1-0 by Chelsea thanks to Kezman’s first goal for the club.

Serbian Kezman needed treatment, but no stitches, to a cut above his left eye after being hit. The FA said on Thursday it would ask for reports from both clubs and the police, and review video evidence and the referee’s report, before deciding whether to take action.

On Tuesday, Liverpool fans ripped up seats and threw them on to the pitch during their 3-0 third round win over London-based Millwall. The FA is also investigating these incidents.

Hooliganism at English soccer games dropped significantly last season, according to government figures released at the weekend, particularly at matches involving the national team.

Stockholm Open tennis tourney

STOCKHOLM, 29 Oct — Andre Agassi brushed past Jonas Bjorkman 6-3, 6-4 at the Stockholm Open on Thursday to set up a quarterfinal meeting with Spanish sixth seed Fernando Verdasco. “It’s much more difficult playing someone who is over 30 years-old — much more pressure for me because it’s important that I’m the best over-30 player,” joked the 34-year-old top seed.

“It was very important for me today to make sure he wasn’t getting the confidence because when has a little bit of confidence he plays unbelievable, so I felt good about everything I did today.”

The American top seed never allowed 32-year-old doubles specialist Bjorkman to find his rhythm in the opening set as he dictated the baseline rallies, rarely allowing the Swede to approach the net.

He broke Bjorkman’s opening serve game for 2-0 and then broke to love for 5-1. Some careless play by the American allowed Bjorkman back to 5-3 but Agassi made no mistake in his next service game and he clinched the set 6-3.

Bjorkman looked like he had found his groove in the beginning of the second set as he became more aggressive and lifted his serving, but Agassi improved too and broke him in the fifth game and again in the seventh with some powerful returns to make it 5-2.

Bjorkman clawed his way back to 5-4 but Agassi clinched the match 6-4 on his first match point.

“Jonas is going to get his breaks of serve because he returns so well, I was just fortunate to be up two breaks of serve when I lost my serve in both sets. That made for a much easier day,” said Agassi. — MNA/Reuters

Brazilian soccer in mourning after death of Serginho

RIO DE JANEIRO, 29 Oct — Brazilian soccer was in mourning on Thursday after the death of Sao Caetano defender Serginho, who collapsed during the previous night’s match against Sao Paulo after suffering an apparent heart attack.

The 30-year-old, full name Paulo Sergio de Oliveira, collapsed in his own penalty area early in the second half. He died 40 minutes after arriving at hospital.

The match was abandoned as players and officials from both teams joined hands, formed a circle and prayed.

Television pictures on Thursday showed his body being transferred to an aircraft to be taken to the small town of Coronel Fabriciano in the state of Minas Gerais, where he began his career.

Serginho, married with a four-year-old son, was expected to be buried on Thursday afternoon or Friday morning.

“Everything which has happened in the Brazilian championship lost its meaning in the face of the sudden death of Serginho,” wrote columnist Jucu Kfouri in the same newspaper.

Sao Caetano goalkeeper Silvio Luz had told reporters on the field that routine tests in January had shown that Serginho had a heart condition.

“We understood there was a one per cent chance of anything happening,” he said.

One media report said his family had been pressuring him to abandon his career at the end of the season. — MNA/Reuters

Two more South China tigers fly to S Africa for training

BEIJING, 30 Oct—Two South China Tiger cubs born in captivity Friday embarked on a flight to South Africa—becoming the second group of Chinese tigers to learn how to live in the wild in Africa.

One year ago, a female Chinese tiger named Guotai, or “peaceful country,” and a male Chinese tiger named Xiwang, or “hope,” flew to South Africa. The tigers now live on a 500-hectare wild zone called Makopani north of Pretoria, the capital of South Africa, for wilderness survival training.

Born in Shanghai Zoo early this year, the second group of two South China Tiger cubs are expected to reach a nature reserve in the Free State Province of South Africa on Saturday.

There they will then be taught wilderness survival skills, such as catching their prey. The female tiger cub is named “Madonna,” and the male tiger is called “Tiger Woods.”

The training constitutes part of an accord signed in 2002 by the State Forestry Administration of China (SFA), London-based Save Chinese Tigers and Chinese Tigers South Africa of South Africa.

The South China Tiger (panthera tigris amoyensis), from which other sub-species such as the Siberian Tiger evolved, is a critically endangered tiger sub-species native to the south China region. It has been listed as one of the world’s ten most endangered animal species.
