United Nations Day Message

Oct. 24: SLORC Chairman Senior General Than Shwe issued the following UN Day Message [full text]:

Today we are commemorating the forty-ninth anniversary of the founding of the United Nations. As we approach the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Organization, it is time to reflect on how far the Organization has fared in realizing the goals enshrined in the Charter. The overriding objective of the Charter is to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom.

The United Nations plays a unique and significant role in maintaining international peace and security, in promoting international development cooperation, in the peaceful settlement of disputes in conformity with justice and international law and in securing the right of self-determination for people under alien or colonial domination. The international community should pay tribute to the United Nations for its accomplishments and the commendable job it has done since its inception.

With near universality in its membership, it is the only World Organization in its true sense. As the United Nations is called upon to play a more central role in the pursuit of peace and development, it is essential that the Organization acts faithfully in accordance with the cardinal principles and purposes of the United Nations Charter in carrying out its many and varied functions required out of the new realities of the present-day world.

On this annual occasion it will be most fitting to remember that the Member States of the United Nations have pledged their commitment under Article 2(4) of the Charter, to refrain in their international relations from the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any State, or in any other manner inconsistent with the Purposes of the United Nations. This is the foundation of a stable and well-ordered international relations. After the end of the Cold War the need for democratization in international relations has become more pronounced than ever before in the context of the new realities. We therefore feel that in redefining the role of the Security Council or in broadening the definition of what constitutes a threat to international peace and security, strict adherence to the Charter principles should be observed, and consensus among Member States should be sought after.

In recent years, the world has undergone fundamental and dramatic changes. We should not hesitate to seize this opportunity to make the United Nations more effective in responding to new kinds of challenges in the post Cold War era. The time is ideal to build enduring peace through development. We firmly believe that the United Nations is our best hope to transform the noble aims of the Charter into reality--maintaining international peace and security, and promoting development and social progress of mankind.

On this solemn forty-ninth anniversary of the founding of the United Nations, let us reaffirm our strong commitment to the principles enshrined in the United Nations Charter, and rededicate ourselves to strive for meaningful international cooperation in pursuit of international peace, development and social progress, envisaged by the founding fathers of the Organization.

Oct. 28: The United States Charge d'Affaires called on Minister for Forestry Lt-Gen. Chit Swe, and on Minister for Energy U Khin Maung Thein.

She also called on Minister for Hotels and Tourism Lt-Gen. Kyaw Ba. The Minister said "it is the duty of the State to hinder and stop in time a group of unscrupulous persons if they try to cause upheavals in the country. Therefore the State Law and Order Restoration Council will have to take appropriate steps for the welfare of the State and the people."

"The Charge d'Affaires said that as the minister has mentioned that to have democracy, it is necessary to have discipline. She said she had once been in Myanmar and that this time she finds Yangon clean and tidy, there are now wire meshing at road crossings and public is allowed to cross the roads at the designated place only and thus both the drivers and the pedestrians can go about in safety."

When the Charge asked where tourists are allowed to visit, "the minister said there are is no restriction whatsoever for tourists, however, they are required to get permission from the ministry if they wish to visit remote areas in the north and south." There was discussion of Myanmar's preparations to receive 500,000 visitors in 1996, noting that air service will be expanded and Air Mandalay will operate a Chiangmai-Mandalay-Bagan route, with extension to Yangon; Myanmar embassies have "made arrangements to issue visas expeditiously."

"Ms. Meyers suggested that tourist information centres should be opened as in other countries, that she is very interested in Myanma cultural dances and that she wishes to entertain the guest with such dances at her house once in a way [sic]." (NLM 10/29)

Myanmar at the UNGA

Oct. 11: Minister for Foreign Affairs U Ohn Gyaw made an address on behalf of Myanmar before the 49th Session of the United Nations General Assembly in New York [full text in NLM]:

He welcomed the end of apartheid in South Africa. He then reiterated Myanmar's adherence to the Five Principles of Peaceful Co-Existence, and to the United Nations Charter. A National Committee has been formed to celebrate the upcoming 50th Anniversary of the UN.

With the end of the cold war, "we would like to call upon the international community to create a favourable environment that ensures sustainable development.... For most people...the feeling of insecurity arises more from anxieties about daily subsistence than from the dread of a cataclysmic global conflict. Underdevelopment brings about poverty, hunger, malnutrition, environmental degradation, etc., collectively leading to civil strife, ethnic conflicts and eventually, collapse of peace and security...."

The Agenda for Peace and the Agenda for Development are top priority and need equal attention and allocation of resources. "We would like to see a strengthening of the Economic and Social Council in tandem with the call for a restructuring of the Security Council to respond adequately to the new challenges of international peace and security that have emerged in the wake of the cold war...."

Peace-keeping: "It is imperative that the United Nations peace-keeping operations be carried out only with the consent and willing cooperation of the parties concerned and that all aspects of these operations strictly conform to the principles and purposes of the United Nations Charter...."

Disarmament: The negotiations for a Comprehensive Nuclear Test

Ban Treaty should be concluded as expeditiously as possible. The US had extended its moratorium until September 1995. "We believe that such moratorium observed also by other nuclear-weapon States would create conditions conducive to the ongoing process of CTBT negotiations." The review and extension next year of the Treaty on the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons is also important. Myanmar, as a party to the NPT, "has decided to sign the safeguards agreement and protocol with the IAEA...in the near future." Myanmar is also actively participating in the implementation of the Chemical Weapons Convention, and ratification is "currently being undertaken in Myanmar."

Middle East: The May 4, 1994, Israel-Palestine Declaration of Principles is an important milestone towards lasting peace. The transfer of powers to the Palestinians "are also positive steps." "We congratulate the parties concerned for their rare courage and mutual accommodation."

The world economy has resumed a modest growth, but many problems remain. Myanmar welcomes the Secretary-General's report "An Agenda for Development" as "most timely and appropriate." Myanmar's aspirations for an equitable and non-discriminatory new world economic order have not yet been realized. It supports the call by the Group of 77, the Non-Aligned Movement, and the UNGA for "the resumption of the stalled North-South dialogue."

Trade: Myanmar welcomes the successful conclusion of the Uruguay Round. But "we are most concerned with new forms of protectionism, particularly the attempts to impose social and environmental conditionalities that discriminate against developing-country exports..." It welcomes the Naples Summit Communique of the Group of Seven promising continued developmental assistance and supporting the reduction of debt for countries facing special difficulties.

Cooperatives: Myanmar welcomes the report of the Secretary-General on cooperatives. "In my country, we attach great importance to the cooperatives sector as one of the main pillars of our economy and as an effective means of accelerating the socio-economic development."

Environment: Myanmar welcomes the Rio Earth Summit two years ago. "The protection and promotion of the environment has emerged as one of the most pressing issues facing the world." A regional meeting to prepare for the 1995 State of the Environment Report was held in Yangon in July. The Asian-Pacific region "is faced with all the conceivable environmental problems of the world--deforestation, desertification, climate change, etc.... In many of our countries eradication of poverty and greater equity in income distribution remain major challenges. Poverty and environmental degradation are closely related.... Achieving sustainable development will require that all countries, particularly the developed, change their consumption patterns.... We must deal with the underlying causes.... We must...alleviate poverty and provide the basic needs of food, water, clothing, shelter, energy and health care for our peoples while protecting the environment...." In Myanmar, a program to develop the border areas and national races is under way, which will reduce dependence of fuel wood, and drastically reduce shifting cultivation, thus "resulting in conservation and regeneration of forest resources in the fragile mountain ecosystem."

Sustainable management and conservation of forests "have long occupied a place of pride in Myanmar's environmental efforts." Fifty percent of Myanmar is still forest-covered, and allowable cutting of teak and hardwoods is less than 3 million cubic meters out of 33 million hectares of forests, "significantly less than that harvested by other countries in the region."

Population: Myanmar "recognizes the close link between population and sustainable development," participated in the Cairo Conference and welcomes the 20-year Programme of Action. "Our population policy focus is on voluntary birth-spacing to promote the health of the mother and child."

Human Rights: Myanmar wishes success to the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights. "Myanmar has all along upheld and adhered to the basic norms of human rights enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. As confirmed by the Bangkok Declaration, the principles of national sovereignty, territorial integrity and non-interference in internal affairs should be respected by all nations and attempts to use human rights to encroach on the essentially domestic jurisdiction of states should be avoided. We do not mean by this that human rights can be systematically violated behind the barrier of non-interference. We wish to see the promotion of human rights through cooperation and consensus building, and not through imposition of values which we do not share. We believe that even as we seek universality of human rights, diversity in historical, cultural and religious backgrounds must never be minimized or forgotten. We are also against double standards and the temptation to use human rights as a means to achieve political ends.."

Rights to food, clothing and shelter, of peace and security, are "often neglected in the clamor for individual rights." Myanmar is "transforming itself to a multiparty democracy with a market economy," and the interests of its 45 million "must take precedence over the interests of any one individual." Unrest and instability "have no place when the nation is in the process of reconciliation and reconsolidation." Myanmar is in the critical stage of drafting a firm constitution, and cannot allow it to be impeded, or a return to the chaos and anarchy of 1988.

Myanmar "is totally against human rights abuses" and has cooperated fully with the UN Commission on Human Rights, in providing full information and admitting experts and the Special Rapporteur, Prof. Yozo Yokota, in 1992 and 1993. "In deference to the United Nations, and as a gesture of our goodwill and cooperation, we will receive him yet again this year."

Refugees: A Memorandum of Understanding signed between Myanmar and UNHCR on Nov. 5, 1993, defined the role of UNHCR in "Myanmar's border development projects." Myanmar has always sought "peaceful solutions" to issues with neighbouring states. "A case in point is the matter of transborder movement of people between Myanmar and Bangladesh across the common border." Despite efforts to exaggerate the situation, "our two countries were able to resolve the situation...resulting in the repatriation so far of nearly 70,000 returnees to their hearth and home."

Dialogue with UN Secretary-General: "At the initiative of the United Nations Secretary-General, Myanmar decided to establish a dialogue with the United Nations to exchange views on various issues of common concern." Thus, Under-Secretary-General Mr. Refeudin Ahmed, Executive Secretary of ESCAP, "delivered a letter and verbal message from the Secretary-General of the United Nations to Secretary-1 of the State Law and Order Restoration Council. The Secretary-General, in his letter, expressed constructive remarks in regard to the measures taken by the Myanmar Government, and showed keen interest in the developments in Myanmar, particularly the process of national reconciliation and steps taken in drafting a firm Constitution through the National Convention." He expressed a desire to establish a dialogue "with a view to considering how the United Nations can assist in facilitating continued progress towards the resolution of these issues. Secretary-1, while acknowledging, informed the Secretary-General to the effect that a communication would be made on this subject in the near future."

At the ASEAN meeting in Bangkok, "I transmitted...initial response to the Secretary-General. Further to this response, the Myanmar Government informed the Executive Secretary of ESCAP that the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Myanmar has been designated to initiate the dialogue proposed by the Secretary-General at a mutually agreeable date and, in this regard, sought his advice on the modalities of how such a dialogue could be more fruitfully carried out."

"I am happy to apprise this Assembly through you, Mr. President, that I have had two meetings with Mr. Marrack Goulding, Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs of the United Nations earlier this month and that the dialogue between the Myanmar Government and the United Nations is now well underway."

Narcotics: Myanmar calls for concerted international cooperation against the global spread of drug abuse. Myanmar bilateral and regional anti-narcotics activities reviewed, as well as its accession to UN narcotics conventions. "As to those who are expressing doubt about our commitment to eradication of narcotics, let me ask: 'Which country in the world sacrificed the lives of over 190 soldiers with additional 350 wounded in the combat against drug traffickers in a matter of only four weeks?'"

Ethnic Minorities: There has been internal strife from various armed groups since Myanmar regained independence in 1948, resulting in lagging economic development. Since taking over State responsibilities, the State Law and Order Restoration Council "has been giving priority to the achievement of national reconciliation...." Overtures to armed groups were begun in 1989, and Armed Forces suspended military offensives since April 1992. "It is therefore most gratifying that a total of 12 groups having trust in the sincerity of the offer by the government have returned to the legal fold.... These groups are also being provided with the opportunity to participate in the national political process namely the National Convention to shape the country's future. With the Shan State Nationalities People's Liberation Organization group which returned to the legal fold on 9 October 1994, the number of armed groups back into reconciliation process is now 13. They will be integrated in the same manner as previous groups who are participating in the National Convention. To the remaining groups who still have yet to return to the legal fold, the Myanmar Government reiterates its call to them not to miss this golden opportunity but to join hands in building a peaceful, democratic and modern Union...."

National Convention: Consensus has been reached on 15 Chapter Headings and on 104 fundamental principles of the State, as well as the Chapters on State, State Structure, and the Head of State. The National Convention is now working on self-administered areas and the Legislature, Executive, and Judiciary. There is no desire to delay the process. "Anyone following these deliberations closely will realize that they give lucid lie to the allegations that the deliberations in the National Convention were orchestrated by the Government." However, reaching consensus is more important than "debating who is right or wrong, or who won the debate." We will seek consensus as soon as possible.

There is consensus that the new State Structure will be a Pyidaungsu (Union) System. It "will be a genuine multiparty democratic state in order to bring the nation to modern, united, stable, peaceful and harmonious State," with safeguards against disintegration. The three branches of government will "exert reciprocal control with checks and balances among themselves." Judicial rights will be protected, and the independent judiciary will be "the ultimate guardian of fundamental rights. Freedom of thought, freedom of expression, freedom of belief, freedom of worship, freedom to seek a livelihood and freedom of organizations will be guaranteed. There will be equality of status, equality in opportunity and equality before the law...." (NLM 10/12, corrected 10/13)

Government organizations are to extend a helping hand to nationalities private entrepreneurs to enable them to do business competently. It is to be cautioned however, that a group of people should not be allowed to take the lion's share in distribution of wealth in the economy..."

The Secretary-1 "said the selecting of economic undertakings which ought to be transferred to the private sectors should be as follows:--

-- the economic enterprises and branches which are under a big economic organization and which are engaged in economic undertakings in various places;

-- economic enterprises and branches of the organizations which are spread out and are difficult to manage and control and are ineffective;

-- the undertakings of the organizations which cannot operate at full capacity and those which are operating with less capacity;

-- the enterprises and branches which need more modern techniques and machinery;

-- the enterprises and branches which are to be scrutinized for the type and kinds of goods produced by the; and

-- the enterprises and branches which cannot fully make use of the inputs effectively."

He went on to say that the State will continue to own economic enterprises vital for security and administration, or to the State, and those being operated under the policy of the State.

In transferring State-owned economic enterprises to the private sector, "the following methods should be applied:--

-- the economic enterprises which the cooperative societies can take the responsibilities should be transferred to the cooperative societies;

-- inviting shares from the public and forming joint venture enterprises;

-- granting permission for the government and private entrepreneurs in the country to form joint ventures;

-- granting permission for the government and foreign private entrepreneurs to form joint ventures;

-- to privatise small-scale economic enterprises and give them appropriate management."

Enterprises and factories should be divided into major, medium, and small. Small enterprises and factories should be privatised as soon as possible; the question of larger ones should be pondered over and weighed.

Minister for National Planning and Economic Development Brig-Gen. Abel then "clarified points on formation of Privatisation Committee and subcommittees and the tasks and responsibilities of the committee and subcommittees. Than Nyunt spoke, noting that in Myanmar AIDS surveys were begun in 1985; the first HIV positive person was found in 1988; and projects have since been implemented in collaboration with WHO, UNDP, UNICEF, and other international organizations. "He said AIDS control and health education were extensively carried out, adding that different means of mass media are being used for the purpose. The use of the condom is also encouraged to prevent the spread of AIDS. Public education is being undertaken in conformity with the religion and culture. Though the use of condom is encouraged in specific cases, he said, emphasis is placed on loyalty toward each other's better half and avoidance of dangerous behaviour. In the meantime, he said, VD control programmes are being improved."

He cited the help of the Medicins du Monde at centres providing medical treatment to drug addicts, and thanked them for their assistance.

"However, he said, matters concerning AIDS are being exaggerated sometimes for political purposes. Being an enormous problem, there may unavoidably be difficulties in seeking solutions, he said. But some foreign publications exaggerated the matter and criticized Myanmar's fight against AIDS. It is regrettable, he said. Such criticism made at the expense of volunteers will get nowhere, he said. Instead of criticizing, Medicins du Monde is lending a helping hand, he said...." (NLM 10/11)

Patriotic Video Features

Oct. 14: Minister for Information Brig-Gen. Myo Thant met with the Video Censor Board and urged them to remedy weaknesses. The Board, he pointed out, should carefully scrutinize not to permit tapes likely to have adverse effect over patriotism and which are not in line with Myanmar culture, to be released."

Deputy Minister for Information U Thein Sein then said that "Quality films which could give audience the correct knowledge will be awarded and action will be taken against producers who do not abide by the existing scrutiny principles, he said and stressed the need for publishing principles to guide producers. National culture, he pointed out, has been badly damaged due to easy availability of censorless foreign video features at rental shops all over the country and added that pirating and distributing foreign films, without any rights granted by the respective companies, should be prohibited in accordance with international rules which are to be abided by all." history, beginning with Tagaung, Visnu, Hanlin and Srikhestra of the Pyus, Thuwunna Bummi of the Mons, and Vesali of the Rakhines. He noted examples of early Pyu culture (including "the bronze statues of Pyu era which were carved to portray people playing short-drum, flute and cymbals...." He said that "economically...endeavours are being made to strengthen economic bases of the State on self-reliance basis instead of accepting foreign influence and assistance. He noted now is the time when Myanmar entrepreneurs have to safeguard their own national races keeping at heart national and people's interests.... He warned of existence of some foreign interferences and enticements in certain economic fields at a time when a new system is taking shape.... It is essential to guard against deterioration of Myanmar cultural traditions and collapse of character among the youths following penetration of alien culture, he cautioned. Youths should be well aware of the danger that Myanmar culture as well as Myanmar race will become extinct if they think highly of current material development of foreign nations and think lowly of own national cause...."

He discussed additions to the competitions. In singing, in addition to Maha Gita, religious songs ("to enable people to get well acquainted with Buddha's teachings") and "systematically selected" modern songs. In musical instruments, piano and violin are added this year. Moreover, "Myanmar hsaingwaing, ozi and dhobot competitions have been added to encourage group competitions." -- Welcoming the waters of Chindwin River, by Tin Win (Yesagyo). [Paygon Creek sluice gate helped Yesagyo Township farmers having difficulties because of little rain and low river levels in the Chindwin and Ayeyarwady Rivers this year. "In fact, the Paygon Irrigation Canal is of historical significance and was dug in ancient times. This canal is linked to the ancient Yesagyo-Pakhangyi history. Yesagyo, during the Bagan period, was known as Tu-myaung-ywa. It has a history of digging many irrigation canals for cultivation purposes. Some of the ancient canals in Yesagyo are--Aung Swa, Dan-bin, Meinmathay, Thantada, Thanbaya, Kyaysi, Sithu, Chaungpetlet, Hsintada, Pyinmakyi, Ngapyi and Kyaw Swa Canals. The present Paygon canal was known as Aung Swa canal in ancient times. In 96 ME, the two sons of King Theinkhwinmin, Sithu and Kyaw Swa came to Yesagyo-Pakhan region during the Bagan period. During their their time, agriculture was carried out extensively. There is historic evidence that irrigation ditches were dug to grow crops. There still exist many ancient irrigation canals in the area. In 1976, an agriculture expert from Japan, Mrs. Saito, arrived in Yesagyo together with Sayagyi U Maung Maung Tin (MA) to study ancient irrigation canals.... She said the building of irrigation canals at deltaic region at the confluence of Chindwin and Ayeyarwady at Yesagyo is quite similar to 'Deltic Irrigation'. The system of irrigating the land by harnessing water from a lower level to higher ground by storing up water was practised during the ancient times in the country. It is encouraging to note that these rare and ancient canals in Yesagyo Township which have become nearly extinct are now being rebuilt and renovated under the projects drawn up by the State...."]
