

when covered facilities would report both SIC and NAICS codes, off-site auxiliary establishments would report both the SIC and NAICS codes of the establishment or facility for which they perform support services. Thereafter, such facilities would report only the NAICS code of the establishment or facility for which it performs support services. Similarly, during the transition year, on-site auxiliary establishments that report independently from the other establishments in the facility would report both the SIC and NAICS codes of the covered establishment or facility for which it performs support services. Thereafter, such facilities would report only the NAICS code of the establishment or facility for which it performs support services.

D. Which NAICS Codes Will Be Subject to Tri Requirements Under This Proposed Rule?

EPA has preliminarily determined that facilities with the following NAICS codes (and auxiliary facilities that provide support services for them) would report their toxic chemical releases and other waste management activities to TRI. Once final, this list will be used for regulatory and enforcement purposes. As noted above, it is EPA's intent to include only NAICS codes and industry descriptions on this list that correspond to SIC codes and industry descriptions that are currently covered by EPCRA section 313.
