

number makes it easier to assess which credit unions are small and to explain how NCUA is applying the RFA analysis in a particular rulemaking. The Board will revisit the definition of small credit union as necessary in the future.

One commenter thought that, for rules in which the NCUA determines the RFA does not apply, the NCUA should publish details of its determination. As discussed above, this final rule amends IRPS 87-2 to reflect the SBREFA requirement that NCUA publish the factual basis for each certification in the Federal Register.

Two commenters thought the NCUA should go beyond the requirements of the RFA and should undertake and publish a detailed analysis of the economic impact of each rule on all credit unions, regardless of asset size. The Board does not believe an RFA-type analysis is needed for every rulemaking, but notes that it is NCUA's longstanding policy, as stated in IRPS 87-2, that it will impose only minimum required burdens on credit unions.

Miscellaneous Comments About Public Notice of Regulations Under NCUA Review

One commenter suggested that each year at its December meeting the Board announce which regulations would be reviewed by the NCUA Office of General Counsel in the coming year and which provisions in those regulations were specifically under consideration for change. The commenter thought this notice should be published both on the agency's website and in the Federal Register. Another commenter wanted the notice of regulations under review published twice a year and a designated contact point at NCUA for all questions and comments about a regulation under review.

The Board will publish notice of the regulations under rolling review in a particular year far enough in advance of the review to give interested parties a meaningful opportunity for input. The notice may be published on NCUA's website, in the Federal Register, or in other appropriate media as determined by NCUA. NCUA also publishes a semi-annual regulatory agenda in the Federal Register as part of the federal government's Unified Agenda of Federal Regulatory and Deregulatory Actions. That agenda, generally published each November and May, includes contact information and a description of rules that are in process or on which regulatory action is anticipated for the next 12 months.

One commenter thought that NCUA should add the following statement to IRPS 87-2: "Nothing in the Office of General Counsel's rolling review schedule prohibits the review of existing regulations ahead of schedule." While the Board believes that this is a true statement, the Board does not believe it need be added to IRPS 87-2.

Other Miscellaneous Comments

Two commenters thought the definition of small credit union in the Small Credit Union Program (SCUP) should be changed to correlate with the RFA definition. Another commenter stated the NCUA should also provide a definition of large credit unions. Since this rule applies only to NCUA rulemaking and the requirements of the RFA and does not affect the SCUP or large credit unions, these two issues are not addressed in the final rule.

Regulatory Procedures

Regulatory Flexibility Act

The RFA requires the NCUA to prepare an analysis to describe any significant economic effect any regulation may have on a substantial number of small credit unions, currently meaning those under one million dollars in assets. This final rule, when effective, will change the definition of small credit union to increase the number of credit unions receiving the procedural benefits of the RFA and will provide notice to the public and opportunity to comment on regulations under internal review. This final rule is procedural in nature and will not have any ascertainable economic impact on credit unions. Accordingly, the NCUA Board has determined and certifies that the final rule will not have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small credit unions. No regulatory flexibility analysis is required.

Executive Order 13132

Executive Order 13132 encourages independent regulatory agencies to consider the impact of their actions on state and local interests. In adherence to fundamental federalism principles, NCUA, an independent regulatory agency as defined in 44 U.S.C. 3502(5), voluntarily complies with the executive order. This final rule will not have substantial direct effects on the states, on the relationship between the national government and the states, or on the distribution of power and responsibilities among the various levels of government. NCUA has determined that this rule does not constitute a policy that has federalism implications for purposes of the executive order.

Paperwork Reduction Act

NCUA has determined that the final rule does not increase paperwork requirements under the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995 and regulations of the Office of Management and Budget.

The Treasury and General Government Appropriations Act, 1999—Assessment of Federal Regulations and Policies on Families

The NCUA has determined that this final rule will not affect family well-being within the meaning of section 654 of the Treasury and General Government Appropriations Act, 1999, Pub. L. 105-277, 112 Stat. 2681 (1998).

Small Business Regulatory Enforcement Fairness Act

The SBREFA provides for congressional review of agency rules. A reporting requirement is generally triggered in instances where NCUA issues a final rule as defined by Section 551 of the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. 551. Rules relating to management, personnel, or agency procedure or practice that do not substantially affect the rights or obligations of non-agency parties are exempt from congressional review. 5 U.S.C. 804(3). The NCUA Board has determined that this final rule, which deals with agency procedures and does not substantially affect the rights or obligations of non-agency parties, is exempt from congressional review.
