Candidate Chemicals for Possible Inclusion in Future Releases of the National Report on Human Exposure to Environmental Chemicals

AGENCY: Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), Health and Human Services (HHS).

ACTION: On Monday, October 7, 2002, CDC published final selection criteria and solicited nominations for chemicals or categories of chemicals for analytical development and inclusion in future releases of the National Report on Human Exposure to Environmental Chemicals (the “Report”). (See 67 FR, p. 62477–8, October 7, 2002.)

Subsequently, the nominated chemicals were published on CDC's Web site, <http://www.cdc.gov/exposurereport>. CDC now provides the list of candidate chemicals by priority groups that may be included in future releases of the “Report.” Using the selection criteria and the weighting factors described in the above-mentioned notice, an expert panel of outside reviewers and scientists at CDC's National Center for Environmental Health, Division of Laboratory Sciences, scored nominated individual chemicals or categories of chemicals. On the basis of their final point score, chemicals were placed in one of five priority groups. Listing these chemicals or categories of chemicals in priority groups does not imply that CDC has determined that exposure to them causes adverse human health effects. The nominations enabled CDC to learn which chemicals or categories concerned the public and the scientific community. Chemicals in the priority groups are listed in alphabetical order. Chemicals in Group 1 are more likely, but not guaranteed, to appear in future releases of the “Report” than are chemicals in the remaining groups. In addition to appearing in the Federal Register, the list of candidate chemicals will appear on CDC's Web site at <http://www.cdc.gov/exposurereport/candidatechemicals>. CDC will publish additional notices in the Federal Register as needed to keep the public abreast of progress.
