

Primary and secondary recovery operations have been utilized for many years to extract oil from reservoirs.

With continually diminishing United States crude production and increasing dependency on foreign supplies, there is a need to develop oil production from these domestic oil resources. Advanced Recovery Concepts will play a significant role in the exploitation of these domestic resources. New techniques to overcome the problems associated with advanced recovery are needed in order to meet the energy demands of the immediate future. The importance of increasing the petroleum reserves of the United States through the production of oil left in petroleum reservoirs after conventional recovery techniques are used is well known and well documented.
