36:2 Suffer me a little, and I will show thee that I have yet to speak on God's behalf.

36:3 I shall rehearse my knowing from the beginning; and I shall prove my worker just. (I shall use all my knowing from far and wide, and I shall prove my Maker just). [I shall again ask my knowing from the beginning; and my worker I shall prove rightwise. (I shall make use of all my knowing from far and wide, and I shall prove my Maker rightwise.)]

[Blessful the man, that went not away in the counsel of (the) unpious, and in the way of (the) sinful stood not; and in the chair of pestilence sat not.]

And his leaf shall not fall down; and all things, which ever he shall do, shall have prosperity. [And he shall be as a tree, that is planted beside the down-runnings of waters; that his fruit shall give in his time (that shall give his fruit in his time). 1. In the original text, but only in Psalms, reference is made numerous times to “the Lord of virtues”/“the Lord God of virtues”, where “virtues” refers to armies or “hosts”. Here in “Wycliffe’s Old Testament”, these phrases have been changed to “the Lord of hosts”/“the Lord God of hosts” to aid comprehension and to make them consistent with the rest of the text.
